Local musicians dig out forgotten instruments, find community band is "just plain fun"

by James Dukart

It had been over ten years since Karen Hovland had last played the saxophone.

Lois Glaeser had never even played a bass drum before.

Since October, however, the two and several others have been spending their Tuesday nights playing music and having a lot of fun in the Saint Anthony Park Community Band.

Hovland is the organizer of the band, which began with about six or seven members and has been steadily growing ever since.

"The purpose of this band is just plain fun," Hovland said. "Before this, I had not even picked up a saxophone for 14 years. But it all comes back very quickly—and it's a whole lot of fun playing in a band again!"

She said that one of the unique things about the community band is that not everyone can make every practice, and this causes some rather different practice sessions.

"It's really hard to tell what's going to happen," Hovland said. "For instance—a couple of weeks ago we only had one flutist show up. The next week we had five. But it really doesn't matter—it's all for enjoyment after all."

Hovland went on to say that all skill levels are welcome to join, that the band is interested in gaining new members, and that people from other communities are welcome to come play with the Park Community Band.

Indeed, the director of the band, Paul Husby, plays with the Roseville Community Band in addition to leading the Tuesday night troupe.

Husby mixes careful direction, tuning tips and a good degree of humor and patience to help mold a rather entertaining sound out of some twenty-odd players ranging in age from junior high school to senior citizens.

Park execs enter revolving door of public/private service

by Jim Brogan

Two local executives, as a result of last year's changeover in the statehouse from the Quie to the Perpich administration, have just passed one another in the revolving door between public service and private enterprise.

Kent Eklund, 36, who served under governor Quie for three years, most recently as commissioner of the Department of Energy, Planning and Development, resigned four months before the election to take a position with an insurance company in Minneapolis.

Gordon Donhowe, 54, an executive at Pillsbury for 27 years, gave up his position there as senior vice-president and treasurer to serve under Governor Perpich as the commissioner of finance. Like Eklund, he lives in St. Anthony Park.

Both men appear to be comfortable in their new circumstances, and, though seemingly headed in opposite directions, basically in agreement as to the relative advantages and disadvantages of working for the government as opposed to private industry.

Eklund is a political scientist by training. After receiving his Ph.D. from the University of Pennsylvania in 1973, he taught at St. Olaf College in Northfield for seven years. His specialties included quantitative analysis, urban politics and public administration.

In 1978 he ran for mayor of Northfield and was elected. His commitment to city planning brought him to the attention of the Quie administration, and in June 1979 he was appointed assistant commissioner for the Department of Economic Development.

City Council approves Seminary rezoning

by Mollie Hoben

After a public hearing that lasted nearly two hours, the St. Paul City Council needed only about ten minutes March 24 to approve unanimously a rezoning request by Luther Northwestern Seminary.

The rezoning will allow the seminary to construct a chapel-dining facility on the east side of Fulham Street south of Hendon Avenue.

Seven residents who live near the proposed building spoke at the hearing, asking City Council not to approve the rezoning. Six persons spoke in favor of the rezoning.

Lloyd Svendsbye, seminary president, described the seminary's plan as responsive to community concerns for preserving green space, trees and homes.

The seminary's goal is to "create a structure that fits into the neighborhood environment," he said.

Opponents argued that the new building would change the residential character of the neighborhood and that a different site should be sought.

"It is not necessary to dig into an established residential area when there are other options available," said Larry McKay.

The seminary owns the block bounded by Fulham, Hendon, Branstion Street and Bockman Hall. Its plan for the new building would involve moving three of the four houses it owns on Fulham and destroying the other. Houses on the Branstion side of the block would remain.

The site lies between the campuses of the recently merged Luther and Northwestern seminaries. The proposed building, said Greg Haley, architect for the project, is designed as "the focal point, uniting the two campuses."

The seminaries' request for rezoning was necessitated by what council member Bob Fletcher said had been described to him as "a quirk in the law."

City law prohibits building across a zoning boundary line. The site where the seminary proposes to build is divided into two zones, with the five lots at the northwest corner of the block zoned RT2 and the rest zoned R3. The seminary's request was to rezone the five lots as R3, so that the building would not cross a zoning line.

The seminary could build its proposed chapel-dining facility in either zone without city approval and had developed a plan in the event the rezoning was denied. This alternate plan, however, Haley said, would mean six houses would be destroyed rather than the one house to be destroyed under the proposed plan.

The seminary wished to avoid the alternate plan because it organization was a difficult one.

"It's not a pleasant experience," he said, "to go into a legislative hearing and have your department abolished, and then have to go back to tell 65 people that you think you can save it, but it wouldn't hurt to get their resumes ready."

On the other hand, Eklund believes that working in public management is excellent experience. "For me the state government experience was a tremendous opportunity," he said. Not only did it teach him how to

Dist. 12 asks WMB to remove land from list of potential waste sites

Land next to the residential areas of District 12 would be removed as a potential site for hazardous waste processing facilities if a request from the District 12 Council to the Minnesota Waste Management Board (WMB) is approved.

A District Council resolution passed at the March 9 meeting asked the WMB to eliminate from its land inventory the area along the railroad tracks between north and south St. Anthony Park and also the area between Highway 280 and the city limits.

In its request, the District Council cited the heavy concentration of both residential population and business/commercial enterprises and the porous condition of much of the soil in this area.

The resolution stated that any facilities should not be closer than 1,000 feet to any residential area. In addition, it asked that intra-city transportation of hazardous waste materials be done under the same regulations for placarding and containers as those imposed by the federal government on hazardous waste haulers and generators.

The WMB, by law, must prepare a land inventory of potential sites for commercial hazardous waste facilities. Land within District 12 is designated as possible for either processing or storage facilities. No incineration will be allowed.

A formal hearing on the two proposed sites in St. Paul will be April 11 in City Council chambers, City Hall.

A hearing examiner will take formal testimony beginning at 1 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. and continuing until everyone is heard. The examiner may exclude irrelevant, immaterial or repetitious testimony.

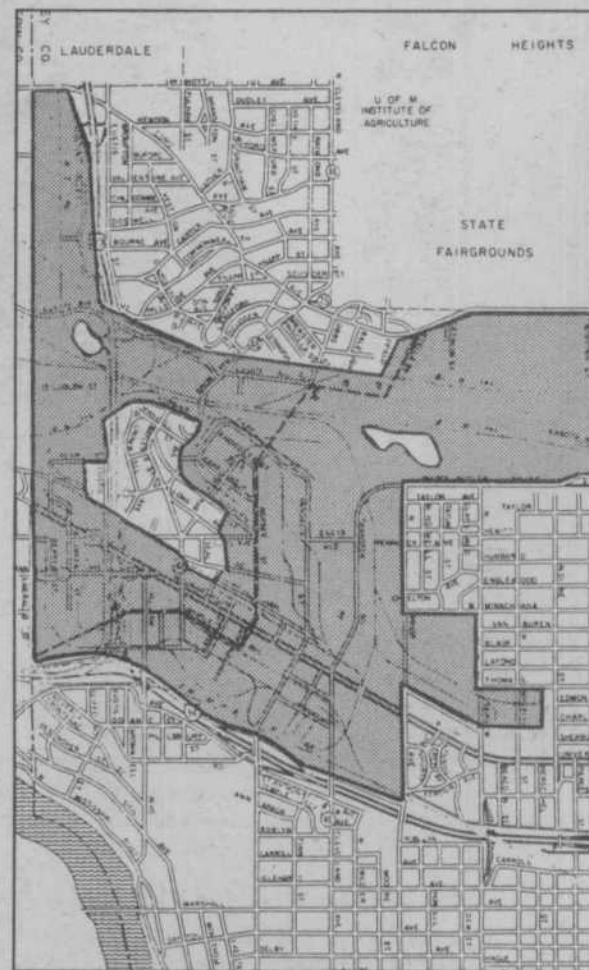

Testimony may concern proposals for excluding or including land within the proposed sites, specification of the type of processing facility to be allowed or other alternatives. The public can make statements, introduce written documents into the record or question the WMB staff.

The official record remains open for seven days following the hearing for any additional written testimony. The hearing examiner then submits his findings to the WMB which makes the final decision on land to include in the inventory.

Designation of a site does not mean that a facility must be built there.

It does mean that if a private developer wants to build a processing or storage facility the WMB will help obtain the necessary permits. The project would have to go through the same city approval process as would any other business development in St. Paul.

Four District 12 Council members prepared the resolution and are monitoring the process. Residents interested in information or presenting testimony should contact Quentin Elliott, Akiva Pour-El, Robert Bacon, Charles McCann or the District 12 office.

PROPOSED AREAS IN DISTRICT 12 FOR HAZARDOUS WASTE PROCESSING/STORAGE FACILITIES are shown in the shaded area above. District 12 is asking the Waste Management Board to remove from the land inventory all of the area west and north of the dotted line. District 12 contains a major part of the proposed site, which extends along the railroad tracks to 35E. Another site in St. Paul covers the Riverview Industrial Area along the Mississippi.

Learn "how and what to plant"

by Gail McClure

"We hope that anyone in the community who is interested in vegetable gardening will attend our April 19 workshop on how and what to plant," said master gardener Libby Willis. The workshop will take place from 7 to 9 p.m. in the St. Anthony Park Library community room.

Willis and other members of the SAP Community Gardens Education Committee have planned a series of three workshops that will be open to all residents for a fee of $2 per person per workshop.

"Our main goal is to provide support for beginning and intermediate gardeners in the St. Anthony Park Community Gardens project," said Star Strane. Those District 12 residents who paid a fee to garden at that site will be able to attend the workshops free.

The program for How and What to Plant will focus on the initial decisions gardeners need to make. "Varieties that do well in Minnesota, planting dates and helpful hints on how to lay out the garden and place seeds and sets will all be included," said Willis.

"We're also concerned that gardeners be given some basic information on herbicides, pesticides and fertilizers," said Jim Beardsley. "We want people to be able to make a decision having some general background to guide them in making their choices," he said.

The committee members emphasized that two hours was a limited amount of time to cover all their areas of concerns. They said they planned to take a practical approach for giving people useful information that can be used immediately as they selected seeds and sets and prepared to plant their gardens.

Two other workshops will be conducted later in the season: June 14, Diseases and Plant Problems and August 23, Preservation and Fall Storage.

Limited space is available in the workshops. Those wishing to register should call the District 12 office, 646-8884, and leave their name and address. Fees, if applicable, can be paid at the door.

In addition to the three workshops, the committee plans a variety of informal gardening activities. These include a bulletin board at the gardening site, reference materials to be housed at the District 12 office, two demonstration plots, and advisors to help answer questions.

If you plan to garden at the SAP Community Gardens site this spring and/or are interested in participating in any of these educational activities, please contact the District 12 office and indicate the nature of your interest. A committee member will get in touch with you.

Does your house "cry" on the inside from excess humidity?

Does the snow quickly disappear from the roof?

Is expensive heat funneling into the attic through unknown by-passes?

District 12's Energy Auditors, Tom and Earl, can give you the reasons for these conditions that are costing you money. By scheduling an audit now, you can use the spring and summer months to do work that will save on next winter's fuel bills.

Earl and Tom will survey your house from attic to basement, show you where and how you can do the necessary improvements, calculate the energy index and answer questions. The audit costs $10 and also entitles you to two tubes of free caulk and free entry to any District 12 Energy Workshops.

Safecracker's life a good combination

by Diane DuBay

Though the infirmities of his 85 years sometimes dim Red Rudensky's ability to recognize familiar faces and recall past events, his autobiography, written in 1970, and the legacy of his humanitarian activities in St. Paul over the past 25 years, keep the story of his remarkable life alive.

Rudensky, a resident of Commonwealth Healthcare Center for several years, spent the first half of his life as a notorious gangster and the second half as a civic-minded St. Paul citizen.

Born in 1898 in New York's lower East Side, Rudensky was a juvenile offender who became a hardened criminal by the age of 22.

He became acquainted with other gangland era criminals such as "Alcatraz Birdman" Robert Stroud and "Machine-Gun" Kelly; he was Al Capone's cellmate in the 1920s in Leavenworth Prison.

Altogether, he managed to spend 35 years in various prisons, jails and detention centers, much of the time in solitary confinement. He escaped from Leavenworth Prison twice (one of only a few ever to do so).

His criminal speciality was safecracking and, according to his autobiography, he and his gang once averaged three midwestern bank robberies per week. Rudensky also masterminded two famous gangland era robberies of the 1920s—the Springfield mail train robbery and the St. Louis bootleg liquor heist, in which 20,000 barrels of government-seized liquor was "recaptured" from a government warehouse. (Rudensky arranged for a winetaster to be involved in this caper so that the gang could be sure that they seized only high-quality spirits.)

Rudensky met inmate Charlie Ward, who later rose to the presidency of St. Paul's Brown & Bigelow Company, in Leavenworth Prison and he credits Ward with redirecting his life.

In his autobiography, Rudensky recalled that Ward scoffed at the braggadocio of Rudensky, who by that time was reputed to be the best safecracker in the country.

"You should be spending your time learning something you don't know," Rudensky quoted Ward as saying.

Rudensky took Ward's advice, managing to learn seven languages during his various prison confinements, and he eventually became the chief copy editor of Atlanta Prison's magazine, The Atlantian.

Rudensky wrote that the transformation from hardened criminal to law-abiding citizen was a slow process, not the result of a deliberate decision on his part, but that the turning point in his life came in St. Paul in 1944.

Upon his release from prison, Rudensky was offered a job at Brown & Bigelow by his old friend Ward. Brown & Bigelow, under the influence of Ward, was, at that time, one of the few companies in the country to offer job opportunities to ex-convicts.

St. Anthony Park resident Cora Peterson, who also worked for Brown & Bigelow for 25 years, met Rudensky there. She came to a party held for him at the Commonwealth Healthcare Center last month and reminisced about earlier years.

Peterson wasn't surprised that Rudensky "went straight."

"In all those years, I only heard of one ex-convict from Brown & Bigelow who went bad," she said. "That's a pretty good record."

Although Rudensky gave up his life of crime, he never gave up his flair for the theatrical. (He once crawled into a shroud with an unembalmed corpse in a prison escape attempt.)

In St. Paul, the new Rudensky became a popular humanitarian. He founded the St. Paul Clown Club, a group that entertained long-term hospitalized children, and the "Red Rudensky Variety Show," a volunteer troupe that still provides rousing professional-caliber musical variety programs for residents of nursing and convalescent homes.

Though the group, still performing under Rudensky's name, is booked solid a year in advance, director Ginny Charland asked the Commonwealth staff to arrange for last month's special tribute to Rudensky.

Rudensky, confined to a wheelchair and in failing health, listened to a song composed for him by Ginny Charland (there was once talk of a movie being made about his life) and posed for pictures with troupe members.

The troupe members, who will give performances at nursing homes in the metropolitan area for the coming year, were especially pleased to remember their founder.

FOR YOUR INFORMATION

CONSUMER NEWS FROM ST. ANTHONY PARK BANK

the new look in loans

So much has changed in the financial world lately—including loans. Now we can arrange both traditional as well as some rather non-traditional loans for our customers. For example, while the usual loan purposes apply, such as home improvement, car, home, education, and payment of taxes, you also can borrow to fund an IRA or Keogh (there's still time before you file your tax return on April 15th). Or this may be the right time to think of using the equity in your home to provide investment capital for a new business, to expand your current business, for a real estate purchase, or to purchase those stocks or bonds you've been watching.

Establishing your own personal line of credit may be the right choice to meet your needs. Checking Reserve is just that. You use your checking account to write yourself a loan for $100 to $4800, simply by qualifying, one time only, for Checking Reserve.

And, when you borrow funds at St. Anthony Park Bank these days, you can take advantage of a wide variety of repayment plans from a fixed rate or a variable rate of interest to a single payment or a full range of installment options.

The point is: if you have needs that might be met by additional funds, stop in and talk to a loan officer. We can help. And we can be more creative than ever before.

neighbor to neighbor

Loans at St. Anthony Park Bank are made possible by deposits we receive from our customers. It's a true example of neighbor helping neighbor. Our highest investment priority is meeting the borrowing needs of our customers. So, when you save at St. Anthony Park Bank, you're investing in the community.

save a tree

Did you know that by recycling just one 3-foot stack of newspaper, you've saved a tree? For millions of years, trees sheltered more than three-fourths of the earth's surface. Today, they cover less than one-fifth of the land area.

You can help by recycling newspaper, corrugated boxes, and ledger paper at the recycling collection station in the bank's Drive-In parking lot from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. on the first and third Saturdays of each month. You can also deposit clean and rinsed glass containers. For details, or a list of other items, call Recycling Unlimited at 698-8119.

more on the new withholding law

Plan now to attend a seminar at the bank on May 3rd on the new July 1st Federal withholding tax on your interest or dividend earnings. A panel of financial experts will explain the workings of the tax and answer your questions. More details on the seminar in next month's f.y.i.

When interests conflict

Relations within a community between institutions and individuals are probably never easy. The needs and interests of each do not necessarily coincide and may at times, in fact, conflict.

Just such a conflict of interests has been at the heart of the dispute some residents of Fulham and Branston streets have had with Luther Northwestern Seminary over the past months. At issue has been the seminary's plan to build a chapel-dining facility on Fulham Street.

The seminary needs new chapel and dining facilities. It also wishes to construct a link between its two campuses. It has selected the land it owns at Fulham and Hendon as the best spot for this.

The people who live near that site want to keep their neighborhood as it is. They worry about the disruption the new building will bring into their lives. They have sought city denial of the seminary's rezoning request—necessary to the project—as a way to force the seminary to change its plan. City Council, however, recently approved the request, and, as the opponents themselves have recognized, rezoning has not really been the issue.

What the seminary proposes to do will mean a highly visible change for the area around Fulham and Hendon. The extent and quality of that change are matters of dispute, but the fact remains that change tends to make people anxious—especially when it's change they don't have power to control.

In a situation like this, open communication is essential. While opportunities for the community to consider the seminary's plan have been ample, several lessons can be learned that may help reduce tensions in the next such situation.

All residents who might be affected by proposed building or zoning changes should be directly informed of District 12 Council meetings where the changes will be presented, in addition to general notification through the Bugle and fliers. Those proposing changes should ensure that information about their plans be distributed to all concerned parties, whatever their stands on the change. Residents, for their part, have an equal responsibility to keep themselves informed, not just of immediate events but also of long-term plans and possibilities.

Students learn intercultural lessons at Isabella

by Ann Bulger

The Environmental Learning Center (ELC) near Isabella, Minnesota, is used each year by many schools throughout the state, but Murray Magnet Junior High is the only one to include multi-cultural classes and interpersonal retreat activities as part of the experience there.

A group of 72 Murray students and 13 adults spent four days at the ELC March 8-11.

In addition to environmental classes, such as whitetail deer and tree identification, and challenge courses, such as climbing wall or ropes, each student attended four hours of culture classes—Japanese, Black, Hmong and American Indian—all taught from a first-hand approach.

The ELC staff was amazed at the spirit of cooperation among 72 kids of different races, economic levels and academic backgrounds, many of whom didn't know each other until this week.

One ELC intern said, "I've never seen kids who gave each other such support and who were so open in sharing their feelings."

Another commented, "I've never had a group so gung-ho over the snowshoe hare!"

The most touching statement came from a graduate student in education: "These kids have made a profound influence on my life. I've been married for a year and thought I never wanted to have any children. After four days with this group, I've changed my mind."

The insights the students gained can be seen in their comments about the ELC experience.

"I learned about many different cultures and how they blend in with American society. When I get back to school, I'm going to try to make an extra effort to help people who are having problems and be their friend."

Hockey thanks

The "ups and downs" of a mite hockey player?... No, just a thank you to Bill and Larry Paist, Stu Peterson and Todd Grossmann for the time and effort they put in coaching the Langford Mites hockey team this season.

Whether winning or losing, every player skated an equal amount of time and continued to improve with each game. Fairness and sportsmanship were always part of the game.

Thanks, guys, for helping provide many an evening of the best entertainment around.

Block nurse needed

I think the St. Anthony Park Block Nurse Program as outlined in the December 1982 issue of the Bugle is a wonderful thing, and I am sure it is fulfilling a real need. Having lived in St. Anthony Park I can well understand there could be a real need for such a program.

At the end of the article you said that data is being collected and eventually those in charge of the program hope to be able to prove that some medical needs of the elderly are not being met by Medicare payments. I sincerely hope that in time it can be proved that this is the case, for I am sure there are some medical needs of the elderly not being met by Medicare payments.

Also, I extend to all concerned with the Bugle my congratulations on being named one of the top local papers. As far as I am concerned, the Park Bugle is a top paper. Having lived in St. Anthony Park long enough to get to love the area and its people—if one can use the word love in that sense—I look forward very much to each issue of the Bugle because it does tell me what is going on in St. Anthony Park.

Heartfelt Valentine

Again this year, the classes of Mrs. Thelander, Miss Uffman, and Miss Swartz at St. Anthony Park School made Valentine's Day a special time to help children who are patients at the University of Minnesota Hospitals. For the past 9 years, these classes have collected over $1,000 which was contributed to the Heart Helper's Fund on Valentine's Day. This year the school children raised over $120 for the Heart Helper's Fund.

Their generous contributions to the Heart Helper's Fund allows us to provide special help to the children in the hospital and their families which would not be possible otherwise.

For instance, we have been able to help provide toys and clothing for those children in the hospital whose parents couldn't afford such items. We have also been able to help families pay for some of their transportation or meals so they are able to stay near their children in the hospital. So, you can see how helpful their contributions have been.

HEADWINDS

Losing my mind

by James Wesley Brogan

Jacob's Aunt Willie gave him a card game for Christmas, and his obsession with playing it has carried him through the winter. It's called "the memory game," and consists of 36 pairs of picture cards, 72 cards in all, turned face down. The object is to turn matching pairs face up by remembering where you've seen them during the course of the game.

It is not the sort of game that any parent wants to play with a four-year old, certainly not if his own memory is turning to dust kittens as rapidly as mine is. I'm the sort of person who is already in the car before he remembers the roll of film he left on the mantle, or the grocery list on the kitchen table, or his hat, or his keys or his... (what was that?). I forget.

There was a time when I could depend on my memory for spelling words, or recalling the date of the Magna Carta or finding my sister's house in Toledo, but that was years ago, before I had so much to remember. Now all those pieces of information have been crowded by others, and the others by still others, until I've got so much to remember, I can't remember which piece goes where. The result is, whenever my memory is tested against a new one like Jacob's, I'm at a significant disadvantage.

Think about it. Jacob only has four years of experience to worry about. I've got ten times that much. It's not really fair. My brain has been at capacity since I turned 25, so that anytime I want to put something in, I have to let go of something else. Maybe I remember to pick up the pork roast and lose the author of All the King's Men.

I suppose a kid's mind is like a new file cabinet, with easy-open drawers, indexes, tabs, and crisp, new, alphabetized manilla folders just waiting for something to retain. The precise location of the picture of the other blue roller skate, for instance.

With my cabinet, I can't even get the drawers open, much less locate any important information inside. After all these years, god knows what's in there.

I try to be organized, but it's too late. I send in a request: "the OTHER blue roller skate, please... may I have the envelope?" There comes a kind of white noise, like radio static, and then a definite answer I simply can't use, like "1215 A.D.," or "Archduke Franz Ferdinand," or "your hat, you idiot!"

I reach hopefully for the card I happen to be staring at, and turn face-up... the blue hexagon. Drat!

Jacob is laughing at me. He remembers where the roller skate is. And now he can match the hexagons, too.

Vilmar Bose, 1916-83: "a reverence for life"

by Susan Barker

He was the man who daily walked his big white poodle through the streets of St. Anthony Park.

Or, as Vil Bose might have corrected me, he was the man pulled through the Park by the big white poodle. If that were true, Pavo was the only creature, living or dead, who Vil let have much sway over his free-spiritedness.

"You should write something about our neighbor Vil," Romeyn Clarke said to me a while back. It was a fine idea. Use some quotations from Thoreau, he suggested, something to characterize this man who epitomized Thoreau's ideals of self-reliance, simplicity, reflective questioning and reverence for life.

And if, unlike Thoreau, Vil couldn't take to the woods permanently to pare life down to its essentials, he would set about planting and cultivating the woods in the heart of the city, right in his own front yard on Hillside Avenue. To hell with proper notions about American lawns! Deep and long was Vil's iconoclastic streak.

During the long February days following Vil's heart attack and hospitalization, I heard again and again from friends, neighbors and so many people whose lives he had touched as he stopped to chat on his daily walks,

"There are so many things I don't know about Vil! Such a quiet and unassuming man!"

Vilmar Bose the architect, the artist, the teacher, the neighborhood presence for over 20 years. It wasn't until after his death on Feb. 23 that we sat down with his wife Jane to piece together a more complete picture.

Born in 1916 in Chicago, Vil graduated from Union College in Schenectady, N.Y., then returned to Chicago for theological studies at the University of Chicago. Fresh from Chicago with a bachelor of divinity degree, Vil moved in the mid-40s to Willmar, Minnesota, where he ministered to a small Unitarian congregation.

Two years later, he gave up the ministry and moved to Boston where he served as executive director of CARE's New England regional headquarters. Later, as state commissioner for displaced persons, Vil traveled to a war-ravaged Europe to work with the International Relief Organization in resettling refugees in Massachusetts. He and Jane married in 1952.

In the early '50s, Vil's practical and artistic side displaced his social and political activism as he took up architectural studies at the Boston Architectural Center.

Following a move to St. Paul in 1958, Vil joined the firm of Elerbe Associates where he gained national recognition as an innovator in life-safety designs for schools, hospitals and other buildings. He left the firm in 1973.

A staunch believer in the co-operative movement, Vil was a charter member of the St. Anthony Park Food Co-op and served on its board of directors. He was an early member of Group Health and supervisory committee member of the Twin City Co-ops Credit Union for a term. In 1968, his political activism resurfaced for a brief time as he organized area precincts in support of Eugene McCarthy's presidential bid.

Following McCarthy's defeat, Vil abandoned organized politics and assumed, says Jane, a deep cynicism toward anything other than grassroots efforts for social change.

Vil gave many hours to volunteer activities ranging from teaching woodworking at the St. Paul Open School, to teaching English to refugees and reading to illiterate persons, to cataloguing material in the Science Museum's library. He taught courses in life-safety designs at the University of Minnesota and worked part-time for several years at Park Hardware.

Emily Copeland, Gretchen Pusch gain recognition for achievements

by Mollie Hoben

Emily Copeland

Emily Copeland recently faced a problem most students never face: what do you do when you are awarded both a Fullbright Fellowship and a Watson Fellowship for the same year?

In early March, Copeland, a senior at Lawrence College, Wisconsin, learned she had been awarded one of 70 Watson Fellowships given nationally to students for study and travel abroad.

Her proposal for the $10,000 grant was to study the work of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees at its headquarters in Geneva, Switzerland, and then to travel to a country with refugee problems to investigate the effectiveness of UNHCR operations.

Just a few days after receiving the Watson, Copeland learned that she had also received a Fullbright Fellowship for graduate study in international relations at the University of Zurich in Switzerland.

With some careful planning and flexibility on the part of the Watson Foundation, Copeland has been able to work out an ambitious schedule for the next two years to take advantage of both fellowships.

She will leave for Geneva in July and spend three months at the UNHCR, and then travel to Zurich in time for the beginning of the academic year in October. The following June she will resume her Watson plan, spending the next nine months studying refugee relief first-hand, perhaps in Pakistan.

Copeland, the daughter of Ann and Harlan Copeland of St. Anthony Park, speaks English, German and Russian, as well as a little French and Arabic.

Gretchen Pusch

Flutist Gretchen Pusch, daughter of Joyce and Donald Pusch of St. Anthony Park, will debut in Carnegie Recital Hall, New York, on April 24.

Pusch, who has been living in New York since 1978, was one of several winners in a national competition sponsored by a non-profit organization seeking to promote new musical talent. The prize for each winner was a Carnegie Hall appearance.

A 1973 graduate of Murray High School, Pusch was active in music while growing up in St. Anthony Park.

Following four years at Boston University, where she was a flute major, and a year doing freelance work in Boston, Pusch moved to New York City, to study with Julius Baker, principal flutist with the New York Philharmonic, and to expand her freelance opportunities.

She is an active freelance musician in New York, while continuing her studies with Baker and teaching at the Hoff-Barthelsson Music School in Scarsdale, New York.

While in St. Paul recently to give a concert and master class at St. Catharine's College, Pusch described herself as a "satisfied freelancer."

"As a freelancer I have more options to pursue solo and chamber playing," she explained. "I've learned a lot; I have opportunity to work with good musicians."

Life as a musician in New York is "a highly competitive life," Pusch said. "There are many really fine musicians. I really do believe there's an element of chance involved in being relatively successful."

New York life is "not always lovely," Pusch added, but she plans to stay there. "My work is satisfying and I have good friends there," she said.

HOW IS YOUR BLOOD PRESSURE?

High blood pressure, commonly called the silent killer, afflicts millions of people today. Too many people, though, suffer needlessly with blood pressure problems that, in many cases, can be relieved through chiropractic care.

You see, the body has a most important need, and that is for a perfectly functioning nervous system. This is so because no organ, tissue or cell can function properly without nerve energy. Nerves control all functions of the body, and in the case of the cardiovascular system not receiving its proper nerve supply, its function becomes altered, and blood pressure problems can result.

Nerve supply to the cardiovascular system comes from the spine and spinal cord. Thus when determining the cause of a blood pressure problem, one must logically look to the spinal column, which is the switchboard of the nervous system.

Many blood pressure problems are caused by misalignments of the spine which interfere with the proper nerve flow to and functioning of the cardiovascular system. That is why Doctors of Chiropractic are so effective in handling blood pressure problems.

During the month of April we will be offering a free blood pressure check and/or consultation for all individuals concerned about their blood pressure.

As Thomas Edison stated many years ago "The doctor of the future will interest his patients in the care of the human frame, in diet and in the cause of disease."

BUYING A HOME COMPUTER

Thinking about buying a home computer, but unsure about its benefits? Is the jargon unfamiliar, the selection of machines on the market bewildering?

Attend one of 2 information-packed sessions for you and your family, led by St. Anthony Park resident Nancy Lorimer. (Dr. Lorimer doesn't sell computers; she uses one in her home and her business, and also teaches computing.)

Learn—

- some necessary definitions of computer terms.
- common features of home computers.
- price ranges.
- what various accessories do.
- types of computer programs (software) and what problems they can solve for you and your family.

The seminar is designed to help you make intelligent decisions about purchasing (or not purchasing) a computer.

Church's plan for housing moves ahead

by Pam Field

The housing proposal by the St. Anthony Park Lutheran Church has turned another corner, as the church's housing committee prepares to choose an architect.

Letters have been sent to a number of architects and one will be selected by May 1, according to Glen Skovholt, chairman of the housing committee. The letters followed a neighborhood meeting on March 7 at which committee members presented the plan to people who live adjacent to the site on Luther Place where the new housing will be built.

Skovholt said the plan includes "possibly 12-20 units so far—designed for independent living. The question posed is what type of structure. It could be condo—or a cooperative type of arrangement."

Skovholt voiced concern for future reactions of homeowners in the area. He said no building plans would go into effect until architectural plans were discussed at future neighborhood meetings.

Bob Warde, who lives on Grantham Street, said he is in favor of building housing for older people, but he does not want the structure to be more than two stories high.

Warde said he believes other homeowners have the same concern because the area contains single family homes and, he said, a higher structure "would stand out."

Skovholt said "The housing committee cannot accommodate everyone's feelings but will still try. We are very serious about building and want to have fall as the target building date."

The next neighborhood meeting will be held April 11 at 7 p.m. in the parish hall.

their profession. Bush fellows receive $2000 per month plus half of tuition costs for advanced study. Nineteen fellowships were awarded this year.

Susan Showalter, former Bugle business manager and a member of the Bugle's Board of Directors, also received a Bush fellowship for 1983-84. She will enroll in the accelerated masters of business administration program at the University of Minnesota.

Showalter, a Minneapolis resident, is a consultant to agencies and firms in the areas of health and planning for the future.

Dorothy Burrington, nurse practitioner at Group Health's Como Clinic, recently celebrated 25 years as a nurse with Group Health. She has been at the Como Clinic since it opened as the first Group Health facility. Burrington works in the pediatrics department.

St. Anthony Park resident Mark Granovsky was one of two swimmers from Como Park High School who placed in the state high school swim meet in March.

Granovsky, a junior at Como, placed second in the 200-yard freestyle, 3 seconds behind the winner, and second in the 500-yard freestyle, 10 seconds behind the winner. In both races, Jeff Lee, a junior from Richfield High School, was the winner, so Mark is looking forward to the challenge of racing him again next year.

Judy Larson, daughter of Myrtle and Edgar Larson of St. Anthony Park, is a member of the cast of "Plain Hearts," a play to be presented in April by the Minnesota History Theater. Larson, who has both dramatic and musical roles in the production, appeared recently on the Prairie Home Companion Show on KSJN radio.

Georgette Pfannkuch, St. Anthony Park resident, is directing two plays for Les Amis du Theatre, a French-language theatre.

The plays, "English as It Is Spoken," a one-act comedy, and "A Door Has to Be Either Open or Closed," a romance, will be presented April 8, 9 and 10 at Hamline University.

David Fan, St. Anthony Park resident, is an actor in the plays.

Tickets are $4 for adults and $2 for students and senior citizens. For reservations, contact Claudine Le Chartier at 646-3407.

Library group committees set

Two new committees were established by the St. Anthony Park Branch Library Association at its meeting on March 7: a physical planning committee and a tax-exempt status committee.

The Physical Planning Committee will work on a long-range, comprehensive plan for improving the Community Interest Room and the areas leading to it. Some of the members of this committee, which is chaired by Robin Lindquist, are Philip and Susan Broussard, Patricia Murphy, Mary Mantis, and Warren Gore. People who would like to help with the work of this committee can call Robin Lindquist or leave their names with the librarian.

Gerald McKay will chair a committee working on gaining tax-exempt status for the Association.

Councilman Fletcher to Speak

On Tuesday, April 12, City Councilman Bob Fletcher will be present at the SAPA dinner meeting to enlighten us on current city issues.

Topics for the evening will include his experiences as a new council member, cable TV, Parks and Recreation proposals, the Mayor's self-reliant city concept, the Civil Service controversy, plus the Council's response to budget constraints, both long and short range. A question and answer period will conclude the program. Plan to attend and learn first-hand about our city.

DATE: April 12, 6 p.m. dinner; program to follow

PLACE: United Church of Christ

COST: $4.25 members; $4.75 non-members

1982-83 Board of Directors: President, Tom Rohricht; 1st Vice President, Mary Warpeha; 2nd Vice President, Gail Dennis; Secretary, Cindy Ahlgren; Treasurer, Steve Townley; At-Large Directors, Steve Wellington, Dave Maschwitz and Charlie Flinn. Address: P.O. Box 80062, Como Station, St. Paul, Minnesota 55108.

If you have not been called by Friday, April 1, call Bridges (645-6946) for reservations. Babysitting is available upon request when making reservations. Cancellations must be made before 6 p.m., April 2, or you will be billed for dinner costs. Call Bridges or Peg Van Zanden (644-7451) to cancel.

SAPA Board to Meet

On April 4 SAPA Board members will meet at the home of Brad Rinsem, 1389 Grantham, at 7:30 p.m.

Would You Like a Job with SAPA?

We will need a new reservations caller for our membership meeting dinners beginning in August.

Linda Foster, our able caller for two years, has told us she will be unable to call next year.

The description of the caller's duties is as follows:

1. is a paid position
2. involves contacting 350-375 members by phone the first week of each month (1 or 2 calls each)
3. three evenings per month
4. months of August through May

This position offers a person a chance to do a community service and receive monetary payment.

Contact Mary Warpeha (644-6990) evenings if you are interested.

You Can Help by Being Prepared

We need your help! Our reservations caller Linda Foster calls 350 homes once (or twice if she can't reach you initially) each and every month we have a meeting.

We can all help Linda out by being prepared. Linda calls Sunday through Thursday before each meeting. This puts her calling into the first week of each month.

Your quick response of a YES or NO to her inquiry would really lessen her time involvement.

It also helps if YOU look ahead to know the topic or speaker for the meeting. We try hard to get all this information to you ahead of time through the BUGLE.

When you read the BUGLE, make a mental note of the topic and date. Be ready with a YES or NO for Linda. Thank you!

talization, I went next-door to let Pavo out for some air and relief. In Vil's room, I scanned the shelves of books ranging from philosophy, religion and psychology, to art, anthropology, yoga and the natural world. I saw his ledge of thriving plants, his beloved woodburning stove and the wood carvings that, in the last years, had taken much of his attention.

That week, I was especially moved by my favorite carving of Vil's, a relief depicting a man and woman dancing joyously and stubbornly on the feet of an inverted elephant (a symbol, Vil once explained, of misfortune, of fate). And I thought then of Vil's own stubbornness in living life to the fullest to the end, despite the increasing chest pains, despite his diabetes.

"I'm fine," he would insist and switch the subject, though we were sure he was feeling lousy. To the end he was like that, refusing to give his life over to despair, refusing to give his life over to unnatural medical intervention.

For four years as next-door neighbors, we received the bounty of Vil's generosity and his knowledge about gardening, carpentry, aesthetics and care for life. There were the gifts of fruit and vegetables, his nurturing interest in our work, the gifts to our son: the paint set, the fantastic specimen of a golden beetle, the book on pond life. There was the gift of recently-finished architectural plans we'd twisted his arm for in planning a major remodeling project. About payment for that work?

"Well, we'll see," he said as he cocked his fleecy cap and buttoned one of his aging and well-preserved sportcoats. "I want to live as close to the poverty line as I can." A week later he died.

There is, in Wisconsin, Vil and Jane's beloved "up country" place. And what a wonderful place! The old log cabin and barn, Vil's old truck, the stacked wood, the garden, the acres of lake and stream and woods.

Driving down the road toward the cabin you see Vil's hand-lettered sign Freilassing. It's German for emancipation. Vil was 67 at the time of his death.

Councilman's duties leave no time for mystery chess game

by Val Drogus

Is the snow piled four feet deep in your alley? Is the street light in front of your house burned out? Are you concerned about a new bar being licensed on your street?

Your city council member most likely will be one of the people you call to complain about neighborhood problems like these.

Fourth Ward Councilman Bob Fletcher (IR) responds to all these complaints from behind the large desk in his seventh-floor office in City Hall.

At his left hand are stacks of little pink memo slips. These are the telephone calls he will spend about six hours a week answering. Behind him sits a new Apple II computer he uses to record complaints and action taken or to address mailing labels.

"About half my work here is reactive," Fletcher says, gesturing towards the phone messages and the day's incoming mail. There is a notice of an Easter egg hunt, an agenda for a hazardous waste site task force meeting and a personal letter in blue ink on lined paper ripped from a spiral notebook, among other things.

"Getting back to the public is important," he adds.

"Anybody who calls, we always get back to them," agrees Pat DeVane, Fletcher's administrative aide. DeVane and Fletcher work as a team to keep up with the enormous amount of public relations work that's part of a city council member's job.

Constituent complaints are heard first by DeVane, who either handles them himself or passes them on to Fletcher, depending on the action required.

Though it is time consuming, direct contact with constituents is only part of Fletcher's job. City council meets on Tuesday and Thursday mornings to act on legislation affecting St. Paul.

These meetings can last from half an hour to over two hours when a public hearing on a controversial issue is scheduled. Many of the meetings are formalities to pass the ordinances already decided upon in the smaller committees the council members sit on.

Fletcher is a member of four of the smaller committees: the finance, public works, energy and development committees. He chairs the development committee. He spends about seven hours in committee meetings each week.

But much of the real work for committee members goes on outside the meetings, in their offices on afternoons or weekends. Each member must keep up with the background information necessary to make enlightened decisions on the problems discussed in committee.

Fletcher used the cable television proposal being studied in the energy committee as an example of the reading he must do. He walked over to the bookshelf by his office door and pointed to three separate proposals by cable companies that he must study. One proposal is eight volumes long, while the others are each four volumes.

John Connelly, head of the city council research staff, can help council members with this overload of reading. His staff collects and digests some of the data and provides neutral research materials to council members.

Lobbyists are Fletcher's other source of information for his decisions. In a typical week he spends about 10 hours talking to the staff members of various projects around town. Sometimes they're there to sway his vote, Fletcher said; other times they're there to give updates on progress of their project.

Last week one morning Mike Conlan, a representative of the Boisclair Corp., dropped by to invite Fletcher to a reception at the Landmark Center for the Galtier Plaza development. Conlan and Fletcher spent about half an hour discussing construction plans, financing and photos of the development.

After such a meeting, Fletcher may walk out to his secretary's desk and pick up another handful of messages. If he has time he will make a few of his 10 daily phone calls then. More often he must add the phone messages to the growing pile on his desk.

Since Fletcher's ward contains five districts, more than any other council member, many of his evenings are taken up by the community meetings he must attend.

He spends about eight hours a week attending community meetings, which include the district meetings as well as meetings for some of his favorite projects, such as keeping the libraries open.

All this doesn't leave Fletcher much opportunity to make a move on the marble chess set sitting on the pedestal table by his office window.

The former policeman has been playing an unidentified opponent since his move to City Hall last June. It may be a night janitor who comes and moves the black pieces, Fletcher said. But he suspects it's Councilman Nicosia.

Right now it's white's turn, and Fletcher needs 15 minutes to plan a move. But he can't seem to find the time.

Mexico trip highlights upcoming activities

by Ann Bulger

Spanish students from Central, Como Park and Highland high schools are taking a trip to Mexico, April 14-April 28. The students and four chaperones will spend six days in Mexico City, five days in Guadalajara and three days in Puerto Vallarta.

Students will live with families in Guadalajara and engage in whatever activities their families do. They will attend school with their host brothers and sisters.

Most of the students going have studied Spanish for three years and have been planning this trip for one year. They have raised money through candy sales and odd jobs. Leaders are Spanish teachers Dick Milles from Central and Kiki Gore from Harding, formerly from Como Park.

A course on Parenting Teenagers will be given at Como Park High School on eight Wednesdays, beginning on April 6, 7-8:30 p.m. Fee is $16 for an individual, $30 per couple. Pre-registration is required; call 489-4523. The course will cover understanding teenage development, self confidence as a parent, communicating more effectively, helping teens to be more responsible, becoming aware of chemicals, examining attitudes toward sexual behavior, letting go and handling stress.

The Como Parents' Group will sponsor a "Bakeless Bake Sale" to buy reading books for the English classes. Anyone wishing to make a donation equivalent to what would be spent baking and buying at a bake sale, may send it to the school, 740 W. Rose Ave.

Como Park High School will hold the Junior-Senior Prom at Town Square on Saturday, April 16. Over 100 couples are expected to attend.

Como parent Bob Ratliff is representing the school at the PERC meetings (Planning, Evaluating, & Reporting, Central Committee). John Zupfer is the representative on the Citizens' Budget Review Committee, with Judy Brown as alternate.

The Red Cross Bloodmobile will visit Como Park on Wednesday, April 27. Anyone interested in donating blood should call the school, 487-2001.

manage under budgetary and political duress, but it gave him "a lot of visibility" as well.

"If you can manage in the public sector," he concluded, "management in the private sector has to be a lot easier."

Donhowe, for his part, finds the converse to be true also. His experience at Pillsbury, he believes, prepared him well for his duties as finance commissioner. Both Donhowe and Eklund, in fact, find a considerable degree of continuity between their former and their present positions. In terms of the skills necessary, the hours expended and the competence required, neither of them notices any fundamental difference.

The major contrast, they agree, is that the lines of authority and control are much clearer in private industry. In the public arena, these tend to be blurred or disrupted by political considerations.

"The biggest difference is that in the public side there is such a diffusion of power," Donhowe said. "Even though the governor is considered quite powerful, the position is not really comparable to the chief executive officer of a private corporation."

"He has the same freedom to select policy," Donhowe explained, "but in carrying it out, he has lots more people to persuade." In addition to his own staff, there are committee chairs and legislators, pressure groups, unions and other political constituencies.

After five years in the public eye, Eklund is happy to be a private citizen again. For Donhowe, however, the publicity is novel enough to be refreshing. It pleases him to see much of the political maneuvering as a species of entertainment.

"There is a richer texture to the public side," he suggested, "a sort of political theater going on all the time. It's fun to watch," he said, "though it can be exasperating, too."

Although the texture may be richer in governance than in private industry, it is no secret that the executives themselves are not. Pay scales, especially for senior positions, are significantly lower, causing some analysts to believe that the best qualified managers cannot afford to work for the government.

Donhowe personally has been cited more than once in the daily newspapers as an example of the financial sacrifice required for a high-level business executive to take a comparable position in government.

Kent Eklund

His own concern, however, is less with the discrepancy between pay scales in the public versus the private sector than with those within government itself.

"What is bad," Donhowe said, "is that the state of Minnesota pays less than some counties or cities." He mentioned, for example, that the welfare chief for Hennepin County is paid more than the state commissioner.

"The state," he argues, "should be able to attract the best people at least in the public sector." As it happens, a bill has recently been proposed in the legislature granting top state officials' salary increases ranging from 5 to 56 percent. Governor Perpich is understood to be strongly in favor of it, perhaps as a partial answer to this problem.

Given the decided advantages he enjoyed as a highly-paid executive at Pillsbury, however, Donhowe's motivation for moving to state government is difficult even for him to pinpoint. He mentioned a commitment to the idea of public service as one factor, as well as a feeling he was reasonably well prepared to handle the job.

But it was not something he had thought about a great deal, he said. When the offer was made, he considered it for awhile and then just "decided to go ahead."

"I thought it would probably be a good idea for me to be re-potted, anyway," he explained.

Buffalo chip sale

The Como Zoological Society will hold its annual "buffalo chip sale" on April 23.

The sale offers gardeners natural fertilizer provided by Como Zoo's barn animals.

The sale will take place in the barn area next to the new cat exhibit, from 8:30 a.m. through 4 p.m. A $1 donation is requested for each five gallons of buffalo chips. Bring your own containers; Zoological Society members and docents will be glad to shovel the chips into your containers.

For further information, contact Bob Neeser, chips chairman, at 690-4047.

Snyder-Cleland house offers pleasant legacy of local history

Note: After 45 years as the Cleland family home, the house described here was sold in March. Hazel Cleland is now living at the Presbyterian Home on Lake Johanna.

by Polly Cleland Helmke

When my parents, Spencer and Hazel Cleland, bought the house at 2090 Commonwealth Ave. in 1937, they acquired with it a pleasant legacy of local history.

The Snyder house, as they called it, and the Green house, diagonally across the street at 2095 Commonwealth Ave., had been built at the same time from the same set of plans. They were most likely the first houses in this part of St. Anthony Park (north of Como Avenue), and each had been the long-term home of a prominent member of the University faculty—Dr. Harry Snyder, head of the department of soils and chemistry, and Professor Samuel Green, head of the departments of forestry and horticulture.

The Snyder and Green houses belong to an architectural style known as Queen Anne, which dominated American middle-class residential building in the 1880s and 1890s. The high-pitched roof, irregular gables, and asymmetrical design were characteristic, but the two houses were very plain versions of a style which came to be considered synonymous with "Victorian" architecture. (Queen Victoria's reign was from 1837 to 1901, and the term really covers a wide variety of architectural styles.) They lacked the decorative turrets, fanciful gables, bay windows, and porches which can be seen on a number of Queen Anne houses south and west of Como Avenue.

These two houses were apparently built about 1887, though the exact facts were never uncovered by my father.

He did find clues, and he wrote them down as he went along. In May, 1938, for example, he recorded a conversation with T.A. Hoverstad, who had come by as Dad was working in the yard. They talked about Professor Willet M. Hays, who had been an early resident of the house, and Hoverstad expressed surprise that Hays had owned it only a short time, from May, 1891, to January, 1892.

Hays, a hard-driving, imaginative pioneer in plant breeding studies, later became Chief of the Division of Agriculture, University of Minnesota, and still later Assistant Secretary of Agriculture in the administration of President Theodore Roosevelt.

Hays went to North Dakota briefly in 1892, and the house was sold to Dr. and Mrs. Snyder, who owned it until 1916.

Mrs. Snyder is credited in Dad's notes with being the moving force in a number of changes made in the house about 1904.

About 1904, a fire in the kitchen prompted Mrs. Snyder to plan extensive changes. The kitchen was extended to the east, and two pantries and numerous cupboards were worked in. A laundry and vegetable cellar were placed in the new basement below the addition, and the basement stairway was relocated with a door to the outside. The former basement stairway was closed off and an attractive china cabinet was added to fill the space. My parents dubbed this the "Suez Canal" because it connected the front hall and the dining room.

A major item in this remodeling was the addition of the large side porch. Professor James Drew, himself an early resident of the Park, related to my father the talk that went on when it became known that the Snyders were going to build this porch. Such a thing was unheard of. The place for a big porch was by the front door, so people could see it and use it. Back by the side of the house—such an idea! Such a waste! But that porch has been a prized part of the house during our family's tenure, the scene of countless family meals, extended family gatherings and parties, and a cool place to sleep in summer.

Several lovely arches grace the curving side porch. Since these arches are repeated in the small front and back porches, it is likely that those porches were also part of Mrs. Snyder's plan for beautifying the house.

Oddly, it was also a fire which produced the only major alteration in the Green house. During World War II the attic of this house was divided into small apartments and rented out to wives of Navy men stationed on the St. Paul campus. One day a spectacular fire in the attic caused the death of a baby and totally destroyed these quarters. When the damage to the house was repaired, third floor living space was eliminated. The result was a much lower roof line. Today one has to look twice to see the resemblance between the two houses.

Queen Anne houses in their early days were painted two or three colors, often dark earth tones, or sometimes green and yellow. Chipped shingles indicate that 2090 may have been dark red many years ago, before white came in as the universal, almost obligatory house paint color. In 1980, my brothers and my sister and I, now responsible for the upkeep of Mother's house, chose to have it painted in colors more nearly resembling those typical of its early days.

With the softening effect of the many gracious elm trees gone, this seemed like a good time to make a change.

The Clelands have lived in the "Snyder" house for 45 years, nearly twice as long as the Snyders. I hope the house has a long future, and I suspect it will be named, for historical reference, the Snyder-Cleland house.

EQUAL HOUSING OPPORTUNITY

$2,000 Off.

$2,000 Off Your Federal Taxable Income When You Put $2,000 In Our 10.7% IRA.

More precisely, our 10.7% 3½-year Individual Retirement Account certificate.

Or, for a shorter term, our 10.2% 18-month IRA certificate.

$2,000 in either one by April 15 will entitle you to reduce your 1982 federal taxable income by an equal amount, resulting in considerable federal tax savings.

For example, if you're in the 30% bracket, a $2,000 deposit could save you as much as $600. 40% bracket, $800. 50% bracket $1,000.

Obviously, if your deposit is less than $2,000, your tax savings will be less.

But there's more to this offer than taxes.

$2,000 in our 10.7% IRA will also add $858 to your retirement fund in just three and a half years.

$2,000 in our 10.2% IRA will earn $321 in only eighteen months.

An exceptional return by any standard and guaranteed for the full term of your investment.

A bridge built to hold

by Richard Bale

Mike Poor is very proud of his popsicle-stick bridge.

He should be—it supported 2,250 pounds (enough to hold up a 1983 Ford Escort), over a 10-inch span when tested at the University of Minnesota's Aeronautical Engineering Department.

Poor, a senior at Como Park High School who lives in St. Anthony Park, built the bridge as part of a physics project. It was constructed out of 130 popsicle sticks and one ounce of white glue.

According to Jerry Wipple, the physics instructor, Poor's 11-inch-long bridge supported ten times the weight of the average bridge built this year and smashed last year's record of 490 pounds held by John Reinhardt.

"Mike's superior design (over other bridges) accounts for its strength," said Wipple.

"It's based on the triangle principle, which gives the best weight distribution," said Poor, who plans to attend the Institute of Technology at the University of Minnesota next fall.

Imitating the criss-cross supports he had seen in extension bridges, Poor glued slanted vertical sticks, forming little triangles, between the base of the bridge and the top surface, where the weight was applied.

The base consisted of rows of sticks placed sideways, with the overlapping ends glued together in a laminated fashion.

Prof. Theodor Krauthammer, who teaches civil engineering at the University, credited the bridge's surprising strength with the laminated-base design. He said Poor stumbled upon a very successful design used in the construction industry, which has the trade name GLULAM.

GLULAM is the lamination of wood boards used for large sweeping wooden arches in churches, domes and bridges.

According to Krauthammer, wood boards can support a surprising amount of weight when they are placed sideways like a steel beam. He said Poor's design used the GLULAM principle by placing the popsicle sticks sideways and laminating their ends together to form the base.

When first tested at Como Park High School, the bridge refused to yield to a load of 858 pounds, all the weights the school's gym could muster.

Poor's nearest competitor, a bridge built by Nancy Braun, held out at the 858-pound level for almost five seconds before succumbing with a crash of popsicle sticks.

Mike Poor

Then the surprised physics class watched as Poor's bridge stubbornly supported Poor himself and two friends who climbed on the stacked-up weights. That's when Poor and Wipple decided to take the bridge to the University to be tested.

With the rapidly advancing technology in building popsicle-stick bridges and the limited testing facilities at Como Park, Wipple said he will have to toughen the requirements for next year.

He said he doesn't want to be testing all of next year's bridges on a hydraulic press at the University.

Concert to feature area composers

by Robin Nelson

Three members of the Minnesota Orchestra, Deborah Serafini, violinist, Eiji Ikeda, violist, and Mina Fisher, cellist, and Twin Cities pianist Thelma Hunter will perform a program featuring a work by Minnesota composer Stephen Paulus and the Quartet in G Minor by Johannes Brahms at the Music in the Park concert April 10.

The program will also include the premiere of a solo cello work, "Sonatine" by Minnesota composer, Dale Newton. A grant from the Metropolitan Arts Council to the St. Anthony Park Arts Forum is enabling the Music Series to continue premiering and playing new works by Minnesota composers.

Paulus' composition, "Banchetto Musicale" (Musical Banquet), a six-movement piece for cello and piano, follows the same format as J. H. Schein's Banchetto Musicale of the 17th century.

Paulus has been getting a lot of national attention in recent years. He has written works for orchestras, opera companies, chamber ensembles and solo performers. His works have been performed by the Houston Symphony, St. Paul Chamber Orchestra, The Opera Theatre of Saint Louis and the Minnesota Opera Company.

The Minnesota Orchestra will premier his "Concerto for Orchestra" on April 6, 8 and 9.

Paulus obtained his musical education from Macalester College and the University of Minnesota and has received several awards including grants from the Minnesota State Arts Board and the National Endowment for the Arts. He is also one of the founders of the Minnesota Composers Forum.

The concert is sponsored by the St. Anthony Park Arts Forum and COMPAS. It will be held at the United Church of Christ, 2129 Commonwealth Ave. at 4 pm. Tickets are $5.50 and $4 for seniors and students. They are available at Micawber's Bookstore and the Bibelot Shop. Student rush tickets are available for $1 five minutes prior to the concert.

News from businesses & agencies

H. B. Fuller Company's Community Affairs Council recently awarded a $7,000 grant to the St. Anthony Park Block Nurse program.

The money will be used for direct service costs of the program. In addition, H. B. Fuller agreed to support the use of a consultant to plan for dissemination of the program's concept beyond St. Anthony Park.

"H.B. Fuller believes the program is important not only for the direct service it provides but also for the possibility that it may bring about change in the larger medical community," said Karen Muller, community affairs assistant.

This is the second $7,000 grant H. B. Fuller has made to the Block Nurse Program.

St. Anthony Park Bank also recently made a gift to the Block Nurse Program to help meet the costs of direct service. The grant was awarded by the bank's Community Involvement Council.

Hancock-Nelson Foods Company has remodeled its office and warehouse at 807 Hampden Ave., including the construction of 110,000 square feet of additional warehouse space. The remodeled facility allows for trucks to load and unload without blocking Hampden.

french horn player, who was introduced as the band's "star recruiter" by Hovland, probably has much experience as anyone in the band.

McKay was in the University of Minnesota band as a student some 45 years ago and has been involved in the university's alumni band since 1946.

"We just all go there to have fun, you know," McKay said. "We all enjoy playing together, so I guess that's why we're there."

The band recently received a grant from the Community Involvement Fund of the Saint Anthony Park State Bank, which Hovland said will go towards purchasing some new music and building a music collection for the band. She welcomed not only new members, but also any further contributions or invitations to play at events.

The band played at the St. Anthony Park Association holiday season program in December and is planning to play at the Presbyterian Home in Roseville later this spring. Future plans also include summer concerts at the bandshell in Langford Park.

Anyone interested in playing in the band is asked to call Karen Hovland at 645-9738

A great deal of experience is not required, but a willingness to have a good time may be essential, for, as bass drummer Glaeser said, "The whole idea of the band is just to have a whole lot of fun."

Good News For Seniors:

Good news for seniors in St. Paul, where it all began:

SHARE's new Medical Center in St. Paul's Energy Park becomes newest big reason to join SeniorCare now.

It was less than ten years ago that SHARE began in the heart of St. Paul's Midway area - in the original St. Paul Medical Center at 555 Simpson Street.

Here, too, just five years later, SHARE turned SeniorCare from a dream into a reality. "The dream," according to a SHARE spokesperson, "was to implement principles that we knew would offer our senior citizens a complete, quality health care program and still keep costs under control."

The SeniorCare principles worked in practice. As a result, the SeniorCare membership grew by leaps and bounds. And, with great anticipation offset by a bit of the sadness that goes along with leaving the original family home, SHARE is about to take another giant step forward.

SHARE's new Medical Center, scheduled to open this fall in the much publicized Energy Park, will be the largest and most complete facility of its kind in St. Paul. Specialties will range from internal medicine, surgery, cardiology and radiology to pulmonary medicine. The 56,000-square-foot Medical Center will also offer full-service laboratory and X-ray departments and a complete optical services department.

SeniorCare members who use the new Energy Park Medical Center will continue to be referred to Midway Hospital.

SHARE's exciting new home, the Energy Park Medical Center, is less than a mile from the original SHARE Medical Center on Simpson Street. The new Medical Center is scheduled to open this fall.

No rate increase in 1983 means even more good news for St. Paul seniors.

In addition to the good news about the new SHARE Medical Center in Energy Park, you may already know that SeniorCare has announced there'll be no rate increase for 1983!

Complete SeniorCare coverage will continue to cost you just $19.75 per month when supplemental insurance plans now average more than $40 per month.

Also continuing in effect for 1983 is the SeniorCare money-back guarantee that refunds your first three month's premium if you're not satisfied.

Learn more by attending a SeniorCare Community Meeting. Call SHARE for a schedule of meetings near you.

SEMINARY

would encroach further into the neighborhood and would eliminate the residential frontage on Branston, Haley said.

The city planning commission's staff report had recommended the seminary's rezoning request be approved. The seminary's proposal is consistent with city land-use policy that encourages preservation of existing housing, Pat James, staff person for the planning commission, told the council.

The planning commission approved the request in February. District 12 Council approved the plan at its February meeting and reaffirmed its approval at its March meeting.

Several council members appeared to be puzzled by the opposition to the rezoning, since under the seminary's alternate plan the building would still be constructed on the proposed block but with greater loss of housing.

If the rezoning request were not approved, council president Vic Tadesco pointed out, the seminary could proceed with the alternate plan without city action. "There's nothing we can do."

"There has been no testimony to show that this (request) would be in nonconformance to the city's comprehensive plan," council member Bill Wilson said. "We must decide within the limits of the authority granted to us."

The rezoning opponents said they were opposed to both plans. "Either alternative will significantly disrupt the neighborhood," said Paul Jessup.

"We are not against the rezoning, per se," said Larry McKay. "We are against the construction that would follow."

Speakers in support of the seminary's request said the proposed building was the best possible compromise. "It is a plan aimed at meeting both the seminary's needs and the needs of the neighborhood," said Fred Gaiser.

Some council members apparently were convinced of this. "I think the architect and the school have taken great steps to deal with the aesthetic value of the area," said Chris Nicosia. "If I lived there I think I would welcome an addition like this."

Fletcher was less sure. "There may be other options with less impact," he said, "but that's between the seminary and the neighborhood."

Coming attractions

Writers' Workshop

St. Paul poet James Moore will meet with the St. Anthony Park Writers' Workshop on April 28, 7 p.m. at 1492 Fulham St. He is the second of three guest writer-critics invited to work with Park writers this spring.

Park writers who want feedback and support for their writing are encouraged to attend these special workshop sessions with a guest writer-critic. Moore and the other guest writer-critics are supported by the St. Anthony Park Arts Forum. Call 644-6090 for information about the Writers' Workshop.

Old-Timers meet

Women members of the St. Anthony Park Old Timers will hold their first luncheon April 13 at 1 p.m. in the dining room at the Cromwell Lounge, 2511 University Ave. Call 644-2959 or 644-1070 by April 8 for reservations. There will be a short meeting and election of officers.

Kindergarten round-up

St. Anthony Park Elementary School will hold its annual Kindergarten Round-Up on Tuesday, April 19 at 6:30 p.m. in the school's media center.

Contact Teri Kline, 647-1702 or Linda Holmberg, 647-0978, for further information.

Parents who have children who will be five years old after Sept. 1 and before Dec. 31, may call St. Anthony Park School, 645-0391, if they are interested in early entrance to kindergarten for their child.

Gospel music

The Angelic Chorus, a gospel group from North Central Baptist Church, Saint Paul, will give a concert on Friday, April 8, at 7:30 p.m. at Saint Anthony Park

Lutheran Church.

The concert will be followed by dessert and coffee. There is no charge for the concert; a free-will offering will be taken.

American Legion

St. Anthony Park American Legion Post #34 will feature Dr. Ralph Wayne as its speaker on April 4, at 7:30 p.m. at the St. Anthony Park Lutheran Church. Wayne's subject will be gardening. All St. Anthony Park residents are invited.

Rummage Sale

The Lyngblomsten Auxiliary will hold a rummage sale in the Lyngblomsten Community Senior Center, 1298 N. Pascal on April 7 and 8, 9 a.m.-2 p.m.

Gibbs Farm opens

Gibbs Farm Museum will open again on Sunday, April 24 with tours of the farm and its four buildings at regular intervals from noon to 4 p.m.

Costumed interpreters will lead people through some of the early-spring activities typical of a 19th century Minnesota farm.

The Gibbs Farm Museum is located at the corner of Cleveland and Larpenteur avenues in Falcon Heights. Hours are noon to 4 p.m. on Sundays; 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesdays through Fridays. Admission is $1.75 for adults, $1.50 for senior citizens, and 75 cents for children.

LWV meeting

The League of Women Voters Unit 8, St. Anthony Park and Falcon Heights, will meet on April 18 at 7:30 p.m. in the home of Gen Hall, 1484 Chelsea St., 489-8263. The topic will be homeowners' perceptions of renters.

"How Do We Lend To You?"

Let Us Count The Ways.

One, home improvement loans. Two, auto and boat loans. Three, investment loans. Four, income tax loans — either to pay taxes or as an advance against refunds. Five, IRA funding loans. Six, lines of credit. Seven, education loans. Eight, home purchase loans. Nine, home equity loans. Business loans like ten, fixed asset purchase loans. Eleven, accounts receivable financing. Twelve, expansion loans. Thirteen, letters of credit. Fourteen, insurance premium financing.

And we could continue counting our ways. So, before searching all over town for the money you need, visit your close-to-home St. Anthony Park Bank. Because as somebody once said:

Home is where the help is.
