Local woman to march for peace in Central America

By John G. Shepard
Marching 600 miles through the heart of war-ravaged Central America may not be everyone’s idea of how to celebrate the Christmas and New Year holidays, but then most people aren’t like Michelle Ruddy. This enthusiastic, articulate twenty-year-old St. Anthony Park woman is planning to join an international group of adventurers on a thirty-day sojourn for peace through some of the most violent and impoverished countries in the world: Nicaragua, Honduras, El Salvador and Guatemala. As if that were not risky enough, she will face the additional challenge of monitoring a medical disability, diabetes, under trying physical circumstances where medical help is hard to come by. Many of her friends wonder why, if she must travel, she doesn’t go someplace sensible, like Europe. But those are people who probably don’t know Michelle Ruddy very well.

“[Political] quirkiness is one thing that bugs me big time,” she says. Hanline University Spanish major who is in between her sophomore and junior years. “And it’s so prevalent in my age group. But it seems like when you’re young you should be involved—while you have the energy to be active.” Taking this philosophy to heart, Ruddy has been concerned with peace and justice-related activities since she was president of the student council at Central High School. Last year she spent four months studying urban development and United States foreign policy in Bogota, Columbia. But the International Peace March in Central America, she feels, is a special opportunity.

Initiated by concerned citizens in Norway, the march will be truly international in scope. Only one third of the 300 participants are who planning to travel a full distance—1200 miles, from Panama to Mexico—will come from the United States.

Victory House and neighbors work on living together

By Joel Schurke
"After repeated attempts to induce sobriety have failed, society tends to ignore those chronically drunk or drug abusers and leaves them alone to fend for themselves. Many are too old, too frightened, too sick, or too damaged to help live out the rest of their lives without a home or the safest physical necessities. Others face the possibility of premature death. They are the inarticulate, the invisible, the unknown. The meaning of the last phrase is the literal acceptance of our responsibility for treatment. Money is a necessary evil, but the unknown is our largest problem.

Located at 2300 Wycliff in South St. Anthony Park, Victory House resembles a budget motel in appearance as well as function. Victory House is a non-profit long-term residential facility for treatment of alcoholics and other street people. It is not a treatment center in any way, but provides a service that few facilities in the Twin Cities do, affordable room and board, for people on fixed incomes. Many of these people have long histories of chemical dependency.

Aristotle may have said something about people not liking the life they have, but he never said anything about the life they do have. People in a city like St. Paul, I think, are generally more sophisticated residents. Breaking this rule is grounds for eviction, and some have been evicted. But this mainstay rule which serves victory to 5

Merchants' open house

St. Anthony Park merchants will join Parkbank in saying thank you to their customers at a holiday open house Dec. 3 from 2-6 p.m. The event, which will feature refreshments and strolling carolers from local church choirs, will be sponsored by the bank and the local merchants' association.

A special feature will be free rides in a hayrack pulled by a team of horses provided by Dr. Byonds.

The St. Anthony Park Arts Forum is holding an art show and sale in the Fireside Hall of Milton Square in conjunction with the open house. The historic hall—once a dance hall, a tea market and a laundromat—will become a gallery featuring works of clay and fiber.

Potter's Timothy Crane, Randy Johnson, Warren Braun and Shirley Johnson will display their work. Weavers will include Linda Maders, Paula Pfaff and St. Anthony Park resident Coleen Tubulski and Paul O'Connor.

Adopt a grandparent this Christmas

By Linda Johnson

Holidays can be very lonely times for those without any family. Those are the people Paul Arnold, activities director at Commonwealth Healthcare Center, is concerned about. Seventy of its 108 residents have no one to visit them during the year, much less during the holidays," she says. Arnold hopes that a "caring and tight-knit community" like St. Anthony Park will participate in Commonwealth's "Adopt a Grandparent" program this Christmas.

She recently sent a letter to churches in the community, explaining their help. The letter was addressed "to friends and prospective senior citizens." In the letter she spelled out the problem with clarity and conviction. "It's difficult for many of us to comprehend that in this affluent society there are some of the people who have no one to care for them or about them any more. These are the elderly, people like your grandparents and grandparents. Many of these people have no family left, or are out of touch with their relatives for a reason or another. Most of them live on $40 a month. This amount is expected to cover clothing, haircuts, personal items and, if they don't smoke, maybe a trip out into the community for a 45 meal.

Adopt is hoping that families in the area will adopt a resident by bringing a small gift and card in time for the Christmas party at 2 p.m. Christmas Eve day.

The ghost of Christmas past has not haunted totally empty halls at Commonwealth. Last year residents at St. Anthony Park Elementary School brought gifts for every resident. The Methodist, Lutheran and Catholic churches in the area have responded as well with gifts and food. Cong. Parish school has a monthly adopt-a-grandparent program which brings fifth graders to the center for structured activities with residents. Nevertheless, there's still plenty of room for volunteers to deck the halls this month or throughout the year. It will take lots of people to counter the feelings of isolation felt by so many all year and especially this month.

Early deadlines

Because of the impending Christmas season, the Hockey has early deadlines for the January, 1986 issue. The ad deadline is December 5, while the want ad and news deadline is Dec. 9.
This year remember your older neighbors with a holiday gift to the Block Nurse program. Perhaps someone you know is still living at home because of services provided by this program—consider a gift on behalf of that person—or you might give in appreciation for the efforts of the block nurses, block companions and volunteers who have enriched the lives of over 70 neighborhood residents. Perhaps instead you will want to give because the block nurse program is working—helping your elderly neighbors stay in their homes by providing them with caring, cost-effective support.

Thank you from those who have been helped and those who will be in the future. Your tax-deductible gift may be sent to St. Anthony Park Block Nurse Program, 2340 Hampden, St. Paul MN 55114.

Housing task force begins

Several housing issues affecting District 12 will be considered by the recently reactivated Housing Task Force. Questions relating to accessory apartments and low-income housing have been brought to the attention of the committee.

Jo Haberman from the Housing Committee of the Merriam Park Community Council attended the Physical Committee's meeting on November 7th to discuss the Merriam Park Board's work in making an attempt to address the problem of small spaces in larger older homes. Merriam Park would like to join forces with other District Councils in an effort for a city-wide coalition to support a proposed ordinance allowing accessory apartment units. The Merriam Park Housing Committee has done a survey to look for multiple dwelling units and has concluded that accessory apartments are a growing issue there.

The proposal for an ordinance is put forth in an attempt to meet the needs of St. Paul neighborhoods facing the problem of conversion of older, larger homes to multiple dwelling units. The goals are: 1) to reduce the number of illegal conversions, 2) to control the increase of speculative buying by absentee landlords interested only in maximizing profit, 3) to help older residents stay in their homes, 4) to provide a rental resource for younger families and other smaller households, 5) to maintain a good stock of housing in the neighborhood by protecting key property values and the single-family residential character of a neighborhood, and ensuring that temporary accessory apartments are installed only in owner-occupied houses.

The Housing Task Force will also monitor the city's efforts to respond to the demand for low-income housing units with three or more bedrooms through conversions and new construction.

Meeting dates for the Housing Task Force are in the process of being established. Individuals interested in Task Force participation are encouraged to contact District 12 office.

How to be heard on zoning

On October 25 District 12 Council and the St. Anthony Park Association co-sponsored a meeting on housing code enforcement and zoning regulations. Frank Stavis spoke on the housing code enforcement division of the public health department and Wendy Lane from the zoning division of the building department briefed the operation of their departments and answered questions.

Zoning laws deal with land use and require that permits be purchased for all construction and most remodeling projects over $500. Even if a permit is obtained, neighbors have the right to question any project and should call the city building department if in doubt about the legality of a project. St. Paul has six inspectors who are not able to monitor all projects closely and may not be aware of those projects without permits. Once completed, if in violation, the owner may be fined or may need to obtain a variance. The structure must be made to meet local standards of living. Interior regulations are often difficult to enforce. If complaints are made, there must be sworn testimony by one or more inside the premises to see the problem or the police must be involved and issue a search warrant.

Exterior problems, upon which action may be more easily taken, fall into these general areas.

Grossly unsanitary conditions: garbage, rodent or insect infestation; large numbers of domestic fowl or animals living in a house or having access to a house because of its deteriorating condition or offensive odors.

Neglected yards: overgrown shrubbery, grass or weeds; animal feces; accumulating junk in yard.

Safety hazards: broken or missing railings, steps and windows; inadequate number of existing front steps; rotting wood or poor drainage.

For Housing Code Enforcement, call 298-5644.

Calls may be made directly to the various departments, and complaints names are confidential. Other numbers and tips for keeping property healthy and safe are available through the District 12 office. —Margot Mounon

Briefs

Compost site

Residents of District 12 put the compost site to good use on the three weekends the site was open for fall leaf collection. Jack Klinkenborg who directed neighbors in the disposal of composting materials reported 454 trips made to the site. Recycling grass clippings and leaves has become part of the neighbors' fall routine and goes a long way toward reducing the solid waste stream.

Older Worker's Program

The city of St. Paul through the Career Guidance and Training Center provides special services to older workers through the Older Worker's Program which is funded by the Job Training Partnership Act (JTPA). St. Paul residents who are 55 years and older, economically disadvantaged and unemployed or underemployed, are eligible for the program. The Career Guidance and Training Center provides a number of services:

- Vocational counseling
- Skills assessment
- Educational counseling
- Occupational training
- On the job training
- Job seeking skills
- Job development
- Job placement

Registration and information workshops will be set up in District 12 if the program is not already up and running by calling the office, 616-8884.

Water meters

The St. Paul Water Utility has begun a city-wide meter conversion project. A portion of north St. Anthony Park will receive remote (off-site) water meters as part of a pilot project for this program. The pilot project is the first phase of a six-year conversion program. Homeowners have been notified and installation of meters will begin in November at no direct cost to the homeowner.

Here comes the kiosk!

Good news for those of you who have missed the kiosk at the corner of Cleveland and Cleveland. The kiosk will be replaced, hopefully before the first of the year. Watch the District 12 News for more information!

CPR

Cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) training sessions are coming to District 12. The Human Services Committee has arranged to offer three 3-hour sessions at a cost of $7 per person through a program co-sponsored with Groups Health. Accident on Como

Two seminary students were injured, one seriously, when they were hit by a truck which jumped the curb at Como and Luther Place on Nov. 10. The truck was driven by a 15-year-old boy whose uncle was trying to teach him to drive, police said. Linda Johnson has had several surgeries since the accident. Police Captain Robert Gray said that the truck dragged her approximately 50 feet, hit a parked car and that car hit another parked car. Johnson got caught under the truck.

The other woman, Gloria Ruth Larsen, was treated at the hospital for minor injuries and released the same day.

Electoral results

Mayor George Latimer and David Nelson were re-elected in St. Paul and Lauderdale respectively, and Tom Baldwin was elected mayor of Falcon Heights. Incumbent Kevin Womack will continue as St. Paul City Council representative from Ward 4. William Anderson and Nora Gilje were elected to the Lauderdale City Council and Phillip Chernoweth and Paul Cicimba were elected to similar positions in Falcon Heights. St. Paul voters re-elected Dan Bonner, Jim Griffin and Eleanor Weber to the school board and added a new board member, Bill Carlson.

Neighbors

Sarah Susanka who lives in St. Anthony Park was featured in the Greenhouses and Gardens Remodeling Ideas magazine as an outstanding young architect. One of her recent designs was pictured with emphasis on her concern for quality design, craftsmanship, energy efficiency and cost effectiveness. Another featured architect was Dan Feldt who designed Luther Place condominiums.

St. Anthony Park resident James Christensen has been appointed to a one-year term on the St. Paul Ramsey Medical Center Commission. Christensen is an attorney practicing in Minneapolis.

Two Park musicians have been traveling in Costa Rica with the Greater Twin Cities Youth Symphony of Minnesota. They are Andrew Eldhage, horn, and Peter Rupert, trumpet.

The residents of the new Luther Place condominiums recently elected directors: Fredrick Arny, former practicing physician in the Park; Fred Morlock and Joseph Skopec, long-time Park residents; Dr. Lowell Satre, professor at Luther North-Western Seminary; and Ingeborg Smith, who grew up on Raymond Avenue, and her father, O. ParkBank Announces New Insurance Manager

ParkBank would like to take this opportunity to introduce you to its newest associate, Mr. Randall B. Nielsen. Mr. Nielsen became the manager of Park Insurance in October.

Mr. Nielsen's responsibilities will be to manage the insurance agency operations and to develop a strong insurance broker relationship in the community. He comes to ParkBank from Frank B. Hall and Company of Minnesota and prior to that American Hardware Mutual Insurance Company of Minneapolis, Minnesota.

While at Hall, the nation's fourth largest insurance broker, he was one of their major responsibilities was insuring many of Minnesota's Rural Electric Cooperatives. The Rural Electric program included loss control, programming and risk management assistance to the Rural Electrics, as well as a role in the changing product development of the nationally renowned National Rural Electric Cooperative Association Property and Casualty Insurance Program underwritten by National Mutual Insurance Company of Columbus, Ohio.

His other responsibilities while at Frank B. Hall included commercial account production, including insuring many of the Twin Cities automobile dealers on both a direct and wholesale basis. As Mr. Nielsen explained, "the volatile insurance marketplace took its toll on many of those auto dealers' accounts over the last two years, but I enjoy insuring dealers and hopefully will have a replacement market shortly! With the market, we should be able to do a great job with that particular corner of the market."

Randi and his staff look forward to helping individuals and businesses with all of their insurance needs. As a full service independent broker, she has access to a wide range of insurance companies which enables her to tailor a program to fit each client's needs. As a neighborhood business, Park Insurance will give you the kind of technical and personal service you require. Stop in today at 2205 Como Avenue or call Park Insurance at 647-0313 or 647-0885.

Park Bugle
Some problems are not easily understood. Perhaps lack of full understanding is why some never reach a viable solution — a solution that works for all parties involved with the problem. As the complexity of the problem increases, the path to solution becomes an arduous one to follow.

As a community we have a responsibility to each other. We share certain basic values and govern behavior accordingly. Non-conforming behavior becomes a serious matter when it threatens our community. We impose controls on non-conformers through various resources and have the police to enforce the more immediate matters of non-compliance. The city council, district council and neighborhood organizations deal with long-range problems of planning. Social service agencies pick-up a large part of what remains. And that takes care of it all — or does it?

In 1981, the community made the decision to allow the Victory House in South St. Anthony Park. Victory House serves, in part, to alleviate the problem of housing for chronic alcoholics and homeless people. But who does it serve who has not been convenient to partly shelters us from the problem, but does not fully solve it.

Chronic alcoholism is a complex problem with complex behavior patterns. Recently, this behavior has had a variety of negative repercussions to our community. When people cannot or will not help themselves to will — or should. Community assumes participation — cooperative participation. If Victory House is to succeed in its "mission" all of its residents must realize their responsibility to their community. As neighbors we must realize our responsibility to each other and establish open lines of communication with those around us. Maintaining such lines of communication is admittedly difficult but well worth it.

Communication solves problems, even complex ones.

Our friend, the financial planner

A friend in the Park has just began a new career as a financial planner. She asked if she could test her new skills on us, before she set out to face total strangers. Yesterday I was sitting on my living-room floor casually announced, "Oh, by the way, Susan is coming over to talk to us tonight."

"TONIGHT? I have to talk about our family finances tonight!" But I need weeks to prepare for something like this! I gotta call the accountant, quick!

"It's only Susan, not the IRS. She just wants to talk to us and try out what she's learned in class. We'll be doing her a favor, actually.

"Well, okay but don't scare me like that. You know what a mess our financial records are. In a guess I can talk to her, as long as I don't have to dig out all the receipts from our trip to Mille Lacs last summer."

"No. No. All she needs is our tax return from last year."

"That can include. I know just where it is... in a grocery bag in the attic, behind the Halloween costumes."

After supper, I climbed up into the attic. I came down about 45 minutes later, covered with dust from head to toe, but otherwise empty handed.

"I know just where it is. It's in the woodstove, in a box from Sherman & Hickey, right on top of the paint cans."

Half an hour later, I stumbled through the living room, muttering, "I'll bet I know just where it is..."

Some time later, I was in the living room again. "Now, where's the heck... "Oh, forget it," my wife said. "I'm sure we can get by without it. Go take a bath before Susan gets here.

I stood in the shower puzzling, as layers of dust from the attic, the basements, the kitchen, and under the bed ran down the drain. Suddenly, I knew."Thank you," I leaped from the shower and threw open the cupboard where the bath toys are kept.

And there, in an old Reader's Digest Swipesheets envelope, was last year's tax return.

I quickly wrapped a towel around my dripping body, and ran into the study. I found it. I found it! I knew I had put it in a good place, and there it... oh, Hi, Susan."

Eventually, we were all sitting at the kitchen table. Susan got out her special brief case, her special book of charts and tables, and her special calculator that has about 483 buttons on it, none of which are plus or minus. Then she opened up the tax return.

"Himmmm... oooohhh... Oh, dear... Uh, Susan, what are you doing?"

"I'm figuring out your marginal," she said, as she touched some of the buttons on her special calculator.

"What's a marginal?"

"It used to be called your tax bracket."

"Around here it's still called our tax bracket."

"Well, mind is the new word," she said, as an answer appeared on the calculator. "Oh, my," she said, then quickly turned off the calculator and closed the tax return.

"What is your investment portfolio like?"

"My wife and I looked at each other, each hoping the other would take the question. Finally, just to break the awkward silence, I spoke. "Well, we have 100 shares of Paul Bunyan Power & Gas that my parents gave us as a wedding present. But I don't have any idea how much it's worth because they print those numbers too small in the newspaper."

"And there's your pension plan," my wife added. "What does that money go into?" asked Susan. "Well, 5% is in some stock mutual fund, 5% is in something else, and 90% is in life insurance."

"Who put the plan together for you?"

"My insurance agent,

"Oh. How about precious metals?"

"Yes, we have some gold coins in our safe deposit box over at the bank."

"What kind of coins are they?"

"They're Dutch Heinemans."

"We've known Susan for quite a long time. And, until last night, she probably didn't know her. She probably had the impression that we were intelligent, organized, goal-oriented people. But I think that impression crumbled into irredeemable ruin under our kitchen table last night."

"Okay, let's talk about a plan for you. Look, you have this much in stocks, right? You have this much in savings. This much in IRA's. How much do your kids have in the bank?"

"More than you do, I think.

"How much cash do you have in the house?"

"Gee, I don't know. Let me look under the couch cushions."

"How much do you have in your pocket?"

"In my pocket? Well, about four dollars."

"Give it to me," said Susan. "Get the money from the couch cushions and give it to me. Get your kids' piggy banks, break them, and give the money to me."

"But why?"

"Because you people don't deserve to have control of money. You have no idea what to do with it. I want you to trust all your financial decisions to me from now on. If we can get your money under control, invest in some good mutual funds, take advantage of some bond timing, and cross our fingers. First of all, you don't have to go to college and you will be able to retire someday."

This morning, my wife and I felt a lot better. A tremendous burden has been lifted from us, and we know that, under Susan's expert guidance, our futures will be secure.

If you would like to know more about the advantages of financial planning, I'd be happy to discuss it over a cup of coffee at Bridgeham's. But you'll have to buy. Susan won't let me carry cash.

States. The remainder will represent up to forty other countries.

"If most of the forty people participating in the Twin Cities, Randy is planning to join the march, the marchers will arrive in Managua, Nicaragua's capital, on December 23 in time for what she anticipates to be a spectacular Christmas celebration. From there, to her ending point in Mexico City on January 22 she expects to see plenty of countryside. The group will combine an average of six miles per day of hiking with bus travel. Nightly accommodations and food will be arranged in communities on route, providing Randy with ample opportunity to explore the cultures of the region and to improve her proficiency in Spanish."

Most importantly, the march will allow her to dramatically express her concern for the social and political injustices in Central America which she feels the United States government is partially responsible for. "It's more about who's got the power," she says. "I know there are gross violations of human rights happening constantly and I don't like the position our government has taken. They feel that their trip "more than anything would be a statement of my support for Central American solidarity, self-determination and peace."

Making her statement, Randy will have to cope successfully with demands which many of the marchers won't have to concern themselves with. "In terms of staying in the good control of my diabetes, it's going to be a really big challenge for me," she says. "I will have to be flexible, being in a place where I won't know exactly where my next meal is coming from or how much exercise I'll be getting the next day." In facing this challenge, she appreciates the medical advantages afforded her by being an American. She acknowledges that "if I lived in the Third World as a diabetic I wouldn't be as healthy as I am now. I probably wouldn't live much longer."

In the dangers created by the civil state present in some degree in all the countries she will travel through, Randy is confident that the high visibility of the group and the press coverage will make the marchers anticipate receiving will help protect them. "Actually it will be much safer for any of us than it is for people who live in Central America and are offering assistance," she says. "They're the ones who have to stay."

Randy has received support for this endeavor from a variety of groups and individuals. In support of her cost of the trip, which she estimates will be about $2000, a number of individuals have agreed to pledge money for each mile she travels. She also is welcoming contributions of medical supplies which she and other marchers will deliver to health care providers in Nicaragua. No less important has been the encouragement forthcoming from close friends and from her parents, Tom and Virginia Randy. "My parents are both very supportive of my doing this," she emphasizes. Her mother, in particular, has passed on some poignant advice which Randy hopes to draw strength from if the going gets rough: "You know, you only live once and there's no sense living in fear."

emerging drunk to drink by giving them $40 a month. If you are a drinking alcoholic you first seek help. The obvious problem is alcohol and alcoholic behavior. We are doing our monitoring the behavior, but I can't prevent them from drinking," stated Eyle Toelle, director of Victory House. Victory House and its board of directors are making a concerted effort to find solutions to the problems. It is clear that without the cooperation of the neighborhood these efforts are doomed to fail. "We now have give the community the names and telephones of the 24 hour security need. We need positive identification of the problem residents and have given a Hampden Square a Polaris camera for the purpose. The residents are given warnings and are evicted if they do not heed the warnings. We have a security patrol that patrols the area where the problems have occurred. These cars are identified by special license plates and foot patrols wear jackets identifying themselves as Victory House staff," said Scott Jef ferson, board of directors secretary for Victory House.

St. Anthony Park Elementary teacher request denied

As reported in last month’s Bugle, parents and administration of St. Anthony Park Elementary School requested another first grade teacher this fall to help alleviate the problems created by the influx of students due to elementary magnet programs. Their request has been denied and instead the school has been granted 30 hours of teacher aide time each week. According to school principal Dr. William Schrankler, that aide’s time will have to be shared by other grades as well.

Burned apples provide windfall to Murray program

Thanks to the generosity of many individuals and organizations, the Program for Social Development at Murray Junior High School will have funds for special equipment, field trips, and activities. As reported in last month’s Bugle, the truck carrying apples for a fundraiser caught fire and burned, destroying not only the truck, but also the aples. Stories carried by the media prompted well-wishers to donate $242 in cash, plus two shipments of apples, totaling 116 bushels. Profits from the sale of the apples were $1,248.

The French connection

By Jonathan Kalsstrom

"This space was inaugurated by Monsieur M. de Callicac, Consul General of France, le 18 November, 1985. So reads the inscription on a bronze plaque given to the French Alliance of the Twin Cities—or le Alliance Francaise des Villines if you will—at the inauguration of their new St. Anthony Park location in the Baker Court building.

M. Max de Callicac, the French Consul General in Chi- cago, officiated at the ceremonies. He was accompanied by M. Denis-Nardin, first consul general at the French Embassy in Washington, D.C.

Founded in 1927, the French Alliance of the Twin Cities is a non-profit organization that brings together people interested in the use and diffusion of the French language and civilization through activities and instruction in French culture and language.

The organization is one of 150 branches in the United States and has 650 members. It is affiliated with a worldwide organization of 1,034 branches that is headquartered in Paris. Their monthly programs, which are nearly always conducted in French, present performers from France and other French-speaking countries. Current and traditional aspects of French political, artistic, and cultural life are presented.

The Alliance Francique language school offers private tutoring and classes for both adults and children, with 17 adult and five children’s classes currently being conducted for over 150 students. Two of the most popular classes are "French for Travelers" and "Business French."

Currently a professor on loan from France, Madame Sadiane, Professor Detache from France, is in the Twin Cities teaching at the Alliance. She is paid by the French government to work with this program. The local chapter was one of six out of 150 to be chosen to have such a visiting professor. She’ll teach classes such as French cinema and work with staff teaching new tech- niques. Staff here are especially looking forward to her help in introducing the use of video equipment as instructional material for adult and child- ren’s classes.

Obituary

Ralph E. Miller, former Park resident and University professor, died Nov 15 at the age of 77. He and his wife, Betty, with their three children had lived in the area for more than 50 years. Ralph had been attending the inauguration of University president Kenneth Keller at the time of his death. He had been a member of the University of Minnesota faculty on the St. Paul Campus from 1924 until 1979. Twenty-six years of his professional career were spent teaching and in administration of the University's School of Agriculture. He was also well-known statewide and nationally as a parliamentarian.

While he was on the University of Minnesota faculty, he was active in many other organizations including the Ramsey County Historical Society, St. Paul YMCA and the School of Agriculture Alumni Association. He had received many recognitions for his dedicated service to numerous groups. These included the Faculty Award by the All-University Congress, Honorary American Farmer Degree, School of Agriculture Distinguished Service Award, The St. Paul Campus Little Red Oil Can, WCCO Good Neighbor Award, Alumni Merit Award from Iowa State University and many others.

Sports

By Dave Merk

Central High girls swimming

The Central High School girls swim team swam to a 2-5 record this season. "The record can be improved on to say the least," said assistant coach William Nye, "but there was a lot of good spirit." Park resident Kelly MacGregor performed well at the sectional meet, placing fifth overall in the 100 meter butterfly, while Park resident Stephanie Ledo finished 23rd in the diving competition. MacGregor was voted most valuable player by the team. Kristin Hershel, from the Park, was a co-captain of this year's team.

Lauderdale hockey

The hockey riots at Lauderdale Park, on the corner of Fulham and Rosemary, have posted their winter hours as follows: Monday-Friday 9-5, and Saturday-Sunday noon-9 p.m. Rinks will only be closed due to severe weather or high temperatures.

Co-op from 9

hope is that by merging the two stores the services of the co-op in this neighborhood will be strengthened. As of Jan. 1, the stores will be merged at the South St. Anthony Park location. This site was chosen because of the parking lot, easier accessibility and larger shopping and storage area. In addition, the majority of co-op members already do their shopping at that location.
