Kick up your heels at the Park Festival

By Dave Merk

It's that time of year again, folks. Time for the annual St. Anthony Park Festival—food, friends, and most of all, fun!

It all begins at 7 a.m. on June 1 with a pancake breakfast in the fellowship hall of the Methodist Church on the corner of Como and Hillside aves.

The breakfast will run until 11 a.m. with tickets being sold only at the door, said breakfast coordinator Wendy Hanson. Tickets will be $2.50 for adults, $2 for seniors and $1.50 for kids, she said.

The festival will officially open at 9 a.m. with the playing of the "highland fling" by an award-winning group from Macalester College, according to entertainment coordinator Susan Munson.

Other entertainment will include the St. Anthony Park Band; ragtime piano music by Park resident John Seppala; and various dance troupes including jazz, ballet, tap, and traditional dance. Side Show Productions will have jugglers and jesters roaming the streets, and Park resident Kate Bulger will sing show songs.

Even more fun will be on hand with face painters, a one-man band, the Excalibur Fencing group and much more.

Lining Como Avenue between Doswell and Commonwealth avenues, will be numerous vendors, information

More about the Festival on page 9.

Changes on Como begin to take shape

By Pamela Field

Last week construction began on Como Avenue that cements a $100,000 grant from the city of St. Paul to improve the area physically and make it safe, according to Stewart McIntosh, Como Avenue businessman.

McIntosh, a promoter of the project, said most of the construction will include concrete work, such as redoing sidewalks, making double crosswalks and adding boulevards.

Other work includes new tree plantings, two new bus shelters, several street lights and brick sidewalks, said McIntosh.

"With public funding drying up, this is an attempt to keep

Eagle Scouts — a Wesenberg/Wilson family affair

By Linda Johnson

Scouting is often a family affair. At the Scout court of honor June 3, two families, in particular, will be on hand. Ned Wesenberg and Neal Wilson will both receive their Eagle Scout award in the ceremony at St. Anthony Park United Church of Christ. Neither is the first in his family to achieve the rank of eagle scout: Ned Wesenberg's two older brothers, Nathaniel and Nicholas, have the award as do Wilson's father, Zane, and older brother, Scott.

Achieving Eagle Scout is a rare phenomenon in scouts. "I read a study," said Wilson, "that says only one out of one or two hundred scouts gets an eagle." He estimated that the shortest time for obtaining an eagle is three years, and that is only possible if "you have nothing else on your mind," Wilson took eight years to achieve his award; his father, Zane, earned the award at about the same age (18); but Scott Wilson got an eagle at 14.

At 16, Wesenberg observes that he always "looked forward to being where his older brothers were in scouts." Like Ned, Nathaniel and Nicholas Wesenberg were 16 or 17 when they earned the award.

Having other Eagle Scouts in the family had varying degrees of influence. Wilson said that the fact his brother and father were Eagle Scouts definitely influenced him to strive to become one. Scott Wilson said "It was different for me than for Neal. We lived in Oregon, and I joined a troop there that was a really good troop. They put out a lot of Eagle Scouts, and that became important for me." For Zane Wilson, scouting was a "constant in my life."

"My father was active in scouts when he grew up, but I was the first in the family to get an eagle," Zane said.

Wesenberg said that while he wanted to achieve the same rank in scouts as his older brothers, "My parents encouraged me the most."

Nathaniel Wesenberg agreed. "We were competitive as brothers, but our parents were a big influence and kept after us" to achieve each merit badge, he said.

The award ceremony marks the culmination of the process. According to Wesenberg, the awards, like all scout awards, will be presented in a court of honor. "Since I've been in the troop only five or six guys have received the eagle award. Neal and I are numbers seven and eight."

Obtaining an Eagle Scout award involves earning 11 out of 13 required merit badges and more elective badges for a total of 23. According to Wilson, each merit badge involves "showing scout spirit, responsibility and leadership." In general, said Wilson, the discipline of earning an Eagle Scout award "helps you get prepared for life." He cited the personal management merit badge as an example. The personal management badge involves "recording financial status for six months, writing down interest made, finding out where you're putting money, talking to a few people on the economy and writing a few essays." Elective badges allow pursuit of special interests; with over 124 to choose from, there is "anything you want to find," said Wilson. Although there is a minimum requirement of 23 badges to attain Eagle Scout status, there is no

District 12 Community Council NEWS

June 1985

This space brought to Bugle readers by District 12 Community Council.

Edited by Ann Copeland.

Solid waste topic June 12

By far the largest piece of the tax pie served up by St. Paul property owners is cut for Ramsey County. Yet few people in District 12 or any other area know very much about county government and how it operates.

At the June meeting of the District 12 Council, St. Anthony Park residents and business owners can hear what the county is doing in the area of solid waste management.

The meeting will begin at 7 p.m. in the Community Room of the library at Como and Carter aves.

Decisions currently being made by county departments in response to state mandates may mean changes in both lifestyles and use of tax dollars for Ramsey County residents. County staff will discuss ways that the recycling program and the resource recovery plant will affect people in our community.

Meet your NAO at the Park Festival

St. Paul Neighborhood Assistance Officers will be at the District 12 table near Bridgeman's during the June Festival to answer questions about ways to burglar-proof your house.

The NAO's will also explain the home safety check program that they conduct for people who are out of town on business or vacation.

People are urged to stop by the table on June 1 between 10 and 4 p.m. to visit with the officers and to pick up free literature about energy conservation and other neighborhood programs.

District Council members will also be present to answer questions about Council projects and operations.

The District 12 Community Council is a group of 21 citizens elected to serve the District 12 area of St. Paul, including residents of north and south St. Anthony Park, commerce and industry. It is one of 17 citizen participation councils in the city.

The council meets the second Wednesday of every month. All meetings are open to the public. Check for location.

168 stumps to go: get on the list

Creativity runs amok when people try to disguise stumps left after Dutch elm disease strikes. The remains are used for everything from flower box stands to canine rest stops.

Having the stumps ground down and removed has cost residents money since city budget cuts removed the stump removal program several years ago. Now city council members are wrestling with the decision of how to allocate 168 free stump removals in each of the seven City wards.

$40,000 is available to pay for removing 1,100 stumps. Council members have directed parks personnel to write a resolution devising a way to select the lucky 168 in each ward.

"I guess it'll end up kind of a lottery," said a city source who asked to remain anonymous. "Both parks and rec and city council members are keeping lists of people who call in. Someway they have to put the lists together and decide if it's first-come, first-served or if everyone on a

To avoid the lottery, if that's what it turns out to be, District 12 residents can sign up to have their stumps removed at a group price.

Boulevard stumps will require a $20 donation for grinding down 6 inches below the ground and leaving the chips for the homeowner. If the chips are hauled away by the company the donation asked is $30.

Stumps on private property must be accessible to a pick-up truck. Cost will be $25 (grinding only) or $40 if chips are hauled away.

In all cases enough chips will be left to fill in the hole to ground level.

Residents should fill in the coupon below and make checks payable to DISTRICT 12 GREEN TREE FUND. Grinding of boulevard stumps is tax deductible.

"We'll have the stumps out by July 30 for those people with coupons in by June 30," John Lavoisier, owner of Action Stump Removal Co., promised.

Sue Gunderson, new District 12 energy auditor, shows Ron McKinley, director of the MNSHIP program, how to weatherstrip a door. Gunderson recently moved to Minnesota from Illinois where she was a state-certified energy auditor. She also did special energy programming for the parks department in Joliet, Ill. MNSHIP, the McKnight neighborhood Self-Help Improvement Program, recently granted $30,000 to the St. Paul Energy Consortium to expand the neighborhood energy conservation program in St. Paul. Summer is a good time to get energy audits because there is less demand and the auditor can come quickly. Call 646-8884 to schedule a $10 audit.

Energy Consortium delegates named

Joan Osgood and Jane Dietl have been named delegate and alternate from the District 12 Council to the St. Paul Neighborhood Energy Consortium Board of Directors. The consortium will begin meeting during the summer to make the transition from the current operating structure to a more formalized Board of Directors.

Raymond/University development ahead

District 12 Council will be taking a hard look at possible guidelines for potential development in the Raymond/University/280/Kasota area during the coming months. An explosion of projects in recent weeks caused council members to request city planning help in setting priorities and surveying potential development or reuse sites. Anyone interested in discussing this project should call the office, 646-8884.

StAP/100 centennial committee planned

Surveyors were out in a cow pasture in 1885 laying down lines that would mark Cleveland Avenue, Buford Avenue, and plats that became spaces for homes. Ducks were swimming on a lake that is now called Langford Park.

One hundred years later residents who have moved into those homes and provided kids to play where the lake once was are beginning to think about celebrating 100 years of existence for St. Anthony Park.

Residents and/or organizations interested in helping plan special events to celebrate St. Anthony Park's Centennial are invited to a meeting at 7 p.m. on June 2 at 69 Langford Park.

A planning committee, StAP/100, has met to generate some ideas but would like to get more people involved. Some suggested events and activities include "A Look Forward and Backward": house tours, house and family genealogy classes, community improvement, reunions, music and arts programs, or photo exhibits.

Acting Secretary Joan Dow Styve asks that people who are not able to attend the meeting but would like to become involved call 646-8884 to get their names on a mailing list. Organizations in St. Anthony Park are also asked to send representatives.

Do you want a StAP babysitting co-op?

South St. Anthony residents interested in forming a babysitting cooperative should call the District 12 Office 646-8884, or Council member David Ericson, 647-6950.

Music in the Park

The last concert in the Music in the Park series will be June 9, when the St. Anthony Park United Church of Christ plays host to a family-style concert.

Performing will be Frederick (violin) and Laura (cello) Sewell, and John (clarinetist) and Thelma (piano) Hunter. Both families are a prominent part of Twin Cities musical life; the Sewells father and daughter, the Hunters mother and son. They will be performing works by Milhaud, Francaix, Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, Beethoven and Brahms. The work by Skrowaczewski is special: It was commissioned by the Schubert Club and is dedicated to the quartet.

The June 9 concert starts at 7 p.m. Tickets are available at the door or at the Bibelot.

Elementary curriculum

The St. Anthony Park Elementary School will undergo a reorganization for the 1985-86 academic year. The kindergarten and first grades will remain in a self-contained format. The second and third grades will form a unit taught by a team of four teachers. The fourth grade will be combined with the present fifth and sixth grade unit to create a larger team of six teachers.

The change in the school's organizational pattern will allow for more flexibility in grouping pupils and in utilizing the school's resources. The team teaching format will permit many patterns and sizes of instructional groups to be organized. It allows for teacher specialization while integrating the total program for each child.

An informational meeting was held with parents on the evening of May 16, sponsored by the St. Anthony Park School Association. Association president Marge Avoles reported that over 50 parents participated in the discussion of the upcoming organization.

Not a bang, but a whimper

It would have been more poetic for the Flameburger to leave this world in a sea of fire, but no such luck. Instead, it was quietly razed in May to make room for the Bullseye development.

Recycling Unlimited closes

Neighborhood recycling efforts are on hold temporarily following the shut-down of Recycling Unlimited in mid-May. The group has made monthly curbside pick-ups in St. Anthony Park, Falcon Heights and Lauderdale as well as bi-monthly stops at two neighborhood banks.

Recycling Unlimited officials blame the city for actions which have caused severe cash flow problems for the company. According to Joann Nelson, Recycling Unlimited's president, the city failed to turn over funds authorized for recycling for 1984-1985, removed recyclable materials to be land-fill and locked up the company's personal property at their former site on Victoria Street.

City officials, on the other hand, insist they have paid as promised and that they cleaned up the Victoria Street location at a cost of $15,000 and had not even billed the company.

At press time, officials of the company, the city and Ramsey county were meeting to sort out differences and to seek compromise. County officials are eager to continue the recycling program which has been one-third of the county's waste management program.

Richard Ragan, environmental health manager with the county's public health division, urges people to continue recycling. "We are asking people to store recycling items in their garages until we can get some kind of program going again."

Another rape

There was another alleged rape and robbery in St. Anthony Park last month. On April 25 a woman was attacked at her residence in the vicinity of Gordon and Scudder avenues.

The assailant was a white male, about 45 years old, 5'9", 190 pounds, pear-shaped figure, mid-length grey hair, clean-shaven with a swarthy complexion. He was wearing gold-rimmed glasses, a dark green shirt and blue jeans. He carried a flashlight and threatened the victim with a knife.

As you recall, there was a similar rape near this location last March. However, police don't think the two incidents are related.

If anyone has information about either rape, they are encouraged to call the Sex Homicide Unit of the St. Paul Police Department at 292-3650.

Como from 1

the area from deteriorating when we can get some help with it," said McIntosh.

McIntosh, a past president of the Merchants and Professional Association, said he does not believe the improvements will necessarily attract new businesses or people to the area but will "make it nicer" for the people already there.

"St. Anthony Park already has a small town atmosphere and this will make it more small townish," said McIntosh.

Money for the project was granted to the District 12 Council from the City of St. Paul from its capital improvement bonding funds, said Ann Copeland, District 12 community organizer.

Copeland said the funding needed to be matched in total dollar amount to the $100,000 received by businesses on a three-to-one basis. This means businesses must make improvements to their own property which result in $3 matching every $1 spent by the city. Copeland said the ratio has been even more like eight to one.

The kiosk on Como and Carter, now sort of a St. Anthony Park landmark, will not really be removed, as some have feared, but will be replaced by two public notices in the bus shelters, said McIntosh.

Bidding wars

The news release is headlined "Sh! Sh! Limited opening still available at The Mississippi Creative Arts School for the Fall of 1985." A rhapsodic description of the school then follows, promoting the features that make the (untried, we might add) Mississippi Creative Arts School such a wonderful place to learn.

Consumeristic considerations aside, the news release typifies the very worse aspects of the new elementary school system in St. Paul. As we all know, magnets are being installed to implement desegregation, a clear and rational reason. But to date, the school district has done a poor job in explaining the magnet schools, the rationale for their existence and the features of each school.

And what's happening now is that schools are engaged in a bidding war for elementary students. The Bugle has received phone calls and releases from other magnets, all wanting to tell "their" story to parents. But the information they provide tends to be incomplete, shrill, and, sometimes, just plain untrue.

The central school district needs to say "Sh" to these schools who seem to be more worried right now about bodies than a solid curriculum. Higher education has reached a stage when the recruitment of the high school graduate sometimes outweighs the actual program, but that is a situation that should not come close to happening in St. Paul elementaries.

If the St. Paul school district wants to truly inform parents about opportunities, it should send parents all the pertinent information: class sizes, curriculum, emphasis on specialty courses, etc., not the photo-filled brochure that tended to confuse, rather than enlighten.

But the system isn't going to, at least not yet. The horrifying thing is that this flip and useless news release was that it was the "official notice" about the school's existence. At a time when state tax dollars are disappearing and schools face difficulties, news releases like this are a waste of both time and money. If the school district wants to achieve desegregation, it should market programs to specific markets, not provide hazy information in a haphazard way.

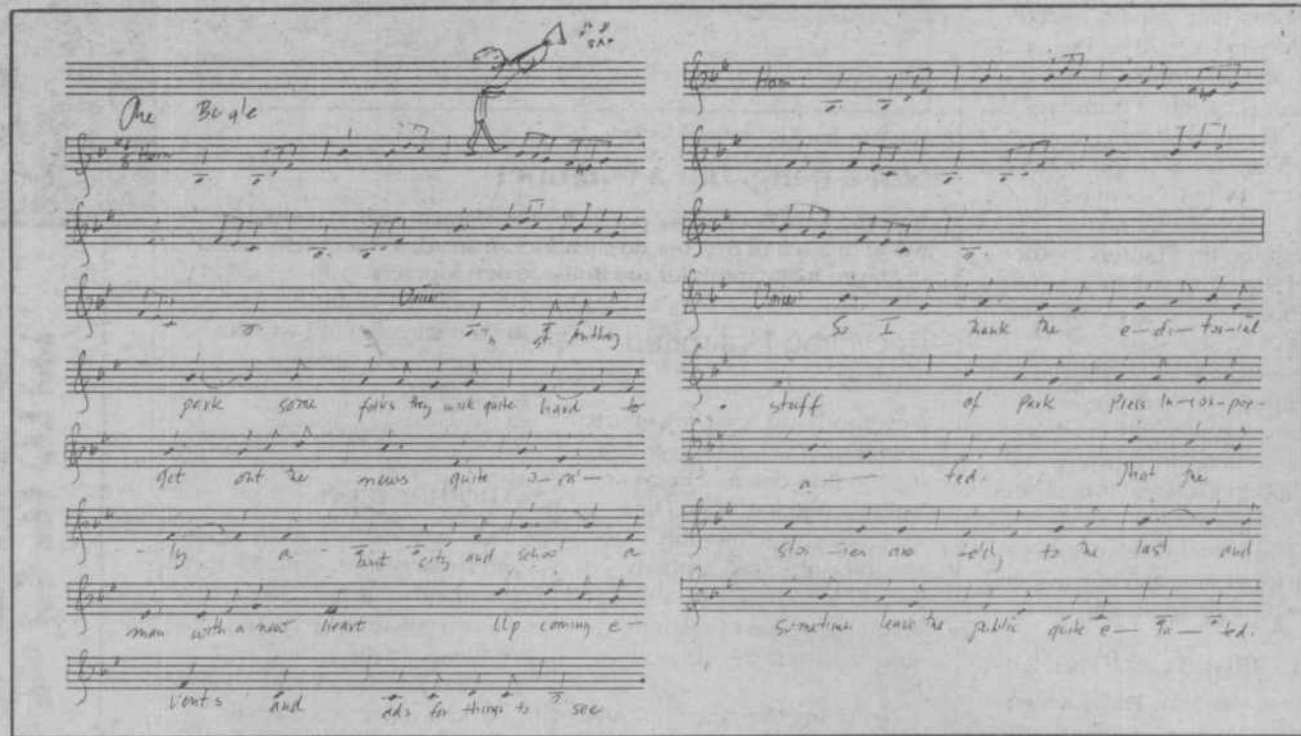

The elementary magnet school concept is still dubious and untried. If the St. Paul school system doesn't take pains to properly implement it with a specific set of goals, magnet elementaries probably won't achieve their prime directive—bringing desegregation to an area that has avoided it for decades.

Hardware Confessions

Most of us in St. Anthony Park live in older homes. I'm sure that many of the houses in the neighborhood were built before 1920. We bought them for their charm, their character. We bought them because "you couldn't get woodwork like this in a new house at any price."

But along with all that charm and character and woodwork, we bought something else. Maintenance.

Now, I have no trouble admitting that there are certain things in this world I'm just not good at. And one of those things is fixing stuff. Being handy around the house is definitely not my forte. In fact, I think it is probably my pianissimo.

Most of the time I am comfortable with my inadequacy. I have long ago resigned myself to the fact that, as long as I live in this old house, I shall have to hand over large amounts of money to people who are handier than I, in order to keep the place in good repair.

But some jobs are just too small to justify paying someone else to do. For most adults, these jobs would take about half an hour. For me, they ruin an entire Saturday.

The scene typically goes something like this:

My wife comes downstairs in the morning and finds me sitting at the kitchen table, sullen, staring blankly ahead, with a coffee cup held limply in my hand.

"Oh, oh. Don't tell me. You have to go to the hardware store today."

"You guessed it. Pour me another cup of mud, will ya? In fact, make it a double."

Now, don't get me wrong. We have a great hardware store in our neighborhood. Friendly. Helpful. Well-stocked. You all know that.

But going to the hardware store to get something for a home-maintenance project never fails to seize my heart in a cold clutch of fear. I am terrified that the people who work in the hardware store will discover the shameful truth: This guy doesn't know what he's doin'!

As I approach the bright red front door of the hardware store, I swallow hard, take a deep breath, and check my brow for nervous perspiration. I grit my teeth, grasp the door handle, and pull it open with all the semblance of confidence I can muster.

("Oh, I just hope I can get past the counter without anyone noticing me.")

"Good morning! Need any help?"

("Rats!")

"Oh, no, no! I know just what I need!"

I can almost feel my nose growing longer. I wonder if I fooled them. I stride past the counter like a man with a mission, trying to look as competent as a human being can. At the first opportunity I duck into the next aisle, out of sight of the employees, and slip into utter confusion.

More often than not, I take some odd item with me when I go to the hardware store. Old houses are just full of odd items which, after sixty or seventy years of daily use, finally give up the ghost. And when that happens, I immediately assume that the company that made the thing probably went out of business before I was born and I'll never find another one. So I take the thing with me to the hardware store, hoping to find something there that will kind of do the same thing as the original did.

I wander through the aisles playing a game of Search and Avoid. I search for a piece of hardware that I know I'll never find, and I avoid being offered assistance, since my ineptitude would thus be revealed and I would become the laughing stock of the hardware store.

These furtive and futile quests frequently take me into the back room, where everything is kept in little bins. I don't like little bins. They don't have instructions printed on them. Little bins don't have pictures of a smiling housewife installing the item in one easy step, implying, of course, that if a woman can do it, anyone can do it. Little do they realize that there probably isn't a woman in St. Anthony Park that can't do it better than I can.

The one thing those little bins do have is a little card that tells you the price. And invariably, if I do happen to find the item I'm looking for, the price on the card is 7½ cents. The card assumes that I am going to buy these things by the gross, but I only need one. Still, I must save face, so I buy a gross. The person at the counter will probably think I'm a real handyman if I buy a gross of these little deals!

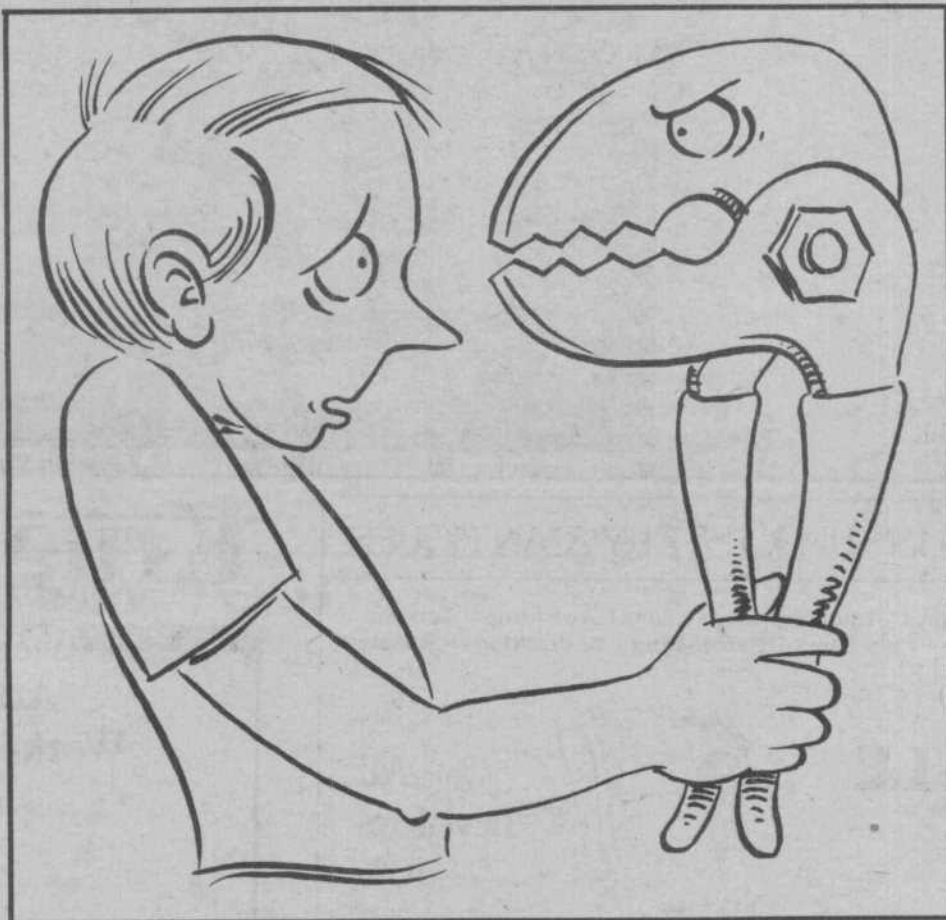

"Boy, looks like you really have a project going, sir. How many you got there?"

"Hundred forty-four. No thanks, I don't need a bag."

I smile, and walk confidently out the door, spilling little gizmos with every step. Finally, out on the sidewalk, I can end my little charade and head home to a day of complete torment.

But I am confident that the people in the hardware store don't suspect a thing.

Qualey lauded

(Editor's note: Carlton Qualey is a long-time resident of St. Anthony Park. This piece is taken from remarks at the presentation of a plaque to Qualey by the Immigration History Society.)

For the Immigration History Society, it is especially fortunate that the Organization of American Historians scheduled the 1985 convention in the Twin Cities. Our outgoing president holds forth at a Minneapolis institution which has long nurtured immigration studies, and our treasurer and Newsletter editor holds forth at a St. Paul institution which has done the same for an even longer time, the Minnesota Historical Society. The Executive Board wants to take this occasion to acknowledge Carlton Qualey's outstanding services to our society.

Born and raised in Minnesota, Qualey headed toward immigration history at St. Olaf College and the University of Minnesota. He broke into print in 1936 while pursuing his doctorate at Columbia University. Although he no longer lists that publication, Qualey lined up the "Determining Factors in American Development" for social studies teachers, and of course he included Frontier, Sectionalism, the Industrial Revolution and so forth. But at the top of his list was Immigration; and he asked the teachers to think about all the right questions—immigrant reasons for leaving, the American impact on the immigrant culture, immigrant leadership and the timing of immigrant involvement in politics. Qualey was right on target.

After the 1938 publication of Norwegian Settlement in the United States (a book reissued by Arno Press in 1970), he taught for a few years in the East before returning to Minnesota and Carlton College, where he would spend the next 25 years. Recipient of grants from the Social Science Research Council, American Council of Learned Societies and Huntington Library, among others, he contributed to Immigration and American History: Essays in Honor of Theodore C. Blegen (1961) and a volume of essays on Thorstein Veblen (1968).

It was 1965 at a Mississippi Valley Historical Association meeting that Qualey, Ted Saloutos, Bob Cross and Fritz Ander put their heads together and came up with the Immigration History Group. Five years later Victor Greene brought out the first issue of the Newsletter. He informed readers that the "general philosophy of the group" was "to keep the administration as simple as possible." And so they did—with an executive secretary who doubled as editor, a program chairman, and a small council on which Qualey frequently served. Greene's coverage of research in progress, recent publications and forthcoming meetings built a mailing list of nearly 400 people by the time he turned the Newsletter over to Roger Daniels in 1972.

During that year the group became the Immigration History Society, with its present officers and executive board, plus an official constitution and by-laws. The Newsletter editor, however, was still pleading with people on the mailing list to pay their long-overdue $3 dues. But the November 1972 issue sighed with relief: "Happily, Dr. Carlton C. Qualey has obtained the backing of the Minnesota Historical Society and will issue subsequent numbers."

Qualey had become a resident fellow in ethnic history at the Minnesota Historical Society, and he volunteered to be the treasurer and editor. Starting in 1973 the Newsletter took on a professional format, doubled in volume, and carried the valuable research essays we all appreciate. In May 1973 Qualey ran an article on research being done in Britain, and in November he published a fine essay on ethnic source materials in the National Archives. The efficient new editor threatened to knock dead-beats off the mailing list. But when he was deluged with complimentary letters on the "new" Newsletter, he relented and gave everyone six months to shape up and pay up.

For a dozen years now Qualey has kept our books and through the Newsletter kept us informed, broadened our horizons and helped us build our membership. In a very real sense he has been "the voice" of the Immigration History Society. For all these reasons, the Immigration History Society expresses its gratitude to Carlton Qualey, founding member, treasurer, newsletter editor, for his long and devoted service.

Perhaps you are interested in history and would like to become involved with it on a community level. Or maybe you are a resident of Falcon Heights, Lauderdale or Roseville and would like to assist in seeing your family history remembered in a book. If so, the Old Rose Township Historical Society is a group you should seriously contemplate joining.

The society is interested in preserving the history of Falcon Heights, Lauderdale and Roseville. Betty Wolfangle, originator of the society and currently chairperson of the Ways and Means Committee, said the group hopes to publish a book put together by the residents of the community within the next two years. The book will contain anecdotes and family histories of the way life used to be for the residents and their relatives.

"It won't exactly be like Little House on the Prairie, but it will be as close as possible," said Wolfangle.

Several years ago the Heritage Trail, a car/bike path in Roseville, was established by the Society. Along the path are historical markers indicated by green signs with numbers. The numbers correspond to numbers in a brochure where a "story" is written about each historical marker. The brochure is available at Roseville City Hall.

On the Fourth of July, the Society will have a pig roast at Central Park on Lexington Avenue, as part of the city's Rose Fete celebration. People from the society will be there dressed in costume and will be available to answer any questions.

The society sells note stationery at Roseville City Hall and Roseville Recreation Center. Bill Brown, Roseville resident and free-lance artist, was commissioned to paint pictures of historical sites in Roseville for the Bicentennial Celebration in 1976, and these pictures currently hang in the

Thanks to the elm watch volunteers

When the St. Paul Department of Forestry called for assistance with its annual survey of woodpiles, they were met with ready response in St. Anthony Park. Thanks to the Blockworker Program, organized through the St. Anthony Park Association several years ago, 17 volunteers were identified to help with the survey.

Volunteers were trained and covered the area within two days. They did not have the authority to enter private property, but they made notes of all woodpiles which appeared to have the possibility of diseased elm wood. Foresters then immediately checked 109 woodpiles and found seven that contained a substantial amount of elm wood. They found a log or two in a few others and simply removed them. Individuals with elm wood have been notified and given a time period within which to respond. If they are not able to debark or destroy it within the time allotted, the city will make arrangements to pick up the wood.

The speed with which the volunteers responded was especially important since beetle larvae breeding in stored bark-intact elm in woodpiles and stumps emerge at this time of the year to feed on healthy elms. They carry the fungus on their bodies that will spread the disease to healthy trees, and the cycle of elm disease continues.

According to Blockworker Coordinator Margot Monson, the community can be proud and grateful for the responsiveness of Area Coordinators and Blockworkers who have been called frequently in past months. She said, "I'd particularly acknowledge the volunteers who came forth for the survey on a busy holiday weekend: Mark Hansen, Vern Bohlman, Joel Anderson, Ray and Thom Gerst, Gerald McKay, Peg Houck, Howard Mielke, Arnold Lindquist, Jean Lambert, Jack Pearson, Robert Shoffner, Don Bates, Bill Cecchi, Gail Dennis, Bob Feigal and Michael Ruselle."

A brief history of the township

Old Rose Township was settled in 1843, six years before Minnesota became a territory. Isaac Rose, for whom the township was named, was one of three who filed for Ramsey County land that year.

That year also saw the arrival of the Gibbs family in Rose Township when they built the house that still stands at the corner of Larpenteur and Cleveland avenues.

According to Roseville city records, in 1859—one year after Minnesota attained statehood—Rose Township was formally organized as a voting precinct, elected town officers and levied taxes. The area of this new municipality was roughly six miles west of Rice Street, which would include Roseville, Falcon Heights and Lauderdale, plus some land now in Minneapolis, the village of St. Anthony and St. Paul.

At that time the population was 494; the city's first bond issue of $1,200 was used to pay bounties of volunteers who filled the town's quota in the Civil War.

By 1895 the population of Rose Township was 1,028. Progress came slowly but surely to the area: By 1899 there were telephone lines from Minneapolis, and a streetcar ran to 15th and Como Avenue.

And business soon moved in. Although the first business in the Rose Hill area (then known as Prospect Hills) was the Rose Hill Nursery in 1874, by the

The Whitbourne Legacy is set in Devonshire, England, in 1811. Rosalyn Archer, a semi-invalid since a childhood bout with polio, disdains marriage and men in general because of the unhappy experiences of her mother and sister. It takes Worth Forrester, an American frontiersman seeking to solve the mystery of his English father's forebears, to change her mind — and her whole life. Meanwhile, Worth clashes with the powerful Marquess of Whitbourne over his right to his father's legacy.

A resident of St. Anthony Park for 30 years, DeBoer is a member of the St. Anthony Park Writers Workshop and the local chapter of the Romance Writers of America.

booths and displays. Representatives from such organizations as St. Anthony Park Neighbors for Peace and the United Nations will be present.

Special sales such as the Art and Crafts Fair, and the Antique and Yard Sale will also be featured. The Art Fair will surround the library, while the Antique and Yard Sale will be going on right across the street at the H.B. Fuller Building.

People with things to sell at the Antique and Yard Sale are free to set up in the morning, said festival co-chairperson Robin Lindquist. "We have plenty of space," she said. Ten percent of the sales gets donated back to the festival, said Lindquist, in order to help pay for police protection and entertainment.

Lindquist encourages the St. Anthony Park business community to pledge as much as possible for future festivals in order to cover the rising costs of entertainment and other services.

turn of the century ice, blacksmith and dairy establishments were in the area. The school population was growing by leaps and bounds, forcing additions to area schools roughly every ten years.

Voting at the time was done at Rose Town Hall, Hamline Avenue and County Road B. This building was torn down in 1964 after construction of a new Ramsey County library.

By 1940 Rose Township had a population of 4,777 people spread over more than 10,000 acres of land.

But changes were on the way as the region became more urbanized. Roseville was incorporated as a village in 1948; Lauderdale, Falcon Heights and Arden Hills soon followed suit. Lauderdale—which had been known as Rose Hill—and its 1,500 residents incorporated in 1949 in honor of William Henry Lauderdale, a British immigrant who was an early veterinarian in the area. The name must not have been too popular in those early years; a special election was held later in 1949 to change the name from Lauderdale to Telex Park. The proposal failed.

In those days Lauderdale was much smaller than now, since the city limits only extended north to Roselawn Avenue. In 1953 the area of Roseville north of Roselawn petitioned to be admitted to Lauderdale, which happened the following year.

upper limit on how many badges a scout can earn. "I earned 44. Dad earned 83, and Scott close to 30," Wilson said.

Since the eagle award is as high as a scout can go, the award often marks the end of one's scouting career as well. "I am still active but not for too much longer," said Wesenberg. "I'm too busy. I have a job and other responsibilities." Wilson may still seek some individual scout awards.

Even though they don't plan on remaining active in scouts, each remembers the effort of attaining the eagle award as a particularly valuable experience. Wesenberg saw his scouting experience as "fun in the past" during which he went to Camp Tomahawk four times, became active in the troop and part of the leadership patrol and went on many camping trips. In addition to the sense of achievement that attainment of the eagle award gave him, Wilson cited the culture and design, sculpture and painting merit badges as especially enjoyable.

When Wesenberg and Wilson receive their awards June 3, they'll clearly have a special family cheering section—brothers and dads who know what they've accomplished and who will be reliving memories as they cheer.

Society from 6

Roseville City Hall. According to Wolfangle, eight different historical scenes in Roseville were also sketched in pen and ink by Brown to be placed on the note stationery.

"We kiddingly call Bill our 'resident artist' because he has done so much work for us, including designing our logo," said Wolfangle, "and he is a resident of the community."

Members join the Society for varied reasons. Ruth Kath, historian for the society, said she joined because her roots are in the community and she is proud of it.

"My parents were market farmers," said Kath. "Most of these people were truck farmers, market farmers or dairy farmers. They didn't have much, but they sure were proud to contribute to the community."

Wolfangle said Kath's parents' house is on the Heritage Trail. The society tried to keep the barn that Kath's parents also owned, but it had to be torn down due to city codes.

"That was a bitter pill to swallow," Wolfangle said. "We had to move it and we just couldn't raise the money to do it. We would have had to fireproof the barn, which would have been very expensive. There were just too many complications and not enough time."

The Old Rose Township Historical Society is a non-profit organization but money is needed for certain necessities. Kath said the group is looking for a place to store their "pioneer items" from residents, which will take some of the Society money.

"Right now people have to keep whatever antiques they possess in their own homes," Kath said. "The group may consider an old homestead as a place to eventually put the items."

The society began as a spin-off committee for the Bicentennial Celebration in Roseville. Wolfangle was chairperson for that committee in 1976, and when it was over the mayor and city council of Roseville asked her to "keep something like the Bicentennial Committee going." Wolfangle placed an ad in the newspaper for people interested in St. Paul history, and the first group met in 1977.

The first general meeting of the Society consisted of about 35 people. Today the society consists of 50 people, mostly older residents. Ruth Kath said the name of the society is misleading.

"People hear the word old in our name and they think it's for senior citizens only," said Kath. "That isn't the case at all. Sure, we need the old-timers, but we also need the younger people."

President Dan Simundson agreed. He said the society will continue to collect family histories for the book and maintain the Heritage Trail, but added the society now needs to recruit younger people to the group—people who can bring new ideas.

"The society is a good place for the older people to meet and talk about old times," said Simundson. "That is a great feeling. But we need new people, younger people to start fresh ideas flowing again."

Kay Korupp, publishing chairperson, said the society is working closely with Roseville School District 623 to have a history class taught about Falcon Heights, Lauderdale and Roseville to the elementary school children. A slide presentation has been developed by the society and shown to some of the children.

Kath said a school bus driver reported the children are more interested now in pointing out historical markers to each other on their way to and from school instead of arguing with each other.

"History is coming alive to the children," said Wolfangle.

"Slowly this society is having an impact on all the people of this community."

Murray

It was awards time at Murray Magnet Junior High School in May. Some notable awards included selection of the "A Honor Roll": eighth-graders Malik Bush, Ormonde Cragun, Katharine Gaiser, Erika Hovland, Mara Krinke, Micheal Lavee and Phu Van Trac. Cheung and Floeder also received perfect attendance awards for their two years at Murray.

Como

Como Park Senior High school will play host this year for district Honors Night. Each year the superintendent and other district administrators honor the top 10 graduates from each of the district's high schools. The event will be held on June 3 at 7 p.m.

• Como graduation will be held at Aldrich Arena on June 6 at 6 p.m. Following the graduation ceremonies and family celebrations, the graduates will return to the school for one last fling, the all-night party sponsored by seniors' parents.

• Three Como math teachers are retiring at the end of the school year. Frank Kernik has been coach of the successful math team at the school, in addition to teaching 11th- and 12th-grade math. Joe Senta, a ninth-grade math teacher, taught at Murray for many years before moving to Como. Bob Boudry, another former Murray teacher, was work-study coordinator at Como.

June at Gibbs Farm

In 1914, when the first Model-T rolled off Henry Ford's assembly line in Detroit, a new age of innovation was already under way. Engineering breakthroughs were rapidly changing the fabric of everyday life in America. These emerging technologies will be the subject of a month-long series of special events at the Gibbs Farm Museum beginning June 2.

Featured at the farm throughout the month of June will be a traveling exhibit titled "Minnesota and the Magic Mirror," the story of Minnesota's first photographers. The exhibit was created at the Minnesota Historical Society.

The schedule:

June 2: John Wickre of the Minnesota Historical Society will present a slide show and lead a discussion on the history of farm implements in Minnesota.

June 9: The classic film Northern Lights will be screened at the farm. Directed by Minnesotan John Hanson, the film details the activities of the little-known, yet very successful agrarian movement dubbed the Nonpartisan League. Hailed for its dazzling cinematography, Northern Lights reveals the hostility and fierceness of the North Dakota winter and etches the proud determined faces of the struggling farmers into our memory.

June 16: A special showing of some vintage roadsters featuring the Strawberry Ten antique cars from the Capitol City Chapter of the Antique Automobile Club of America. Stick around for some strawberry ice-cream and watch as museum volunteers cook up some wonderful strawberry sur-
