

Sesquicentennial celebration at library

By Kathy Walters

November is birthday month at St. Anthony Park Branch Library. They're celebrating the 150th birthday of Andrew Carnegie—the man who built 1600 libraries across America, including this one.

Carnegie, a poor Scottish immigrant who worked in an Allegheny cotton mill, lived to see his dream of the American success story become a reality. He became a great innovator in the steel industry and gave away over $350 million of the fortune he made.

According to Jonathan Hughes, author of The Vital Few, Carnegie, a self-educated man, learned early to value highly the libraries he used. Referred to as the "Patron Saint of Libraries," he gave more than $40 million to build 2509 libraries in America and other English-speaking nations. St. Paul is the home of three of those libraries.

The library interiors usually had the same amount of space; however exteriors could look very different as Carnegie wanted each library to represent local community culture. He cut no costs; his libraries were meant to elevate the surrounding community and to be community centers where people could learn about their own and other cultures. Construction of Carnegie libraries coincided with mass immigration to America between 1890 and 1920.

The Carnegie Corporation erected a building, but it was Garrison Keillor was at Micawber's bookstore in October signing copies of his best-selling book, Lake Wobegon Days. The event drew a large crowd of Keillor fans despite cold weather.

Garrison Keillor comes to visit

By Mary Mergenthal

It wasn't quite a gathering for the local boy who made good, but it came close. A crowd of locals and people from around the city filled the sidewalk from Micawber's bookstore to Como Avenue. They stood in line for over an hour, waiting patiently in the chilly fall evening for a chance to meet Garrison Keillor and to have him sign a book, or two or more. Some remembered when Keillor lived in St. Anthony Park. More felt they were waiting to talk to an old friend whom they know best as the host of

The Prairie Home Companion radio show, a show which began on the St. Paul campus of the University of Minnesota. The fact that his book chronicles life in Lake Wobegon and is currently number one on the best seller list made it all the better.

The whole event seemed like a party. There was a cake featuring Lake Wobegon in frosting, coffee and cider to sustain the waiting crowd and, of course, a pile of powdermilk biscuits. The evening took on extra significance because CBS TV had a camera crew covering the event for a special feature on Keillor. Somehow, it seemed that not only Keillor was in the spotlight, his friends were in it as well.

One lady came smiling from ear to ear as she proclaimed, "It means so much that he does this. It's a personal touch that we really appreciate." Clearly, in his friends' eyes, Keillor doesn't just sign his books, he comes to visit.

After standing on the sidewalk for 3½ hours to sign some 500 books, Keillor still took the time to answer questions for the Bugle.

New business helps chemically dependent

By Joel Schurke

At Rebuild Resources on Vandalia enthusiasm is contagious. They couple it with confidence and create a foundation for success. And success is what Rebuild Resources is all about.

As the name suggests, Rebuild Resources is rebuilding goals and discovering new abilities of chemically dependent youth. Rebuild Resources provides an employment opportunity that serves as a bridge between treatment centers and employment in the "real world," a bridge that many chemically dependent youth never cross.

"We are trying to teach basic work fundamentals: Learn to do your work. Be on time. Cooperate with your fellow workers. Basically, what it means to hold a job," said Jack Wiborg, marketing manager.

These fundamentals are taught by imposing real world demands in a real business setting. Rebuild Resources established themselves in a market niche where there is virtually no competition. This was done to insure that other businesses would not be adversely affected by Rebuild Resources' success. The employees dismantle used fork lift trucks. After testing the parts, they are cleaned and catalogued. An inventory of parts is maintained on a computer and the parts are sold and shipped nationwide. Each step is a hands on, learning-by-doing experience.

Seminary dedicates new building

By Becky Hirdman

A "moment of joy." This was the sentiment of Dr. Lloyd Svendsbye, president of Luther Northwestern Seminary, at the dedication service of the seminary's new Chapel/Campus Center on Oct. 11. The new building, located at the corner of Fulham St. and Hendon Ave. is centrally situated on the school grounds and realizes the seminary's concern for unifying the campus.

This theme of unity directed the planning and building of the new multi-purpose building. It was designed by architects Hammel Green and Abrahamson who caught the vision of the Luther Northwestern faculty, staff and students for a shelter where they could be and act together as a community.

The new complex ties together the geographical areas at the seminary known as the upper and lower campuses. It has a low profile exterior in order to blend with the existing buildings on campus and the surrounding residential area. The interior, however, is spacious and airy with high vaulted ceilings. Peaceful earth-tone materials of wood and stone are blended to enrich the space with warmth.

The center, therefore, integrates the campus physically but also as a community since the new complex houses the food service, dining rooms and commons area, as well as the new Chapel of the Incarnation where the service of dedication was held.

Pastor Richard Vangerud, president of the alumni association, noted during the dedication service that it has been about 37 years since Luther Seminary students have had a true chapel to worship in. During the past years students have been worshipping in the auditorium of Aagaard Hall.

Northwestern students have worshipped in a new chapel more recently. In 1967 their new building with a chapel was built adjacent to Luther Seminary on the former grounds of Breck School. When the two schools merged in 1982, Northwestern students began worshipping with the Luther students since their chapel was too small to accommodate the enlarged student body.

The new Chapel of the Incarnation will easily hold the entire Luther Northwestern

District 12 Community Council NEWS

November 1984

This space brought to Bugle readers by District 12 Community Council.

Edited by Judy Flinn.

Megard chosen

Megard

Bobby Megard has been named community organizer by the District 12 Council. Megard lives in St. Anthony Park and has been active in community activities for many years. She has served on the board of directors of the St. Anthony Park Association, working on permit parking and the blockworker program. Recently she completed a two-year term as president of the St. Paul League of Women Voters. She is currently involved with promotion and sales of Indians in Minnesota, the League of Women Voters of Minnesota's recent publication on Indian issues.

Megard will begin her duties at the District 12 office on November 1.

Design review for new bank

A Design Review Committee has been formed by District 12 to provide Park Associates with community input regarding several issues of neighborhood concern. The committee was included in the Housing and Redevelopment Authority's preliminary authorization for the issuance of revenue bonds. It will meet this fall and winter to discuss the exterior appearance of the building and parking and traffic problems in the area. It will also make a recommendation to the council about the proposed partial closing of Gove Place. Members of the committee are Quentin Elliott, Judy Flinn, Ellen Healy, Janie Schomberg and Rich Slind. Working with them are Park Associates' members Steve Wellington and Joe Michels, Department of Planning and Economic Development staff Dave Gontarek and Bill Huser, and project architect Jack Boarman. Residents who desire more information about times and locations of committee meetings should call the District 12 office. A progress report will be made to the District Council at its Nov. 13 meeting; anyone who is interested is urged to attend the meeting at 7 p.m. at 2380 Hampden.

The District 12 Community Council is a group of 21 citizens elected to serve the District 12 area of St. Paul, including residents of north and south St. Anthony Park, commerce and industry. It is one of 17 citizen participation councils in the city.

The council meets the second Wednesday of every month. All meetings are open to the public. Check for location.

Langford remodeling progresses

Remodeling of the Langford Park Recreation Center gymnasium has been awarded the highest priority by the task force currently studying the building's needs. An activity room for arts and crafts and quiet games and a public meeting room were also highly ranked. The committee used a variety of needs assessments to determine the activities it would like to see offered and then established the types of rooms needed for these activities.

In November, task force members will interview architects who have submitted plans for the building. One will be selected to work with the task force and the Parks and Recreation department on a design for the building. This design will be presented to the community at a public meeting to be sponsored by District 12 in late December or early January. Community reaction will be invited at that time. Following the public meeting, the District 12 Council will review the plan and make its recommendation to the city. Construction is expected to start by the spring of 1986.

Bus shelter debate continues

Are new bus shelters needed in District 12? If they are needed, where should they be located? Do the backlit advertising panels on the shelters currently being built constitute visual clutter?

The District Council recently debated these and other questions related to Ad Shelters, Inc.'s proposal to locate five new shelters in this area. Because neither the city of St. Paul nor the Metropolitan Transit Commission (MTC) have funds available to build new bus shelters, the city has awarded a franchise to Ad Shelters to construct up to 100 new shelters. The company will pay the building cost and then charge a fee for advertising panels placed on the structures and has proposed a number of sites within District 12. They are the southwest corner of Como and Eustis, the northeast corner of Como and Gibbs, the south side of Como between Fifield and Stella, the southwest corner of University and Carleton and the southwest corner of University and Pelham. MTC ridership figures for all but the University/Pelham location showed estimated ridership to be fewer than 10 riders per day. At University and Pelham there is an average of 25 to 40 riders per day. A minimum of 40 riders has been used by MTC in planning construction of shelters.

The Council voted to oppose the four low ridership sites and reserve judgment on the University/Pelham location until it receives further information about cost and design. District 12 opposition has been forwarded to the city Traffic Engineering Division. Final determination of the sites will be made by the City Council.

However, the questions remain about the need for bus shelters. Are there locations within District 12 that need shelters? Neighborhood residents are invited to call the district office with their suggestions and comments.

Meals-on-Wheels

Additional drivers for Meals-on-Wheels are currently needed. Several longtime, regular drivers are retiring and replacements are needed to guarantee the continued daily delivery of meals. Anyone who is available one day a month between 11:15 a.m. and 12:30 p.m. is urged to call the District 12 office.

Thanks from the community to regular drivers Nancy Breneman, Elaine Frost, Linda Gustafson, Jim Rogen, Donna Anfinson, Bryant Dunshee, Ann-Marie and John Binda, Audrey Craven, Bob Bacon, Mildred Bates, Betty Quie, Joe and Elvera Skovholt, Ann-Liv Bacon, Florence Richards, Gaye Larson, Mary Mergenthal, Ann Copeland and Katherine Eklund.

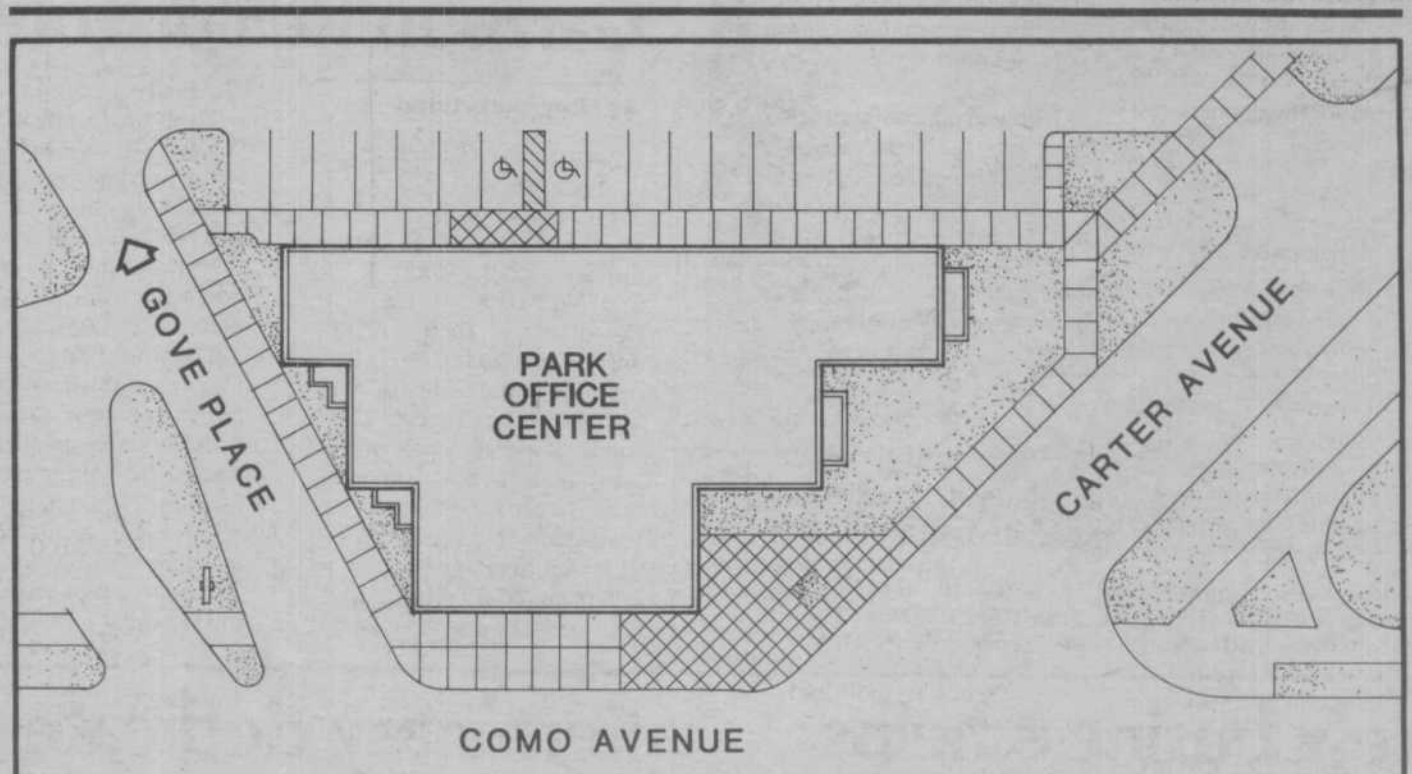

Thanks also to substitute drivers Ann Casey, Earl Bergerud, Carlotta Braun, Adele Fadden, Mary Ann Jens, JoAnn Martin, Mae Thompson, Jessie Merrill, Anneke Jessup, Ginner Ruddy, Jane Dietl, Warren and Kiki Gore, Janet Dieterich, Gen Nakanishi, Ann Wynia and Turid Ormseth.

Compost site

The District 12 compost site will be open one more weekend this fall. The site, located on Robbins between Bayless and Marvel, will be open 10 a.m.-4 p.m., Nov. 2 and 3. Please place grass clippings and leaves in the marked location; no brush or tree branches will be accepted.

Thanks

The District 12 Council thanks the St. Anthony Park Association for its $1000 gift. The generous contribution has been placed in a fund earmarked for the eventual purchase of a computer.

This is a bird's eye view of the proposed site plan for the St. Anthony Park office building proposed by Park Associates. The plan is still tentative and is under review. The building will house ParkBank and other offices. The current 15-car parking area east of the alley will remain intact.

This year remember your older neighbors with a holiday gift to the Block Nurse program. Perhaps someone you know is still living at home because of services provided by this program—consider a gift on behalf of that person—or you might give in appreciation for the efforts of the block nurses, block companions and volunteers who have enriched the lives of over 70 neighborhood residents. Perhaps instead you will want to give because the program is working—helping your elderly neighbors stay in their homes by providing them with caring, cost-effective support.

Thanks from those who have been helped and those who will be in the future!

Your tax-deductible gift may be sent to: St. Anthony Park Block Nurse Program, 2380 Hampden, St. Paul MN 55114.

Arts Forum celebrates American Music Week

As part of American Music Week, two husband-wife teams will perform music by Minnesota composer Libby Larsen and 81-year-old Ohio composer Elizabeth Gould at the first in the 1985-86 St. Anthony Park Arts Forum concert series. The concert will be held at 4 p.m., Nov. 10 at St. Anthony Park United Church of Christ. Julia Bogorad, now in her ninth season as principal flutist of the St. Paul Chamber Orchestra, will perform with her husband Charles Ullery, principal bassoon with the same orchestra. He is also on the music faculty at St. Olaf College.

The other performers for the first concert will be Harry Clark and Sanda Schuldmann. Since their debut in 1974 at Carnegie Hall, American cellist Clark and Rumanian-born Israeli pianist Schuldmann have become THE American cello-piano duo.

In addition to music by Larsen and Gould, the program will also include trios and duos by Haydn, Mozart, Weber and Chopin.

The series is sponsored by the St. Anthony Park Arts Forum, with partial funding from the Northwest Area Foundation and the Metropolitan Regional Arts Council.

Tickets are available at the Bibelot Shop, Micawber's Bookstore or at the door one hour before the concert.

Lauderdale development planned

At the Oct. 15 Lauderdale City Council meeting a resolution was adopted approving preliminary development plans for Rosehill Estates Planned Unit Development. The project consists of 42 townhouses and 84 units of multi-family rental housing on a 7.93 acre parcel formerly known as Rose Hill Nursery.

A special council meeting was held Oct. 29 to adopt a resolution calling for the sale of tax increments financing bonds. A second special council meeting will be held Nov. 26 to sell the bonds.

This project will require rezoning the land from C-1 conservation to R-1 residential.

Recycling Unlimited still in limbo

The Finance Committee of the Ramsey County Board recently denied Recycling Unlimited the extra $86,500 it requested to continue operation.

The firm says it needs the money to pay back salaries and to operate for the rest of the year. The county is critical of the nonprofit firm for failing to live up to its contract to make curbside pickups of recyclable materials.

It appears that local curbside pickups and even pickups at the banks will not be reinstated in the near future.

Wynia announced Project 120

State Representative Ann Wynia encourages area high school seniors and juniors to apply for a special week-long workshop on state government during the 1986 legislative session.

The program, entitled Project 120, gives student an opportunity to get a close look at the inner workings of the legislative process and meet with decision-makers to find out how and why decisions are made. The program is conducted by Urban Concerns, a non-partisan political education organization. "I have seen this program in operation over a number of years," says Wynia, "and I believe it succeeds not only in educating the participants, but in sparking their enthusiasm for becoming more involved in local and state government."

More information is available from high school social studies teachers or by phoning 645-0853. Deadline for applications is Nov. 29.

Roseville school referendum fails

Residents of Roseville defeated a referendum which called for a change in the system of electing school board members. In the Oct. 15 vote, the proposal which would have done away with the current at-large voting system was soundly defeated. The referendum was requested by residents of the east side of the district who are unhappy about the closing of Kellogg High School. It was not generally favored by voters in the west side of the district, including Lauderdale and Falcon Heights.

Falcon Heights adds two positions

Beginning in 1986, there will be two new positions in Falcon Heights. A full-time daytime fireman will be added as well as a part-time year-around Director of Parks and Recreation. Detailed job descriptions for the positions are being finalized. Interested applicants should contact City Hall.

Martinson speaks at Life Issues Forum

Dr. Ida Martinson will be the featured speaker at the second Life Issues Forum of the season. The forum is sponsored by churches in St. Anthony Park and offers opportunity for learning and discussion with residents whose professional specialties touch on moral, ethical and theological issues of interest to the community.

Martinson is a Park resident but is currently chairperson of the Department of Family Health Care Nursing at the University of California School of Nursing. She is credited with originating the idea of St. Anthony Park's Block Nurse Program. She developed the plan after participating in the White House Conference on Aging. She was part of the original meetings to begin planning for the project and was on the first board of directors.

Martinson's topic at the Nov. 7 session forum is "Caring for your health after retirement." The session will be held at St. Anthony Park United Church of Christ at 7:30 p.m. that evening.

Pay Less to the IRS — Open an IRA Today

If you don't already have an Individual Retirement Account (IRA), you are paying more taxes than you have to and you are missing out on a tremendous savings opportunity.

Savings #1 Reduce Your Taxable Income

Your Federal taxable income and also your state taxable income (beginning in the tax year 1985) is reduced by the amount of your IRA contribution. You may deposit up to $2,000.00 per year in your IRA although it is not necessary to contribute the entire amount. The more you contribute, the better your tax benefits will be.

Savings #2 All Interest Earned is Tax Deferred

You pay no taxes on the interest you earn until you withdraw your funds from your IRA. At that time, you will probably be in a lower tax bracket.

If you do not currently have the money available to open an IRA, ParkBank can lend you up to $2,000.00 in order to make your deposit. The money that you borrow is your investment in a more financially secure future. As your IRA continues to grow, the interest you pay on your loan is offset to a great degree by the interest you earn on your IRA investment as illustrated below in the hypothetical example:

A cry for help

A number of parents of first graders at St. Anthony Park Elementary School are wondering if anyone at the St. Paul School's district office is listening. Their children are students in what is now known as a satellite school. If this and other schools who are not designated as magnet schools are satellites, it might be assumed that 360 Colburne, school district headquarters, is the control tower. Then it might also be expected that someone there would be listening for cries of help or messages of discovery from the satellites in the system.

Not so, apparently. Parents from this school appeared before the school board over a month ago with a petition signed by 85 local parents. They requested the assignment of another first grade teacher to relieve overcrowding at that grade level. They expressed their concern about the difficulties of providing adequate instruction for so many children with such a range of readiness.

Now, two months into the school year, nothing has yet happened. Dr. Bennett, or whoever is sitting at the controls, either does not hear the call for help or is choosing not to answer.

Last May Dr. Bennett, Superintendent of St. Paul Schools, spoke to parents at this school about the magnet program. He assured parents that the money and effort which was being directed toward magnet schools would not adversely affect the satellite schools. Since the current influx of students crowding local classrooms is a direct result of enrollment limits in magnet schools, it would appear he was wrong. Classroom teachers here are faced with extremely diverse instructional needs because many of the children who were forced to enroll here are now ineligible for special government-funded help they badly need. It would appear that Dr. Bennett was wrong again.

Last March, in this space, we raised questions about the viability of the magnet system for elementary students. We still feel those concerns were right. But we also said that St. Anthony Park, because it was not a magnet, would escape the problems this year. We admit we were wrong about that.

Now if Dr. Bennett would admit he was wrong and provide additional teachers for this school and 12 others in the same plight, perhaps we could all get on with the business of education. And perhaps we'd have more possibility of keeping this school as a neighborhood school rather than one which parents feel they must bypass to get what their children need.

The satellite is calling. Is anybody listening?

A guide to modern canning

This time of year always reminds me of canning. It's a time when nature pours forth her bounty on those who have driven all the way out to work in the garden plot every weekend all summer long. And once the harvest is in, something must be done with it all or it will spoil, so you can it.

At least, that's the way it used to be.

When I was a kid we had a big garden in a vacant lot behind our house. When it was finally time to pick everything, we kids would go out with big shiny coffee cans under our arms to bring in the harvest so my mom could can it. But it was so hard to resist the flavor of those fresh vegetables out there in the garden that quite a lot of the bounty got eaten on the spot. Then my mom would scold us from the back porch. "Don't eat that now. We have to have enough for canning." The way I saw it, it was all going to end up in our bellies anyway, so why not eat it then and there, while it tasted good, instead of later when it tasted yucky? I could eat a garden-fresh raw tomato a whole lot easier in November than I could a stewed tomato in February.

And the canning process always seemed like such a major operation. It totally took over the kitchen for days. There were jars and lids and rubber rings and ladles. But the centerpiece was the pressure cooker. It looked like a cheap prop from a Flash Gordon serial, with its gauge on the top and steam whistling out from under the lid that was screwed down tight all around. I can remember looking up at the pressure cooker as it rocked and rumbled on top of the stove, and my mom looking down at me and telling me to leave the kitchen because it was dangerous and that the thing could blow up. And I remember thinking that whatever was in that horrible, hissing pot was going to end up on my supper plate in a few months.

Well, that was then, and this is now, and I don't know too many people who can vegetables any more. But I know more and more people who are doing a more modern version of canning. Today, instead of canning vegetables, we can 'experiences.'

There is a fervor in the land for capturing every remotely significant event and preserving it so that it can be savored and enjoyed later on.

Gone are the Mason jars and rubber rings and pressure cookers of yesterday. Today's canning utilizes the latest in modern technology from Japan, such as tape recorders, and cameras, and video recorders. It's just as complicated as the canning my mother did, but it's a lot less dangerous.

And what do we choose to preserve in this era of modern canning? Just about anything.

I myself choose to can mostly events of family importance. I now proudly own shelves upon shelves of preserved birthday parties, piano recitals, baptisms, first days of school, and close-ups of gaps where baby teeth used to be. I have cassette tapes of various goo-goo's and da-da's which I am sure I will listen to with great delight.

Illustration by Warren Hanson

Modern canners, just like their predecessors, all can according to their own tastes. Many harvest and store television programs. One neighbor proudly points to a whole row of video cassettes holding two years worth of MacNeil-Lehrer Reports, which he is, by golly, going to sit down and watch someday.

Another friend, who lives in an area already blessed with cable television, selects on ly the choicest fruits from HBO canning. But I have seen her collection, and I think some of what she has canned was rotten before she picked it.

Oh, the new canning is wonderful, don't get me wrong. But there is something to be said for enjoying an experience when it is fresh, while you're standing out there in the garden, as it were, instead of later on a screen or a piece of photographic paper. It seems to me that so much of the original flavor is lost in canning.

I have my son's first piano recital on 35mm slides. But in taking those pictures, I got so wrapped up in focus and lighting and shutter speed that by the time I took the pictures and put the camera down, he was done playing. I had missed it.

Likewise, I am seldom a participant in my kids' birthday parties, because I am too busy standing on the edges of the action, canning the experience for later on. I find that, when I look at the pictures later, I say things like, "Gee, you had a lot of kids at your party. Did you have fun?"

And I didn't walk to school with my daughter on her first day of kindergarten, I walked behind her, with a camera stuck to my face, so she can look at the pictures years from now. She will ask, "Where were you, Dad?" And I'll say, "That's me, the long shadow in the foreground."

I think it would be great if we could all get together and share some of our favorite canned goods. I propose having a St. Anthony Park Canned Experience Smorgasbord. We could all meet in the basement of the Congregational church and sample each other's best canning efforts. Does anyone have a good recipe for canning the 4th of July parade?

Letters

Lamenting the landmarks

Dear Editor:

Ah, what we do in the name of landmarks and history. In the last issue of the Bugle, Susan Barker wrote a letter lamenting the loss of The Kiosk (a divinely anointed capitalization, no doubt), while I also discovered that the tree near the library is a Caroling Tree (again, perhaps divinely anointed). It's good that people care about the little things in the neighborhood, yet there's a distressing tendency to ignore the major problems. In Joel Schurke's cover story regarding the development plans for the H.B. Fuller site (October Bugle), I was struck by his last paragraph: "It is evident that the group respects the concerns of the neighboring residents and has made an issue [sic] to address the issues brought forth." Balderdash! Develop, develop, develop—that's what this group is saying. There has not been one mention of renovation of the building, which has historical significance both as one of the original buildings in the area and as the first site of the old Bethel Academy, which at the time was a high school. There's nothing that suggests that the building is structurally unsound, nor that it could not be renovated ala Baker School, removing that hideous 50s-style facade. Assuming that the article is factually correct, all people are concerned about is whether there will be a parking problem—they don't seem to care about the hazardous effects of overzealous development in the neighborhood. Kiss another landmark goodbye. Kevin Reichard

Kudos

Dear Editor:

I grew up in North St. Anthony Park and didn't move until 1982. We enjoy reading the Bugle and know what is going on. We like it down here but we miss the people we knew in the park. Florence Hoska Crossroad, TN.

Dear Editor:

I really enjoy reading the Bugle every month. It's fun keeping up with the exciting activities of the Park where I spent my first 21 years. I still recognize many of the names and I enjoy the memories it brings back. Karen Rice Linnell W. Bloomfield, Michigan

Keep in touch!

Don't forget to keep the Bugle informed when someone in your family or block does something of note, when someone dies, and when you're planning a meeting or event which the Bugle could help you publicize.

Right now, we're especially looking for someone who's interested in compiling the monthly calender of events. We're also looking for leads about people in the area with interesting hobbies or pets.

Call the Bugle office, 646-5369, if you have ideas on any of the above or if you'd simply like to chat about the paper and its mission.

Growing up in St. Anthony Park

By Marjorie Herrmann Cox

St. Anthony Park is the "Jewel in the Crown" of St. Paul. The natural and man-made boundaries set it apart as a small town community within the confines of a large city. The joys of growing up there were unlimited and unbounded. There perhaps was a certain unreality about it and a protection from some of the grimmer aspects of life. There was a comfortable sameness about the houses, none too ostentatious and none too run-down. The parents were much the same in education and employment; so there were not sharp contrasts. This perhaps, was good and bad. It did not allow for comparison and understanding of what had to be accepted by some walks of life. But surely the strong points far outweighed any disadvantages. Adulthood allowed for becoming acquainted with the seamy side of living.

Seven of us who became friends in kindergarten and continued the thread of friendship throughout the years gathered for a reunion this past summer. In retrospect we could revel in the joys and sorrows of living. We shared the usual childhood school experiences of going to Guttersten School on Como Ave. There were wise teachers and leaders who helped to direct youthful exuberance and talents. Murray Junior High School seemed like a marvel of modern living after the old, but acceptable, high ceilings, high windows, dark lavatories in the base-

Raymond/Hampden: action at last

By Joel Schurke

Something is finally happening at the intersection of Raymond and Hampden. After at least a decade of discussion it is undergoing channelization, sans gondolas. One would presume a decade of design considerations would yield monumental results, something on the order of solar powered semaphores. Well, this project, which is still slated to begin this fall, consists of painting some lines, changing a yield sign to a stop sign and constructing a cement island to redirect traffic.

According to Jim Stahnke, Traffic Engineering, city of St. Paul, the Raymond and Hampden intersection "is a big, wide-open piece of asphalt where traffic movements are not well-defined. We are taking the simple approach. This is a minimum proposal. It is going to make it clearer to the motorist where to go without recirculating traffic. Our recommendation was to do this in phases and continue evaluating to see how things go."

Big and wide is an apt description. There is plenty of room; maybe enough for commuter parking lots, tennis courts or even a small-scale high rise. Why waste this space? Rest assured it won't be wasted as this is only phase I. Who knows, the gondolas may come yet.

Changes are planned this fall for the Raymond/Hampden intersection in South St. Anthony Park. After long discussion with neighbors, the city will soon begin work on improvements to help channel traffic and prevent accidents. More complex changes such as stop lights have been omitted from the present plan.

Memories from 5

ment and uneven playground at Gutterson.

Then came the parting of the ways for the seven of us. One went to University High School and one to John Marshall in Minneapolis. The remaining five went to St. Paul Central which meant we had to take three different street cars in order to get to school. We decided this was a worthy choice because Central had the best college preparatory work.

In spite of separation and the friendship thread becoming thinner at various times, there was a continued interest in each other, and St. Anthony Park remained the focal point of fun and activities.

College involved further separations, but relationships held fast. Then came WW II and the hazards of living. Two who were in the Park became involved with helping to establish some sort of project for the sailors who came from Farragut, Idaho, and ended up sick in the health center on the Farm Campus. It is no longer acceptable to refer to the campus this way. Today it is the St. Paul Campus, and that is right. The University of Minnesota encompasses more and includes many areas of study in St. Paul. But the club of Servicemen's Wives tried to help in creating some diversion for those struggling to recover from rheumatic fever.

After marriages, the seven were scattered, and then most had children which meant that days were filled with the many activities of growing families. Many of these families went to visit grandparents in St. Anthony Park and also came to appreciate the caring atmosphere and had happy times walking to Guertens' for a frosty lime or other ice cream treat, shopping for toys or going to the library.

This close knit community was there to respond to the joys and the tragedies including the ones who were lost in "The War." Compassion and understanding were extended, and warm embraces offered encouragement.

It seemed as if the Park was one area where an ecumenical feeling among churches existed long before it was touted nationwide. There was a give and take and sharing, and a summer exchange of pulpits. It was joyful and expressed a true love of human beings.

Now with children grown and more time for contemplation and travel, the seven met at the lake home of one of the group. They enjoyed days of comradeship, of reminiscences and nostalgia as they strolled the streets of beloved St. Anthony Park in memory.

Latimer & Saint Paul work together.

This community garden in South Saint Anthony Park was picked as the best in the Midwest because the whole community worked for it.

A group of neighbors chose the spot. Their District Council financed the start-up loan. The railroad leased the land. Air Force Reservists cleared the plot. The City contributed a composting site and legal advice. A local landscaper agreed to dump his clippings. More than fifty gardeners dug in. And last, but not least, the prize money from the American Community Gardening Association paid off the loan to hook up the water.

This is a story George Latimer loves: community action at the grassroots.

Betsy Zimmerman and her colleagues are enjoying their new business of cloning plants.

Cloning is out of the closet

By Barbara Thoenke

Cloning is coming out of the closet and into a newly renovated plant tissue culture lab on Albany Ave. It all began two years ago when three women, Mary Hosier, Elizabeth Zimmerman and Kathryn Louis, got together and realized they all had the same idea for starting their own plant cloning business. They combined their 15 years of experience and formed Minn vitro, a plant propagation company, in Hosier's basement. From one shoot they could produce hundreds or even thousands of identical plants.

Last year when they produced 40,000 plants, their basement quarters became cramped. In June, they moved to the "real facility that's just the right size," according to Hosier.

The cloning techniques they use require a very sanitary environment, reflected by the white walls and clean work rooms. Cleanliness is important because it is easy for the plants to become diseased and for the disease to spread to other plants. "If you're not clean, you go out of business," Hosier said.

But why not just plant seeds, instead of going through the intricate process of cloning, cutting a tiny piece of a plant and growing it in a baby food jar filled with a special gel containing plant growth hormones? For one thing, seeds for these types of plants do not produce the identical plant they came from, and cloning produces high quality plants in a short time.

They sell the plants in a variety of stages, from non-rooted cuttings to potted plants to plants that are ready to be planted in the fields of farmers.

When Minn vitro began, they concentrated on blueberries because there was a high demand for them and they were easy to cultivate, Hosier said. They sell the blueberry plants to farmers at pick-your-own blueberry nurseries.

For the farmer, the plants are an investment. The cost of $3,000 per acre for blueberry plants may seem high initially, but the farmer profits because the blueberry bushes, like apple trees, grow back for at least 30 years, each plant producing seven or eight pounds of fruit a year, Hosier explained.

Besides blueberries, the trio also cultivates azaleas, tarragon and chestnuts. They are also attempting to grow plants which are more difficult to cultivate.

When they're not working in their plant tissue lab, all three are busy at the University of Minnesota. Hosier manages a tissue culture lab where graduate students work on thesis problems and experiments. Louis and Zimmerman are working on their PhDs. Zimmerman said that even though working at the lab and going to school are time-consuming, the knowledge she gains from each is beneficial to the other.

Now that the three have successfully established Minn vitro in this area, they are trying to develop markets worldwide by attending national meetings and advertising. The cloned plants are easy to sell internationally because they are easy to transport and stay healthy in a small disease free flask.

Although they hope their plants can soon be sold a long distance away, they are quite content working in the neighborhood. They enjoy the neighbors and according to Hosier, "It's easy to find and close to the U of M."

Rebuild from 1

"This is a business and it is being run as a business. We need to be concerned about quality, customer service and insuring that the employees know they are having a real business experience," Tom Johnson, development director, stated.

Frank completed treatment for chemical dependency and started with Rebuild Resources just after Labor Day. He said, "The actual skills I am gaining are with management and computer operations. I believe in learning what I can. This place has helped build up my feeling of self-worth and accomplishment. Chuck (Weinke, operations manager) is very knowledgeable and is willing to take the time to share his knowledge. Not very many management people do that."

Not very many management people will find their employees new jobs either, but another aspect of Rebuild Resources is job placement for their graduates. "We have an out-placement service that finds jobs for employees after five to seven months working here. There are a variety of job applications for the skills of these youth. We are developing a network of a variety of businesses that have expressed an interest in our graduates," said Tom Johnson.

Harry is celebrating two and a half months of sobriety. He has worked at Rebuild Resources for three weeks. He commented, "This program isn't just taking apart fork lifts. It's to build and restore you. I am learning to focus on helping myself."

That's the point concisely put. Rebuild Resources not only salvages parts; they salvage people.

Editor's note. Church, business and community support for Rebuild Resources has been great. Currently they are in need of more contacts for their outplacement job service, more fork lift trucks, tools and shop equipment. Contact Tom Johnson 874-8823 or Jack Wiborg, 645-7055.

Block Nurse help needed

By Marge Jamieson

The St. Anthony Park Block Nurse Program has been caring for people age 65 and over for about three years. It offers services that are in great demand, such as shampoos, bathing, nutrition and house-keeping, and help keep people out of nursing homes. A Block Companion under the direction of a Block Nurse goes into homes to provide this care. Some Block Companions can work with only one client a few hours a week while others work almost full-time.

Block Companions are especially needed in South St. Anthony Park because the Block Nurse Program will be going into Seal Hi-Rise Nov. 1. Potential applicants for these paid positions can call the Director of Services, Marge Jamieson, 644-4524.

Neck strain from poor posture, or from an accident of some kind, can result in a variety of shoulder, arm or hand problems, with accompanying pain. The cause is often an irritation or "pinching" of the large nerves in the neck as they leave the spine and extend into the extremities. An understanding of these conditions can help you avoid problems and suffering.

Apples for the teachers and the kids

By Dave Merk

At 2:15 p.m. on Oct. 16 the parking lot outside Murray Jr. High School was quiet. Fifteen minutes later reporters from local television stations were swarming the area and public relations people were standing by with their photographers. It wasn't a regular school day.

The commotion was caused by the anticipated arrival of a tractor-trailer full of apples. That's about 13,000 apples. The apples were donated by Murray staff and students cheerfully unload a large load of apples. The apples were a gift from Red Owl and helped to save a special fund-raising project at the school.

Red Owl Food Stores.

On Oct. 7 Murray teacher Dave Hagman was returning from an Afton, Minn. apple orchard with a pickup filled with 7,500 apples. Hagman, who is one of eight teachers in a special program for emotionally disturbed students at Murray, was planning to sell the apples in a fund-raising effort for the program. The apples never made it back to the school.

While he was driving the pickup into St. Paul, the truck's left rear tire blew out. Hagman pulled the truck over to the shoulder where it then caught fire. Despite efforts by passing truckers to put the flames out, the truck and the apples burned, and so did Hagman's hopes for a successful fund-raiser. The truck, owned by fellow teacher Bill Lerman, sustained an estimated $1500-$2000 damage.

Since that time Hagman has been showered with donations, most notably the apples from Red Owl. Red Owl President Pat Schulke saw an article on the incident in the Oct. 15 issue of the Minneapolis Star and Tribune and decided it was a good cause. The next day he set the wheels in motion to donate 100 bushels ($1,000 worth) of apples to Hagman and his students.

The Red-Owl donation isn't the only charity Hagman and his students have received. Apple Side Orchards, where the apples were originally picked, is also donating 110 half-bushels of apples to replace those lost in the fire.

Kathy Workman, an activities coordinator for the three-orchard conglomerate, said the apples will come from one of Apple Side's two other orchards that still have apples left. "I feel really badly," she said, "that they went through the anguish to begin with."

Hagman also received a call from a man in Harmony, Minn. who offered to let him and his students come pick pumpkins for free. Another man called anonymously to offer any amount of money needed.

"It just really reaffirms my belief in the media," Hagman said, "and their ability to reach so many people." Without the media's help the relief might not have come through as strongly." Hagman said he is thankful also for the constant support from St. Anthony Park businesses who had originally ordered apples from the fundraiser.

Things looked pretty hopeless early in October. But now it appears that Dave "The Apple Man" Hagman and his students will probably come out ahead in this year's fund drive—thanks to a lot of help from their friends.

Opus 1 contest

(from cover)

For years, Noble and Forsberg have taken their special pumpkins to a special location in St. Anthony Park late Halloween night. It's their way to keep the fun alive a bit longer.

When the Bugle called, they were surprised that there'd been a security leak on the project. They always thought they would go unnamed forever.

But they've agreed to put the pumpkin in a special place in St. Anthony Park again this year. Bugle readers should be watching late Halloween night or early Nov. 1. If you see Opus 1, call the Bugle office, 646-5369. The first caller will get a prize and an announcement in our next issue.

Politics '85

In an attempt to inform your voting and provide a review of candidates we offer a short statement by most of the candidates. Mayoral candidates were to choose one issue in their city/ward and comment on how they'd address it, if elected.

School board candidates were asked to address the question: What, in your opinion, is the value and purpose of public education?

Candidates' responses are presented here unedited except in cases where the response exceeded the word limit.

Falcon Heights

There are four polling places in Falcon Heights. Residents who need voting information should call the Falcon Heights City Hall, 644-5050. Voters will be choosing the city's mayor and two city council members.

Mayoral

Tom Baldwin

The single overriding issue in this campaign is the Mayor's potential effectiveness. Small city councils are not groups of people who sit around making "cat and dog ordinances." The person who chairs the Falcon Heights City Council (which is the Mayor's primary function) must be conversant in state statutes affecting the city, must be constantly aware of county decisions that have an impact on the city, must be able to deal with the diverse personalities of the city's permanent staff, our consultants, and each of the individual council members—be able to draw the best from each in order to provide the best possible government for our residents.

In addition, the Mayor must be able to win the confidence of city residents—must be able to insure them that their concerns are being heard and every avenue is being explored to solve whatever city problems might arise. The biggest issue in this campaign, the biggest question for voters to ask themselves is, "Which Mayoral candidate is best suited to meet the demands of a complex and intricate job?"

Irene Struck

I'm a graduate of Murray High School in St. Anthony Park and am now running for mayor of Falcon Heights. I have a graduate degree in banking and was employed in the banking business for over 20 years.

Having served as an active member in official capacities with numerous organizations, I also served as a judge of election and was a council candidate two years ago.

As a responsible lifelong area resident homeowner with business and corporate experience, I feel we need more reasonable and prudent leadership. The elected officials should be responsible first to the people of our city, not to outside forces or special interests. We have a fine community where both the resident people and the business people should have the freedom to express their views and upon agreeable progressive compromise, feel proud to say, "I live (or have my business) in Falcon Heights."

Council

Philip Chenoweth

Falcon Heights has seen more commercial and residential growth involving direct City participation in the past few years than it has in its lifetime as a City. This partnership in commercial and residential growth was not by accident, but was carried out, for the most part, through careful planning which involved the developers, their lending institutions, the City Council and staff, and paid consultants.

My 30 years of City residence and 22 years of experience in the direct planning and financing of municipal projects throughout Minnesota and adjoining states gives me a special insight which is of benefit to the Council and my community.

The City still faces the continuing renovation of the Snelling/Larpenteur intersection and other projects which will directly involve its Council. The recent past projects need careful monitoring, and future projects will require a knowledgeable Council aware of the ramifications connected with their development.

As a concerned incumbent I will continue to serve by listening and evaluating the projects' merits for the good of the community.

Paul Ciernia

Thank you for the opportunity to present my thoughts on an issue facing Falcon Heights. I believe the main issue the Falcon Heights City Council will deal with over the next few years will be the continued redevelopment of 'Downtown' Falcon Heights. The viability of this commercial/business area, intersected by Snelling and Larpenteur, is a key ingredient in the overall quality of our City. Unfortunately, proximity to neighborhoods, constrained parking, restricted access and the special financial limits imposed by redevelopment make redevelopment of this area a significant challenge. We have had some modest success in the last year and know the framework for building more successes in the future. This framework includes professional planning services, involved neighbors and businessmen, prudent financial leverage and patience. We will be successful if we blend these opportunities into action. I will work to see that it happens.

Avelyn Hooker

I moved to Falcon Heights 26 years ago because of its desirability as a place to live and educate children. I believe that my contributions to community affairs, as well as my years in public education, provide me with an ability to listen to people and a sensitivity to their needs.

Growth and development are inevitable, however it is important to plan carefully in order to retain the character of the Falcon Heights community. If elected I would urge the council to plan development and construction so as not to encroach on residents' open space.

The other candidate for Falcon Heights City Council is Steve Reiter. Information was not returned.

Lauderdale

Lauderdale residents vote at the Lauderdale City Hall, 1891 Walnut St. On Nov. 5 they'll elect the city's mayor and two city council members.

Willard Anderson

As an appointed councilman I have worked and, if elected, will continue to work for solutions to problems which are in the best interests of our village, whatever the issue.

I've been active in our community for approximately 20 years in several capacities (civic club, zoning administrator local paper, council,...) and feel I understand what the people of Lauderdale desire for our village. I'm always happy and willing to learn citizens' views. They're always welcome to call me.

I have no special projects or campaigns, simply the desire to make good, informed decisions on every matter that comes before the council in the best interests of the people of our village.

Carol Brewster

In Lauderdale there is not one particular issue that stands out that is controlling the election.

I've been a resident for 40 years and am running for council to represent the people of this city.

I feel the council needs someone who can talk to the people, go to the people and let the people know that this is their city and they have their say in it.

I am married to Bob Brewster and we have three teenagers. I also live with my mother Nora Lindgren who is a senior citizen, so I feel I can communicate with all the ages.

Nora Gille

The members of the City Council are obligated to represent and serve all the people of Lauderdale. Therefore, it is important that our elected officials are familiar with our community and how the local community government works. I am dedicated to serving our community in many ways (park and recreation, civic club, and the planning and zoning commission) and very much enjoy working with the people of Lauderdale. The neighbors and neighborhood are important to me. They deserve good representation on the City Council. I can provide this representation in a fair manner.

The other candidate for Lauderdale City Council is Connie Goodman. Information was not returned.

Incumbent David Nelson is running unopposed for mayor of Lauderdale. Information was not returned.

St. Paul

St. Paul voters will choose a mayor and four members of the Board of Education. Voters in Ward 4 will elect their city council representative.

Information on precinct polling places is available from the city election office, 298-5441, or the League of Women Voters, 644-9176. Voters can register at the polls with proper identification indicating residence or with a signed oath by a registered voter in the same precinct verifying residence.

Mayoral

George Latimer

Issue: How can the city of St. Paul become more self-reliant over the next four years? The city of St. Paul has both the resources and abilities to become a more self-reliant city during the next four years. We can become a city that is better able to provide opportunities for all its residents if we continue to strengthen our efforts to create more permanent jobs, especially jobs for dislocated and unemployed workers; build and rehabilitate our stock of sound, affordable housing for all income levels; and maintain a city workforce that delivers city services in an efficient manner. We should continue the strong partnership between the city and our neighborhoods to enable development of innovative service programs, like the St. Anthony Park Block Nurse program, which allow local resources to be applied to serve unique local needs within our community.

George Ostrand

Topic to be addressed: Downtown Tax Subsidized-Tax Deferred Construction Keep our present employment

if possible. A large firm employing 2000 workers has threatened to leave St. Paul if the proposed "River Front" development goes through and takes their land for the project. This $73,000,000 project was submitted to the City by a development firm. This development firm which has done work in St. Paul's Lowertown as of September 25, 1985 had $976,553 Construction Liens filed against it for work done but NOT paid. As Mayor I would require that development firms be required to post a bond to insure prompt payment of the debts. Millions of dollars of over-runs in submitted bids for downtown Tax Subsidized Tax deferred projects are publicized in our newspapers. Recently the City Council refinanced the Port Authority's $21,000,000 loan to Galtier Plaza to provide the developers with $9,000,000 additional for overruns. As Mayor I would "freeze" any such future projects.

Council (Ward 4)

Ann Copeland

Housing deterioration and neighborhood problems caused by major institutions or businesses are major concerns in Ward 4. Housing decline, including illegal conversions, and parking problems can both be addressed in part through increased code enforcement. There is need for uniform interpretation of codes so everyone knows exactly what is allowed.

As your City Council member, I will pressure city departments for consistent enforcement of ordinances already on the books and will introduce additional ordinances as needed. I will seek private funding for a pilot program that would use neighborhood people as an auxiliary to City personnel to help identify and work with code and parking violations. These workers could also help residents find the necessary resources to bring the violations up to code. Those who do not understand the system would be helped and the consistent hard-core violators would be turned over to City Staff with legal enforcement powers so they could quickly follow up and get action and relief for the neighborhood problems.

Kiki Sonnen

The greatest challenge for our community is improving our neighborhood vitality. This can be achieved through a four-point program:

- We must first agree to improve the efficiency of city government in providing quality services so that property taxes can be curbed and eventually lowered.
- Efficiency can best be accomplished by implementing Civil Service reforms. These reforms include consolidating many of the 800-plus Job classifications and giving city managers the freedom to hire and promote the most qualified person.
- The city should utilize private sector type incentives to encourage exceptional performances. We must also apply employee quality circles to identify ways of correcting duplication of city departments.
- Citizen participation should be expanded. Community volunteers could accomplish many important services, including neighborhood planning, tree planting, recreational programming, library services, etc.

Civil Service reform and supplementing city staffing with volunteer efforts can deliver quality services at a cost savings to the taxpayer.

School board 4 year

Lois E. Anderson

I believe the purpose of public education covers three areas: preparing students to enter the working world and to become responsible citizens and helping them develop individual skills and abilities in order to lead fulfilling lives.

Studies indicate that high levels of education will be necessary for most new jobs by the mid-1990s. School curriculum must be challenging and comprehensive so that students have a broad educational background that will allow flexibility in the job market.

Students need to understand our government and history as well as that of other countries and cultures in order to be creative thinkers who ask questions and make informed decisions.

Schools must help individual students assess abilities and set challenging goals and encourage attainment of goals.

Public education has been one of America's gifts to the modern world. Society must continue to uphold these goals and make a dedicated effort to help our schools achieve them.

Daniel B. Bostrom

The purpose of public education is to provide free learning opportunities for ALL children, kindergarten through twelfth grade. This must be an effective program that responds to individual and societal needs. The value of this system educates children and youth to become productive, life-long learners, leading full lives and reaching their full potential.

I feel that every student enrolled in the St. Paul Public Schools must have access to programs that provide quality and equity. Within these programs each child must be given every opportunity possible to develop the basic skills including language, mathematics, science, human relations and physical fitness. All of these skills must be developed in a safe, orderly and concerned environment supported by staff and community.

Our school district has embarked on a long-range program called the Alliance for Effective Schools. This program will involve all 60 of the district's schools in developing district-wide and individual school plans that will accomplish four goals—effectiveness, equity, variety and choice.

Jim Griffin

The dictionary definition of education ...the process of developing the faculties and powers of a student by teaching and instructing, whereby the student acquires knowledge, skill and enlightenment, thus preparing oneself intellectually for mature life.

In my opinion, public education in the United States is the right of every school age American, regardless of race, creed, national origin or economic status.

Education is a way to improve one's station in life, the opportunity to escape poverty and also an opportunity for self-fulfillment. It is a chance for many to prepare themselves for life and to be productive tax-paying citizens of the community. Education is something that, once acquired, can never be taken away from you. Public education is what makes America the greatest country in the world.

Claudia Swanson

Public education has as its goal to make available to all children an opportunity to learn certain academic, social, physical, and practical skills. This opportunity is offered without regard to race, sex, religion, or socioeconomic status. One outcome we look for is a higher level of literacy in our population.

Our country benefits from having an educated populace. As we plan and develop new communities, new industries, and new technologies, our people use their educations to learn and grow in expertise in their various occupations ranging from carpenter's helper to architect, from nurse aide to medical specialist.

Our country takes pride in its diversity of talents. Public education helps our people develop their talents and skills. This is the value of public education.

Eleanor Weber

Explanations of the purposes of public education are as diverse as our citizenry. They encompass lofty ideals—handing down the accumulated wisdom of the past—as well as cynical beliefs—keeping kids out of mischief. For me, public education has a threefold purpose. First, it must teach every child to understand the shared mission of our country and the western world. To gain this understanding children must learn the English language, and as much as they are able of the arts, literature, history, science, mathematics, business, and American democratic values. Second, public education must teach our children from diverse backgrounds how to live and work together with mutual respect and understanding. Last, youth should graduate from our schools prepared to enter the adult world of work, community involvement, and continued learning.

The other candidate for the four-year-term is Mabel Evans Cason. Information was not returned.

School board 2 year

Justyna "Tina" Johnson

Public education should be to serve the parents, and educators should aid the parents in decisions concerning their children. Ultimately, the schools should reflect the ideals of the family. The Board of Education's responsibility should be the support of that system. To accomplish that, communications is a must, keeping the parent informed by a possible briefing of courses, their goals and objectives, especially in the secondary level. Also, careful evaluation is necessary to assure that progress is being made and testing done prior to graduation so that no one is denied achievement within their own limits. Another important goal is to hold class size to a minimum and to increase the use of teacher aides, for we must not cheat any student of the attention he or she needs. If we do, we have defeated our very purpose of quality learning for all students. Without value there is no purpose.

G. William (Bill) Carlson

Public education has at least four major goals: to provide a pluralistic, democratic learning environment in which students from diverse constituencies in our community can learn how to work together; to provide a quality, competency based learning experience with high expectations for all members of society regardless of economic and social status, handicap, ethnic background, or sex; and to develop a broad based financial and community support structure to allow for an enriched learning environment which stimulates creative thought and positive contributions to the neighborhood.

These can be accomplished through the implementation of effective schools which have a creative curriculum with teachers modeling an excitement of learning; a strong disciplined learning environment; an effective parent/student/teacher organization involved in supporting the academic experience; reasonable and consistent student competency expectations with immediate feedback; and a frequent and clear communication process.

Raymond Avenue bridge—a closer look

Raymond Ave. bridge is an eyesore to many—too narrow to meet a truck comfortably, dangerous in the winter, a hazard for bicyclists. But Truman Olson's photos show that the bridge which joins the two parts of St. Anthony Park is a thing a beauty, if you look closely. There'll be a new bridge one of these days, so enjoy these photos and look at it from a new perspective next time you cross.

Library from 1

the community's responsibility to pay for the operation of the library. The St. Anthony Park Branch Library, built in 1917, was given $26,000 by the Carnegie Corporation, and the money needed for land was raised by the Improvement Association of St. Anthony Park.

Today the St. Anthony Park Branch Library Association works diligently to raise money for books, new furniture and building improvements. The organization is 50 years old and promotes cooperation between the library and the community, paying close attention to words once said by Carnegie, "No person and no community can be permanently helped except by their own cooperation."

Janie Schomberg, president of the Library association, says the community is very involved with the library but she'd like to see more people give input into what the group can do for the neighborhood library.

"This library gets high community use," said Schomberg, "but I would like to see us utilize more people within the Association itself."

Librarian Kathy Heiderich stated that the Library Association has been extremely helpful in raising money. "I've never worked at another branch where there has been so much money donated for materials," Heiderich said. "The community's support really helps make this library special."

Currently the library is used as a reading, resource and meeting area. Teachers from St. Anthony Park Elementary School and Murray Junior High School encourage their students to use the library.

"This library is definitely an important part of St. Anthony Park," Schomberg said. "Good old Andrew still has an impact on our community."

Celebrate Carnegie's birthday in St. Anthony Park

Three free programs are scheduled at the library to help celebrate Carnegie's 150th birthday.

• Nov. 12, 4 p.m., Ross Sutter, will play folk music and tell tales from America, England, Ireland and Scandinavia. Children will be able to play instruments and participate in songs and dances.

• Nov. 20, 4 p.m., Sharla Scannell will give a presentation on Minnesota children's author Maud Hart Lovelace. The well-known "Betsy" books which she wrote were based on Lovelace's Mankato childhood.

• Nov. 21, 7 p.m., Jeanne Fischer, book reviewer for the St. Paul Pioneer Press/DiPATCH, will give advice on choosing books as gifts.

First grade teacher requested

By Mary Mergenthal

An unexpected 25% increase in school population has created a number of difficulties at St. Anthony Park Elementary School. "We've moved from 420 students to 505 students," says principal Dr. William Schrankler. "The bulk of that increase is children who live in magnet school areas, especially Maxfield-Galtier. Because of racial quotas, students couldn't get into schools in their areas."

"The nature of the students, not just the number has changed," says Linda Budd, one of many concerned neighborhood parents. "There's a wider diversity and it has great effect on students and teachers." Budd refers specifically to problems which are being experienced in first grade classrooms at the school.

"The diversity of academic orientation of the students has changed. The range has increased. Now there are not just one, two or three first-graders who lack alphabet and color recognition, but fourteen or fifteen. In addition, the diversity in behavioral readiness is broader. Many of the new students are not prepared to be in a classroom," she says. "Neighborhood children who are ready and eager to learn are often frustrated and upset. Several parents have removed their children and sent them to other schools. These include parents who have been extremely active in the school."

Dr. Schrankler explained one of the difficulties. "At least three-fourths of the new students are from schools where they had been receiving Chapter One services, a government compensatory educational program for students a year or more below grade level in reading or math. That service does not follow them here because this school does not economically qualify for the program even if students here need the help."

Schrankler asked the administration for another first grade teacher. Budd and several other parents appeared before the school board with a petition signed by 85 parents. "We went to support his request," Budd says. "We believe another teacher would help to remedy the situation. The present teachers and Dr. Schrankler have been doing all they can, but they've been asked to handle more than they should be asked to handle."

St. Anthony Park is not the only elementary school experiencing this problem. Twelve other schools are also over the city-wide student-teacher ratio. That's where the real problem begins, it appears to Budd and other local parents. The city administration has indicated that it does not want to allocate another teacher and has left the school board in a position where they'd have to override the superintendent if they want to respond to the school's request.

"The board and the administration are basically stuck on the idea of equal treatment," Budd claims. "They don't want to help one school unless they help every school in the same way. They're not willing to see that the issues might be different in different schools and so the solutions might be different as well."

"We hope that in their comprehensive evaluation of the twelve schools, they will get to this issue of equity versus equality."

"It's been a very discouraging process," Budd says of the group's interaction with the administration. "The wheels of bureaucracy move extremely slowly for a six-year-old."

Most people set a Halloween goal of rounding up a pumpkin and getting it carved before the trick-or-treaters descend. That's not enough for Brian Smith. He's a Park resident who's working on his Ph.D. in horticulture and his goal was to raise a pumpkin so BIG that it would win prizes. He did it, too. His 197 pound pumpkin was grown on the St. Paul campus. It took first place at both the State Fair and the New Brighton Squash Festival. The only problem is that it's a bit cumbersome to move around. It's now on display at the Horticulture Building on campus. Should you want to try your luck next year, buy some Atlantic Giant seed, add 30 gallons of fertilizer every week, clear a big space and don't forget the fork lift!

Central High School teacher receives Excellence in Education award

Lorraine Potuzak, humanities teacher in the QUEST program for highly motivated students, was one of 12 teachers from the seven-county metro area chosen for the Excellence in Education award sponsored by the Minnesota Association of Commerce and Industry. She received a $4000 tax free cash stipend.

"I'm very involved with what I teach," says Potuzak.

"I lead discussions and work one on one with students to help them interpret the meanings in their readings. My teaching technique is to use the discussion method to put the thinking process in an order."

Local students in the news at Central include Tanya Fretheim, Kristin Hershbell and Damon Howatt who have been designated Commended Students in the 1986 Merit

National Merit Scholarship Program. As such they place in the top five percent of over one million participants. Chris Coury, another Park resident, is a finalist in the 1986 Merit Program.

Another classmate, Maureen Ruddy, is the president of Central's Student Council.

St. Anthony Park Elementary hosts Chinese visitors

St. Anthony Park Elementary School was host to a group of ten Chinese educators recently. The main attraction was the opportunity to see a computer system used in no other school in the world. The group was part of a team of 33 educators from China who visited Minnesota's schools for three days.

Teacher Midge Huffman demonstrated the $100,000 computer system known as Discourse. She displayed her questions to the class on a large screen in the front of the room. As each student typed a response on a computer keyboard, Huffman's display monitor picked up the answer. She knew instantly each pupil's response, without leaving her desk. The Chinese group found the program very interesting. They communicated through an interpreter.

Before coming to St. Anthony Park, the educators were in Washington, D.C. From here, they went on to Colorado and California. Thirty Chinese provinces were represented in the delegation.

The Chinese group saw a unique computer system here. It came to St. Anthony Park School through a grant that the Wilder Foundation obtained from the 3M Company. The company acquired the computer system two years ago and inquired in the community if the system would have an educational use. Wilder Foundation worked with the St. Paul School District to try the system at St. Anthony Park.

Classes take turns using the Discourse room. All students can participate in answering each question, and teachers can spot problems immediately. Teachers see a potential for improving reading and writing skills.

All classes at Murray Magnet Junior High will be open to parents and the community Nov. 19, 7:50 a.m. to 2:20 p.m. Class schedules and refreshments will be available in the school library. School Visitation Day will be part of the celebration of American Education Week from November 17-23.

Volunteers are needed at Murray Magnet Junior High for tutoring on a weekly basis in math, science, instrumental music, study skills, Spanish, French or German. One or two hours per week may provide the boost that a student needs to keep up with the class.

The new study skills lab can use volunteers for correcting papers, helping with reading skills, or listening to oral book reports. Each student in the lab is working on an individual basis, so the two teachers in the room are kept busy. Budget for a proposed teacher aide was cut.

Other opportunities for volunteers include a one-time presentation to a class about a hobby, foreign trip or occupation. Many community residents have knowledge that could be shared with junior high youngsters.

Snow in September at Isabella

By Ann Bulger

An eight-inch snowfall during the first 24 hours at Isabella transformed the Environmental Learning Center from a late-September autumn scene to a winter wonderland. The wet snow provided a beautiful background for hikes and canoeing, but also meant wet socks hanging from the dorm bunks for 118 fifth and sixth-graders from St. Anthony Park Elementary School. The children were accompanied by four teachers, eleven other adults and four eighth grade leaders. They travelled to the center for five days of outdoor classes, challenges on the ropes course and climbing wall, and overnight camping trips.

"Memorable Moments" written by the students include:

Julie MacGregor—"My most memorable experience was when I was canoeing at night. All you had to do was look up into the sky and see stars—snow was everywhere. It was so neat to see the black water swirling around your paddle and see the frosted tree tops covered with snow. Everyone was quiet, so as not to break the beautiful quietness and beauty of the lake."

Erin Cooper—"My most memorable experience was canoeing in the snow. It was so beautiful! It looked exactly like a painting. It was the most magnificent scene I've ever seen in my whole life."

Andy Davis—"I'll remember Edible Plants—it's amazing what plants you can eat. I'll never be embarrassed about having dandelions in my garden again! I'll remember the Bog, wet and wonderful...the Bog, wet feet with a happy smile."

Nikki Lockhart—"The best was my last class of the week, Ojibway Heritage. We learned how to make baskets and twine and cooked wild rice and tea."

Langford Park

Minnesota North Stars' goalie Don Beaupre and forward Tom McCarthy will be at the Langford Park Recreation Center Nov. 5 from 7-9 p.m. for the park's hockey league sign up. Beaupre and McCarthy will sign autographs and aid in the drawing for free North Stars tickets, along with other souvenir giveaways.

The hockey league is split into five divisions including young beginners through junior high levels. The cost per person ranges from $5 to $50. Parents and children are encouraged to bring information about any used hockey equipment they would like to sell, so it may be posted on the center's bulletin board.

Langford Park Recreation Center Director Dan Berchem has been coaching an intramural football team for 3rd and 4th graders this fall. Berchem has started to develop a play book and says he hopes eventually to have about 12 plays. Stand-outs this season have been quarterback Ben Tressel and fullback Nathan Yates, both from St. Anthony Park. Langford Park has an "everybody plays" policy because "the most important thing," Berchem said, "is getting kids to play, and you can't do that sitting on the bench."

Central High School

In early October the St. Paul Central Minutemen topped the St. Paul Conference with a 6-0 record. Playoffs seemed to be on the horizon. Since then the Minutemen have lost successive games to conference rivals Cretin and St. Thomas Academy. Now they have dropped to third place; however, the Minutemen still have a few bright spots from this season. As of late October the team was first in offensive yards gained in their conference (as well as in the Metro AA overall standings) and first in their conference in fewest defensive yards allowed. The team includes St. Anthony Park residents Mike Dearing, Dave Carter and Derrick Howatt.

Como High School

Homecoming at Como was a big success. The football team first defeated St. Bernard, 20-14, for their first victory of the season.

Former swim coach Roger Bosveld has been coaxed out of retirement, ala Bud Grant, to coach the Como Boys' swim team this year.

Murray Junior High

Eighth-graders Troy Sperbeck and Zak Foster from St. Anthony Park are leading Murray Jr. High's 7th and 8th grade cross country squad this season, according to Coach Mike Schmidt. Schmidt said the two are turning in times of under 10 minutes in the 1.5 mile run. The team hasn't won a meet this season in the St. Paul Junior High Conference, but Schmidt said he is happy with their attitude and progress.

The Murray Jr. High girls' volleyball team was treated to a volleyball workshop in mid-October, said Coach Phyllis Baltes. The workshop, given by girls from Como High School's senior volleyball team, concentrated on skills improvement. Baltes said despite the team's winless season (as of late October), she sees great improvement in their unity and commitment.

Murray Jr. High's intramural soccer team is being led this season by all-around-players Nate Eklund, Lon Nelson and John Schomberg from St. Anthony Park, said Coach Dave Hagman. Hagman, who became interested in soccer while living in England recently, said the team plays once per week and has a squad of about 20. He said he is hopeful that St. Paul will soon include soccer as a conference sport, a move he thinks would make his program more viable.

Falcon Heights

Falcon Heights hockey rinks will be opening on Dec. 26, and staying open until Feb. 28. Rinks will be open Monday-Thursday, 4-9 p.m.; Friday, 4-9 p.m.; Saturday, 1-9 p.m.; and Sunday, 1-9 p.m. Special hours during Christmas and mid-winter breaks will be posted.

group as it seats 600. The new chapel is also equipped with a new Holtkamp organ.

Seminary Chaplain Paul Knutson indicated that people from the neighborhood are welcome to any of the 10 a.m. worship services held each week day in the new chapel. The community is also encouraged to view the complex at any time and to utilize the dining area and food service. He issued an invitation to the community to use the new Campus Center, a place to gather for food, fellowship and worship.

The current enrollment of Luther Northwestern Theological Seminary is 841 with a faculty of 63. It is the largest Lutheran training school for pastors in North America. Two national church bodies, the American Lutheran Church and the Lutheran Church in America, are joint owners of the seminary. Dr. Lloyd Svendsby has served as president of Luther since 1974 and of both schools since 1976.

Obituary

Dr. R. A. Narvaez, a resident of St. Anthony Park for 27 years and a professor of linguistics at the University of Minnesota for 25 years, died Sept. 22. The 63-year-old Narvaez was partially disabled from three heart attacks in 1980 but continued to write textbooks, translate, edit, teach and direct students doing doctoral dissertations under him. On the day of his death he was preparing to teach one course this fall at the University of Minnesota.

After four years of teaching English as a second language at the University of Puerto Rico in the 1950s he was invited to become the first linguist to teach in what was then the Department of Romance Languages at the University of Minnesota. His career included many foreign lectureships in Spain, Mexico and Columbia. As a professor he went out of his way to accommodate students' needs, meeting with them at home as well as on campus and helping them however he could. His associates and colleagues regarded him highly for his expertise in linguistics and the study of gestures as well as his affable nature.

Surviving him are his wife Maxine, sons Leon of Northfield and Eric of St. Paul, daughters Darcia of Minneapolis and Nona of St. Paul, a sister and three grandchildren.

What are your memories of your years in St. Anthony Park?

I remember that I was trying to be a writer here. My wife was out working and I was staying at home to write and to take care of my son. I remember St. Anthony Park as a place where a kid could run loose with other kids. I never worried much. He always showed up for lunch or else I'd get a call from some other parent that he'd be eating there. In the afternoons, we'd walk to Langford Park.

This was a good neighborhood to be a writer in. I've mentioned this since to friends from New York City. They find it hard to believe that you'd let a four- or five-year-old out the door without tying a rope to him.

Small towns (I count St. Anthony Park as a small town) are very good for the arts. A great many artists have found it possible to live in them who wouldn't have found it possible in sections of large cities we tend to associate with artists. I'm grateful to St. Anthony Park for being that kind of small town.

Some people relate to your show and especially to the monologue because they think they grew up in Lake Wobegon. In this neighborhood, some people seem to think they live in Lake Wobegon. What do you think about that?

No, Lake Wobegon is not a college town. The proximity of the University and the seminary really changes things.

I've always wondered if you have a map of Lake Wobegon on your office wall and an intricate family tree on the other. Do you?

No, but I'm beginning to need a genealogy. It's getting too complicated for me or I'm getting too old to remember. But a map—I'm not ready for that. It's too limiting. Some of the people who listen to the show have a pretty clear picture based not so much on what I tell them but on what they remember of some place where they lived. If I got as specific as having a map I'd disturb their recollection. I'd rather continue telling these vague stories which people set in their own recollections. The more I can make the listeners work and do my job for me, the better.

Tom and Harry Productions are at it again. That's Tom Noble and Harry Forsberg from Lauderdale who create an extra-special pumpkin every year. There's been Charlie Brown, Garfield, and Kermit the Frog. This year? Opus I.

According to Forsberg, who is pictured here, "Opus is a penguin (of Bloom County fame), but also, according to the dictionary, an opus is an artist's work of art." Their creation certainly qualifies.

Lauderdale kids will enjoy the special pumpkin on Halloween at a special showing which includes closed circuit TV and microphones so Tom and Harry can talk to the kids via a monitor. But after the evening is over, Noble and Forsberg figure their class pumpkin deserves something better than being smashed in the street. Check page 11 for details about where to see Opus I after Halloween and how to qualify for a prize for being the first to find him.
