Chris Herness shares momentos from her five trips to the Soviet Union. She and her late husband, Cliff Herness, were organizers of the Minnesota Council of American Soviet Friendship which used to meet regularly in her Lauderdale home.

Lauderdale woman works for peace through cultural exchange

By Peggy Johnson

A country lined with barracks, soldiers marching and keeping watch...that was the image Lauderdale resident Chris Herness had before she visited the Soviet Union in 1969.

Herness first became interested in the Soviet Union through her late husband, Cliff Herness. He toured Russia in 1937 and encountered a country whose vitality and friendly people had been under-rated. Yet, the somber image of marching soldiers and crowded barracks lingered in Chris Herness's mind.

In 1969, however, a tour of the Soviet Union changed that image. "We were so heartily welcomed when we visited there," Herness exclaimed. "I learned more in those two weeks than I would have (learned about the Soviet Union) living in the United States for 25 years. One of the things she discovered is that most Soviet people are very content. They don't have to worry about unemployment, education costs or medical bills. And, she added, Soviet people are very involved in their communities. Each neighborhood has a community council and participation within those councils is high.

Herness was also impressed with the safety of Soviet cities. She and her husband felt secure sightseeing after dark and were assured of their safety by Soviet officials. She attributed this to: (1) Soviets' common interest in everyone's welfare, (2) no unemployment—less motivation for stealing, (3) high cultural expectations for every citizen.

It all sounds good, but what about the Soviet citizens who want to defect? Of course, there are dissidents, Herness explained; there are in every culture. But the dissidents are in the minority. The problem is that the media focuses on them, giving U.S. citizens the impression that everyone wants to defect—that no one is happy living there. That simply is not true, she says.

After their tour in 1969, Cliff and Chris Herness travelled to the Soviet Union four more times. In 1975, Cliff Herness led a tour group of twelve Minnesotans to Russia. When they returned to the states, he organized the "Minnesota Council of American Soviet Friendship." The twelve tour

South St. Anthony Park woman given humanitarian award

By Mary Mergenthal

Raising kids takes patience. All parents of kids of any age know that. But 80-year-old Genevieve Doebling of South St. Anthony Park may know what patience means better than many parents.

She recently received the Humanitarian Award given by the Ramsey County Foster Care and Adoption Unit for her dedication to a child no one thought would live. She and her husband Harold became foster parents 24 years ago. Since then they have cared for 25 foster children. Mary joined the Doebling family at their home in Graham, Minnesota, when she was 16 months old.

"She acted like a baby who had been completely neglected," Mrs. Doebling says. When Mary moved in with the Doeblings she was almost totally paralyzed, blind and unable to walk or talk. Even tears and laughter, the very stuff of childhood, were unknown to her.

Doctors assumed the child would die soon and discouraged the Doeblings from getting medical treatment for the child. "One doctor was disgusted with me for trying to find help for her," recalls Mrs. Doebling. The situation may have looked hopeless, but the Doeblings refused to give up even though they received no response from Mary.

"We rarely let her lie by herself," Mrs. Doebling says. The couple massaged the child's weak limbs, and Mr. Doebling, who was retarded, spent hours rocking Mary while he sang and talked to her.

Refugee family finds new home in St. Anthony Park

By John G. Shepard

Most residents of St. Anthony Park may well think of their community as a haven from the congestion of the cities on either side of it—as a comfortable, quiet place to raise a family. For Berhe and Hewit Meseh and their three children, however, this community is a refuge of another sort. The Mesehs are refugees from an area of northern Ethiopia known as Eritrea, and for them St. Anthony Park is a haven from political oppression, torture and even death at the hands of their own government.

The simply furnished second story apartment in South St. Anthony where the Mesehs have lived since March of 1985 is the ending point of a journey which began more than four years ago for Berhe, Hewit and their oldest child, Tomas. "We were living in the capital city of Eritrea, Asmara, when the communist party came into power in Ethiopia," explained thirty-nine-year-old Berhe. "It was terrible. Asmara was like a big jail, and everyone who lived in the city could get out only with a permit. Government troops began to arrest people and kill people in the streets, torturing people for nothing," he continued.

Early in 1979 Berhe was arrested. Until that time he had supported his wife and child by working as a barber and selling a variety of goods on commission through a network of Eritrean acquaintances. He was suspected of having connec-

District Council elections

The delegations representing North and South St. Anthony Park and the west Midway area are preparing delegate slates for the elections to be held in April. Nominating committees are being formed to recruit candidates for delegate positions.

Three delegates will be elected to two-year terms, and two alternates will be elected to one-year terms. Alternates attend committee and council meetings and participate in all discussions and move up to delegate status if one of the elected delegates has to resign. An alternate may also vote in meetings if a delegate is absent.

Residents of either North or South St. Anthony Park who would be interested in running for a seat on the council should contact one of the current members of the delegation or call the District 12 office. Business owners in the west Midway area who would be interested in filling a delegate slot should contact the Midway Civic and Commerce Association or the District 12 office.

Members of the council are expected to participate in either the Physical Planning or Human Services Committee meetings as well as attend the monthly meeting of the full council. Members also participate from time to time in citywide committees and task forces.

The District 12 Community Council is a group of 21 citizens elected to serve the District 12 area of St. Paul, including residents of north and south St. Anthony Park, commerce and industry. It is one of 17 citizen participation councils in the city.

The council meets the second Wednesday of every month. All meetings are open to the public. Check for location.

CATCH SOME HEAT THIS WINTER

Warm-up to a Home Energy Audit.
Talk to us: 646-8884
District 12 Community Council
A member of the Saint Paul Neighborhood Energy Consortium.

Energy audits yield cold facts

With the arrival of winter St. Paul residents are taking the necessary steps to improve the energy efficiency of their homes. The St. Paul Neighborhood Energy Consortium, Minnesota Department of Energy and NSP remind homeowners that the best place to start is with a state-approved Residential Conservation Service (RCS) Audit.

In St. Paul these home energy audits are conducted by the St. Paul Neighborhood Energy Consortium in conjunction with NSP and the neighborhood organizations throughout the city.

Renters should be aware that a Minnesota State Law has gone into effect that sets strict guidelines for energy conservation measures that a landlord must implement in any rental property. Renters who pay their own NSP bill may be paying more than is necessary.

If you are considering a home energy audit (or have been offered one), make sure you get the real thing! There are many private companies, including insulation or home improvement contractors, that offer some form of home inspection. However, they are not authorized to perform RCS audits. Only regulated utilities (NSP) and specified community groups are authorized by the state of Minnesota.

"All home energy audits are not the same," warns Alan Lessik, Director, St. Paul Neighborhood Energy Consortium, "and the public should be aware of the differences."

Home inspections offered by private contractors often differ with community-based audits in the areas of thoroughness, price and objectivity.

A thorough home energy audit should include the following:

- furnace efficiency test
- furnace leak-seek test
- check wall insulation
- check attic insulation
- inspect foundation (interior and exterior)
- examination of home's fuel consumption (from NSP)
- low cost/no cost weathering tips, including insulation
- caulking, weatherstripping and windows

—an indication in writing of the cost effectiveness of all possible energy improvements, including payback in years

—evaluation of changing air flow patterns that result from various conservation measures

Home energy inspections also differ in the degree of objectivity and price. Quite often independent contractors will offer a homeowner a free energy inspection as a means of soliciting new business. Community-based audits provide the highest degree of objectivity. "Our auditors are not selling other services or products, so our recommendations are unbiased and objective," continued Lessik. The cost of a community-based energy audit, (which typically lasts two hours) is ten dollars and is billed by NSP. If you have any questions about home energy audits contact your District 12 Community Council at 646-8884.

cil. Housing concerns such as accessory apartments, low-income housing and current and potential problems will be dealt with by the housing task force in the coming months. Expansion of the North St. Anthony Park Block Workers program to South St. Anthony will be another council activity.

Ongoing programs such as the block nurse program, energy audits, the community gardens, the neighborhood composting project and the boulevard tree replacement efforts will continue to receive attention.

So. St. Anthony Block Workers

Residents of South St. Anthony Park have requested assistance from the District 12 Council in setting up a block worker program similar to that in North St. Anthony Park. Margot Monson, Block Worker coordinator for North St. Anthony, has agreed to assist in this effort. A planning meeting will be held on Jan. 16 at 7 p.m. in the District 12 office. South St. Anthony residents are invited to communicate ideas for the implementation of the program and to indicate a willingness to participate by calling the office.

Energy Workshop

The St. Paul Neighborhood Energy Consortium, in conjunction with the District 12 Community Council, will hold a seminar on furnace efficiency and heating your home with wood on Jan. 23 at 7 p.m. The workshop will be held in the community room at the St. Anthony Park Branch Library. Discussion will include methods of determining your furnace efficiency, new high efficiency furnaces, and wood stoves and fireplace inserts. Please call 644-5436 for more information and to register. There is no charge for the seminar but advance registration is appreciated.

Managing snow emergencies

Snow emergencies have been declared several times this winter as a result of our heavy snowfalls. Here is some useful information which will assist area residents in coping with the snow: In St. Paul, posted snow emergency routes and the central business district are plowed first. Plowing of the 350 miles of streets in this category usually begins at 9 p.m. on the day the snow emergency is declared and ends at 7 a.m. the next morning.

St. Paul's east-west residential streets are done on the even calendar dates and the north-south residential streets on the odd dates, beginning at 8 a.m. and continuing until completed.

Residents must move vehicles from designated St. Paul streets before plowing begins to avoid a $25 fine. Parking on the street can be resumed only after curb to curb plowing is complete.

The sidewalk on your property has to be shoveled within 24 hours. If a complaint is received at 298-4747, the city will send an inspector to issue a tag.

The following numbers will help guide you to the proper city department:

- Plowing and street sanding-292-6600
- Snow emergency and snow ticketing-292-6003
- Sidewalk shoveling questions-298-4747
- Emergency maintenance requests after normal working hours-292-6600

Robert Guthrie

Classical guitarists featured at Music in the Park

Classical guitarists Jeffrey Van and Robert Guthrie will be featured in a duo recital Jan. 12, 4 p.m., as part of the Music in the Park series. The concert, one of it's kind in the city, will be held at St. Anthony Park United Church of Christ, 2129 Commonwealth Ave.

The two nationally acclaimed guitarists will present a varied program of music from England, Germany, Spain, South America and the United States. Works by Praetorius, Handel, Brahms, Sor, Granados Albeniz, Santorsola and Foden will be featured, along with the premieres of two compositions by Minnesota composers James McGuire and the late Donald Ferguson.

Ferguson, a musicologist, composer, author and conductor who died recently at the age of 102, was professor of music at the University of Minnesota for 37 years, program annotator for the Minneapolis Symphony (Minnesota Orchestra) for 30 years and a founder of the Bach Society. Ferguson's work, "Today - and Yesterday O and Tomorrow," was written in 1974 for Jeffrey Van as "two little experiments for guitar." Van, who recently adapted the piece for two guitars, describes it as neo-romantic and similar in character to the music of Brahms. The premiere performance will be dedicated to Ferguson's memory.

Jeffrey Van

James McGuire, whose "Suite" for two guitars will also be premiered, has taught at the University of Minnesota since 1974 and is also on the faculties of St. Olaf College, Mankato State University and Gustavus Adolphus College.

Although Van and Guthrie pursue careers as performers and teachers in different areas of the country, they have collaborated in numerous duo recitals across the United States since 1979. Van is currently on the faculty of the University of Minnesota where he received the first master of arts degree in guitar. Guthrie is currently a resident of Dallas, Texas, and has served on the faculties of Southern Methodist University, the Aspen Music Festival, Yale University and the Boston Conservatory.

The concert, sponsored by the St. Anthony Park Arts Forum, is partially funded by the Northwest Area Foundation and the Metropolitan Regional Arts Council. Tickets are $6, adult; $5, senior/student; and are available at The Bibelot Shop, Micawber's Bookstore or at the door. Season tickets for the remaining six concerts are also available at $26, adult; $22, senior/student. Student rush tickets are $3 at concert time.

Prepare for Your Retirement Today

Are you looking forward to the comfortable days of retirement? More importantly, will you have enough savings for that well-deserved retirement? Today Social Security benefits may not be enough to allow you to follow the lifestyle to which you have been accustomed in your pre-retirement years. Even with income from your employer's retirement plan, you may not have enough savings to support the same lifestyle with the effects of today's inflation.

To achieve your retirement goals, you may wish to prepare NOW by opening your own Individual Retirement Account (IRA). An IRA allows you to deposit up to $2,000.00 per year, deducting that contribution from both your federal and state income taxes thus resulting in immediate tax savings. And, if you do not have the funds available now to make the deposit, ParkBank will lend up to $2,000.00 to qualified borrowers to make your deposit.

By making your deposit at an early age, you will have more funds available when you retire as illustrated below in this hypothetical example:

| Age | Paid In | Accumulation* |
|-----|---------|---------------|
| 60 | 10,000 | 12,961 |
| 55 | 20,000 | 32,699 |
| 50 | 30,000 | 62,755 |
| 45 | 40,000 | 108,524 |
| 40 | 50,000 | 178,222 |
| 35 | 60,000 | 284,357 |

*Assumes $2,000.00 yearly deposit. 8.5% interest compounded quarterly, customer makes deposits until age 65, substantial penalty for early withdrawal.

You may make your IRA contribution as late as April 15th, 1986 or until you file your 1985 taxes. Our customer service department can give you all of the details on the various IRA investment plans available. Remember, the sooner you prepare, the better your retirement will be. Our customer service representatives welcome the chance to help you plan for your future retirement security.

Songs for the unsung

Sometimes it seems appealing to write for a publication which is full of what newspaper jargon calls "hard news." There would be up-to-the-minute reporting of exciting events; exposés of underhanded politicians or government graft; announcements of the plans for new developments and new cures. Journalism on the "fast track" has a certain appeal. One could become famous for being a writer who is fast and dirty.

But community journalism, at least at the Bugle, doesn't seem to be that way, at least not very often. Most of what happens in Falcon Heights, Lauderdale, Energy Park or St. Anthony Park is simply not earth-shaking. Our cosmopolitan cousins might consider the news here to be dull, but for us the importance of the news is that it touches our daily lives. We live in communities where school programs, our kids' hockey games, ice cream socials and businesses provide the "hard news."

There's seldom anything really juicy to uncover because most of our neighbors and agencies and leaders are trying to live and serve responsibly. So without vice and corruption to uncover, what's left? Just the sort of news you find in this issue.

Part of our job is to uncover the folks and the programs who are little noticed or little praised. We write the songs to celebrate the unsung. The foster parents featured in this issue aren't going to make the cover of Time magazine, but they'll make the Bugle because they're doing important work and they're doing it with unerring faithfulness. A woman who cares about education for peace and new understanding of the Soviet Union deserves attention for her quiet dedication to her cause. Refugees who live among us striving to succeed or at least survive in a strange new land need songs of praise and support.

Our songs may never become cantatas or symphonies, but hopefully they'll result in new understanding of our neighbors. Hard news it's not, but it's what we've got. I, for one, am content with it.

The rhythm of a snowy day

The snow began on Saturday at a quarter after five,
And the howling wind kept me awake all night.
By early Sunday morning
it was drifted across the drive,
And everything outside was clean and white.
"Did we get the paper yet?"
"No, I don't think so, but I'll check."
Without my Sunday paper I get mean.
As I opened up the front door
icy wind blew down my neck,
And the darn Dispatch was nowhere to be seen.
"I wonder if the storm has passed."
(Thanks for the coffee, Hon.)
Let's turn on 'CCO, see what they say."
"They say it's gone on east of here,
and the worst of it is done,
But we'll get some flurries later on today."
"More flurries, huh? Well, then I won't begin to shovel yet.
No sense doing it, then doing it again."
"Check the kids. They're making snowmen."
"Oh, their gloves are slopping wet.
How long have they been out? It's only ten!"
"They got up about six-thirty and just couldn't wait to play.
By seven there were angels in the snow."
"Do you think there's church?"
"I doubt it. Not on such a snowy day.
And if there is I don't think we can go.
We'll never get the car through..."
"Oh, the car! I left it out!
It's been out on the street in front all night!
I hope it isn't...darn it!
It's a snow emergency,
The snowplow has submerged the car in white!"

"There's the phone. I'll get it.
Hello? Oh, hi, how are you?
Well, it was quite a shock, I have to say.
I suppose your kids are happy and excited?
Ours are, too.
I doubt that they'll be inside once all day,
Oh, that's a good idea! Sure!
If you can, so can we.
Oh, yes, I'm sure they're open, but I'll call.

We'll meet you in an hour.
Are you going to walk or ski?
Okay, thanks. This is going to be a ball!"
"Who is it?" "It was Mary,
and they've come up with a plan.
They're anxious to get out in all this snow.
We're going to meet at Bridgman's,
in an hour if we can.
Now where'd I put my moon boots? Do you know?"

We got the family bundled up,
so we looked like walking beds.
You couldn't tell the females from the males.
Then out we trudged, against the cold.
We pulled the kids on sleds,
Into the whiteness, where there were no trails.

When we got to Bridgman's, the skis and sleds were piled outside the door,
A welcome splash of color in the snow.
Inside it smelled of coffee.
Snow clumps melted on the floor.
And red-cheeked neighbors greeted us, "Hello!"
"Hello, Stew. Hi, Kathy, kids.
Boy, this is really fun,
To see the neighbors gathered here like this!
(Oh, sorry, Stew. I think I got.
some snow there on your bun.)
It's times like these that I just wouldn't miss!"
The conversation level was as loud as it has been
In my many trips to Bridgeman's through the years.
And the clink and clank of dishes
could be heard above the din,
As more hearty souls came in to warm their ears.
"Hi, Jim," "Oh, hi, how are ya?
So you made it out today!
I'm surprised you're not in bed,
still half asleep!"
"We're supposed to get my brother
on a plane from Santa Fe.
He's seen snow before, but never quite this deep."

"Oh, there's Bob, back in the corner,
with his coffee and his book,
Looking totally oblivious to the snow.
Hello, Bob, where's Mary?"
"Can't you guess? Just take a look.
She got waylaid inside the Bibelot."
"They were open!" giggled Mary,
as she struggled through the door,
With her arms so full it made poor Bob go pale.

"Oh, please don't look so anguished, Bob,
I haven't made us poor.
All the stuff I have here was on sale!"

"Would you like some coffee here?"
"Yes, thank you. Make it threee.
And put it on one check. (We'll make Bob pay.)"
"And would you like to order?"
"No." "No thanks." "Nothing for me."
"I think that coffee's all I'll have today."

WHAP! "Hey! What was that that hit the window by my head?"
"The kids are throwing snowballs.
One went wild."
"Well, it made me spill my coffee
on my hand. It's turning red!
If I ever get my hands upon that child..."

"Jingle bells, jingle bells, Jingle all the way."
"Oh, carollers! Gee, what a good idea!"
"They're kind of shy on tenors."
"...in a one horse open sleigh."
"I think I'll join them for a while.
I'll see ya!"

"More coffee here?" "Yes, thanks."
"I think I'll switch mine to decaf."
"Well, I had better change mine too, I guess.
I must be getting older,
(Will you pass the half and half?)
I can tolerate the real stuff less and less."

And so it went, that winter day, till after it got dark.
While most sane Minnesotans huddled warm,
A few of us brave fools
who live in St. Anthony Park
Went trudging off to Bridgeman's in the storm.
And the chili, and the coffee,
and the chicken noodle soup
Kept flowing from the kitchen all day long.
And though the cups and bowls
of steaming liquids warmed the group,
There was something so much warmer going on.
We passed the day with neighbors,
and their children, and their friends,
Woven tight together with a common tie.
We had shared the cup of friendship,
that's the fuel that never ends,
It will keep us warm till next Fourth of July.

They were rewarded for their efforts when Mary finally spoke her first words at the age of five and when, after surgery at age six, she was finally able to walk.

At last schooling became a possibility. Mrs. Doebebeling struggled to convince the local school to enroll Mary in kindergarten. At age seven she was finally accepted into a special kindergarten class. Two years later she started school at the State School for the Blind in Faribault. She attended that school until she completed eighth grade.

After the death of her husband, Genevieve Doebebeling moved to St. Anthony Park where Mary was enrolled in Como High School. She graduated from there with a B average in 1984 at the age of 21.

Now Mrs. Doebebeling is Mary's adult foster care provider while she attends the Minneapolis Society for the Blind to learn how to live independently. It looks like Mary's well on the way to achieving that goal, thanks to the tireless work and support of the Doebebelings.

Mrs. Doebebeling has five children, 17 grandchildren and four great-grandchildren to keep her 80 years young. But it was her efforts on behalf of Mary and her other foster children which earned her the special award as an outstanding care provider. Her home is one of almost 400 licensed adult and child foster homes in Ramsey County.

It may have been the ultimate understatement of a child's gratitude to her parent when Mary spoke to the crowd at the award dinner and said of her foster mother, "I couldn't have done it without her."

A quiet career for neighborhood couple

By Alice Duggan

Babies are still arriving, from time to time, in the St. Anthony Park home of Clair and Garnet Rice. "About six a year," Mrs. Rice says. Back in 1982, the Rices received an award from the Children's Home Society of Minnesota (CHSM), not to mark retirement but to celebrate a thirty-year long career as foster parents, a career that benefitted 265 babies. Early on, the Rices' four children were there to enjoy and to help with the babies; now their parents maintain this quiet career on their own. "It's satisfying, when they're growing and thriving", Mrs. Rice said. "They're blooming, it seems like." "Some of them you won't find any cuter," her husband added.

The new-born babies arrive fresh from the hospital and settle into a well-used bassinet. They stay a few days or a few weeks, however long it takes to arrange plans for a permanent home. "There are a lot of unpredictables" affecting this time period, Mrs. Rice said. The baby's wardrobe is provided by the CHSM as are formula, pampers, medications and medical care. The baby's routine check-ups and immunizations are handled at the CHSM as they have been since the foster care program began. The other needs of a baby, the intangibles, have to come from the foster parents.

The Rices have a rich trove of memories and shared history, much of it documented in a thick scrapbook. They remember Mrs. Val Kuefler, who supervised the program, as a cheerful crusader who visited church circles trying to recruit foster parents. She also visited a dubious Mrs. Rice at home and persuaded her to give it a try, and in 1952 she did. Foster care in family homes was still quite new for CHSM. Until 1949, all the infants were cared for in an institutional-style nursery. By 1954, there were 30 homes licensed through the CHSM and most of them were in St. Anthony park. Today, our neighborhood has only one, the Rices. Children's Home Society would like to have more, right here where their services are at our doorstep.

The Rices remember too the old building (which has changed hands, and is now the Commonwealth Care Center) where foster moms took their charges for well-baby clinic; the playground used by the old orphanage, where CHSM stands today; and the festive ribbon-cutting ceremony for the new building, in 1959 (Orville Freeman presiding). They remember friendliness, warmth and support in all their dealings with the Society. "It hasn't been just business", Mrs. Rice said. I've always been glad I said yes to Mrs. Kuefler."

Over the years, many things have changed—the addresses of buildings, the opinions of pediatricians, the options of new mothers, but the need for foster homes continues. There are still babies born whose parents cannot care for them, who have no home, who need a cradle in a waystation until this crucial problem is solved. The Rices are still helping, and the CHSM is still helping them help.

tions with the Eritrean guerrilla forces who were fighting to liberate Eritrea from the Ethiopian Marxist government. "I was in prison for one year," Mesch recalled. "They tortured me by lashing the undersides of my feet until they were completely raw." While he was in prison government troops also searched his house on several occasions, intimidating Hewit and Tomas so that they were forced to seek shelter with members of Hewit's family.

Eventually Berhe was released from prison, but his regained freedom brought him little security. "I was very afraid—I was frightened for my life," he reflected, "and I knew that if I stayed there I would have been killed." By 1981, after a year of living in such fear, his family decided to try to flee the country. Berhe found a camel driver who, for a fee, was willing to lead his family through the countryside to the Sudanese border. He then developed a pretext for leaving Asmara. "The city was surrounded by military troops and they asked me where we were going," he explained. "I told them that my mother was outside, that she was living in a village and was about to die."

His ploy worked and for two weeks the Meschs made their way approximately 150 miles across guerrilla-controlled western Eritrea. They carried no food or water, relying instead on their guide to find freshwater springs and food caches along the way. By day they were at risk of being attacked by Ethiopian bombers which strafed the countryside with machine gun fire and dropped bombs and napalm on the nomads who occupied the arid region. At the same time, the Meschs sought to avoid contact with the guerrillas who would have pressed them into service fighting against the Ethiopian troops. With great caution and traveling only at night, the family finally crossed the Sudanese border and found shelter in a refugee camp.

For the following two years the Meschs lived in the Sudan where Berhe found work as a barber. It was here that Berhe and Hewit's first daughter, Turic, was born and where the family eventually gained refugee status through the International Red Cross.

In August of 1983 the Meschs were allowed to emigrate to New York. During their eighteen month residence in Brooklyn and the Bronx Hewit gave birth to a second daughter, Sarah. Also in New York the family became members of the Lutheran church since they were unable to find an Alexandrian Orthodox church in which to worship, as was their tradition. Disliking the crowded living conditions of New York and seeking a better environment to raise a family, the Meschs worked through their Minnesota-born minister to relocate here. Finally last March plans were completed for the family to settle in St. Paul.

Berhe said that he is "[very much] encouraged" by the prospect of life in St. Anthony Park. Tomas, a cheerful and friendly boy of seven, is doing very well in the first grade and Berhe is taking classes to prepare for completion of his high school equivalency degree. Despite the snow and cold, he feels his children are able to play safely outside. Already, he said, he can see that his children are "growing up like Americans."

However Berhe acknowledged it has been difficult to leave his relatives and friends behind knowing that he may never see them again. "We love them and we remember them and they will remember us until we die, and that's the only thing that is difficult for me," he said. He hopes that someday there may be sufficient change in the political climate in Eritrea that he can return and see his family, or, barring that, that he might be able to sponsor some of his and Hewit's relatives as refugees here. In the meantime, however, Berhe and the rest of the Meschs are taking advantage of the opportunities available to them in the haven which they have sought for so long.

Falcon Heights parents await school board action

By Mary Mergenthal

"We wanted to show our support for this teacher," says Falcon Heights resident Jean Leier who was one of more than 60 parents who signed a letter which ran recently in two Roseville newspapers. "There's nothing we can do now about the move of our kindergartners from Brimhall to Falcon Heights Learning Center, but we wanted to recognize that we think the person to be thanked in the situation is Marty McDermott, the kindergarten teacher who moved with the two classes."

The reason for the move was overcrowding at Brimhall Elementary School. That problem exists in most of the elementary schools in the Roseville district but is particularly acute at Brimhall. The school has a new principal, Dr. Fred Storti. He recalls how the fall term began. "One week before school opened we were faced with 23 unexpected kindergartners. The best choice, of course, would have been to have known about those students sooner so we could have made arrangements to keep all children at Brimhall through triple shifting (running three, rather than two, class sessions each day). But the move to Falcon Heights was a positive alternative to the crowding, given the timing we had. Mrs. McDermott was the key element in making that work. Without a doubt she's made it work so well."

Brimhall is at full capacity now, and parents of these kindergartners are wondering what will happen to the students next year. Every possible classroom area is being used with some special classes even using hallways.

According to Roseville parent Ellen Shelton who is the chairperson of the District 623 Elementary Task Force, the problem of overcrowding is not going to go away and the district needs to take steps to provide more space. The task force, which is composed of the principal, two teachers and four parents from each of Roseville's five elementary schools, recommended to the school board in early December that Falcon Heights Elementary School be reopened in the fall of 1986.

"District enrollment projections show that elementary enrollment will continue to increase for as long as it is possible to project," says Shelton. "Present enrollment K-5 in the district is 2,682, which is up almost 100 from last year. By 1990, 2,943 students are expected. These projections deal only with preschool children already in the district; they do not take into account new housing starts and changes in housing patterns. For instance, Falcon Heights is one of quite a few neighborhoods in which younger families are replacing retired persons who move into other kinds of housing. It would seem likely that the new University housing unit will have a continued effect in this direction, especially within the Falcon Heights area."

Parents in the Falcon Heights area will be watching closely to see what the school board decides. The board took no action on the task force's proposal at the December 5 meeting because they need to consult the new district superintendent, Dr. Roger Woerner, who will be coming to the district from Mason City, Iowa, in March. After consulting with Woerner it is expected that a time-line for decision-making will be announced.

The decision will not be an easy one for the board. The district faces an anticipated $2 million deficit by the end of the next fiscal year and must still accommodate an increasing student population. They have recently made extensive budget cuts to bring that projected deficit to $1.5 million. If Falcon Heights school is opened, approximately $250,000 for staffing, maintenance, utilities and other building-associated costs will be added to the projected deficit.

Despite those problems, the task force strongly supports the expenditure required to open another school. Based on a year of study, the task force feels it is the only way quality education can be maintained for all students in the district.

Local girl makes big hit in tennis

Park resident Kira Gregersen plays tennis year-round—and she's got the honors to prove it's worthwhile to do so.

By Dave Merk

Kira Gregersen started to play tennis at the age of 10. Tennis was merely a game she played with her brother for fun. But this October, at 14, she has already won her first state Class A singles championship.

Gregersen, a Park resident who attends St. Paul Academy (SPA), has played varsity tennis since the 7th grade, and has played 1st-singles for SPA for the past two seasons.

Her 6-3, 6-3 victory over Amy McCrea of Minneapolis Lutheran for the state title is only one of the many bright spots in Gregersen's young career.

Last year she finished No. 2 in the state in her age class. That honor afforded her the opportunity to play in national tournaments in Detroit, California, Atlanta and Oklahoma.

"I guess what people don't realize," her mother said, "is that you have to be No. 1 or No. 2 in the three-state region in order to go to a national tournament. It's quite an honor."

This year's rankings have just been released, and Gregersen is No. 2 again. However, she turns 15 in December and will therefore have to compete in the next age group (16-year-olds) when she enters tournaments in 1985-86.

"I don't think it (the 16-year-old division) will be a big change," she said. "But they are stronger."

Brian McCoy, the resident tennis pro at Arden Hills Club where Gregersen and her family are members, has been Gregersen's coach for two years.

"Depending on how much she puts into it," McCoy said, "she's got the potential to get better each year. She needs to become more of an all-court player, a force at the net. I'm sure she's in the top 100 in the nation in her age group."

Gregersen said she puts in about two hours, three times per week, on the practice courts. "Right now I'm working on my net game, so I don't work on my serve as much." She agrees that to compete against the higher age groups she will need to have a stronger overall game.

"I just want to play and do my best," she said. "I want to win, but I won't be upset if I lose."

Gregersen is now preparing for tournaments in the metro area and for the Outdoor Section at Nicollet Tennis Center in June. The Outdoor Section will have strong bearing on next year's rankings.

Gregersen isn't thinking too seriously about college yet, but she knows she wants to go someplace where it's warm. But while she's still here, Gregersen enjoys playing softball and swimming at SPA. In school, her favorite subjects are mathematics and art.

Community Chorus seeks singers

By Joel Schurke

As the yuletide ebbs away, so do many of the well-warmed voices that joined in the hearty harmony of the season's carols. Now those of you seasonal or seasoned singers who haven't an outlet for your vocal talents have a new opportunity—a community chorus.

The music committee of the St. Anthony Park Arts Forum is organizing a community chorus that is open to everyone, and they mean everyone. "We really don't want people to think it's that formal of a group. We really want to be a community group and are looking for people in St. Anthony Park and the surrounding area who like to sing," Mary Jane Munson, chairperson of the music committee, commented.

The committee cleared the first organizational hurdle by hiring Lizette Larson-Miller as the director of the new chorus. Larson-Miller's credentials are impressive. With a bachelor's degree in conducting and a master's degree in choral music from the University of Southern California, Larson-Miller came to Minnesota and completed another graduate degree in liturgical studies at St. John's University in Collegeville, Minnesota.

For the past four years Larson-Miller applied her education as director of music and liturgy at the Basilica of St. Mary in Minneapolis and began a teaching career at St. John's University. She taught and directed elementary, high school and college groups and is excited about working with her first community group.

"We are going to take anyone who wants to sing. It will be a good time with a social break between the two hours of rehearsal, but we will work at performing a variety of high-quality music. I plan to do some early American literature and possibly a commissioned piece for our first concert, something that reflects the heritage of St. Anthony Park," Larson-Miller stated.

The chorus's first concert is being planned in conjunction with the Park Festival celebration this June. "Musical interviews", not auditions, will be held on Jan. 14 to give Larson-Miller a chance to hear each voice and determine which section of the chorus is appropriate. The first rehearsal is Jan. 28.

Larson-Miller is well aware of the potential conflict between the community chorus and church choirs. "That's one of the reasons we chose Tuesdays for rehearsals. I've directed church choirs so I know the conflict. I really want the people to do both, not one or the other. If you like to sing, come and enjoy it. We hope to learn something and represent the community," Larson-Miller said.

Central High students chosen by 3M

Jill Rinehart and Puteri Meorailan, North St. Anthony Park, were two of eight Central students chosen for the Science Training Encouragement Program (STEP) sponsored by the 3M corporation. The program gives 30 St. Paul high school students experience working with 3M engineers and scientists twice a week during the second semester and also provides participants with a summer job at 3M.

St. Anthony Park Elementary previews comet show

Halley's Comet was the "star" of a show presented by Arthur Schwartz of The Playwright's Center at a recent assembly at St. Anthony Park School. Schwartz wanted the students there to preview his one-man show before taking it on the road. The opening scene featured Schwartz in a futuristic costume 76 years from now, then went back through time for each appearance of the comet at 76-year intervals. Schwartz played the part of Benjamin Franklin viewing the comet in one scene. Student reaction helped Schwartz to make minor revisions in his performance before going to other schools.

Another recent assembly focused on safety. Representatives of the railroads talked to the children about the dangers of playing near the railroad tracks. On Dec. 18, St. Paul police fingerprinted new students and kindergartners as part of their campaign to keep all children's fingerprints on file, primarily for identification of missing children.

Sixth graders at the school did independent cultural studies in December. Each student chose a country or culture and focused on a major holiday or festival celebration. All were required to produce visual displays based on their research—a costume, drawings, or a model. These exhibits were displayed to parents and other St. Anthony Park students on Dec. 18.

Officers elected in the Student Council election on Nov. 20 were: President, Rachel Allyn; Vice President, Nick Holderman; Secretary, Julie MacGregor; Treasurer, Steve Mann. All are sixth graders.

project for the fair. On Jan. 13, projects will be judged by a team of professional scientists, headed by Murray parent Jim Lufkin. Last year, four projects went on to regional competition, and two of those survived to advance to the state contest at Rochester. This year's students are striving to outdo those of last year.

Murray teachers

Band director Felix James has received a mini-grant of $600 for a computer-assisted instructional music center in his classroom. James has attended a workshop to learn to introduce this new technology into the music study. Students will receive immediate feedback, will have fun learning repetitive tasks, and will have a wide variety of learning experiences compatible with different learning styles.

A second Murray teacher, Janet Becker in the Program for Social Development, has also received a mini-grant. This grant for $700 will be used to employ Beth Dorsey, a PhD candidate in Educational Psychology at the University of Minnesota, to train the six teachers of the emotionally disturbed students at Murray in teaching social skills to their students. She will spend some time team-teaching with the staff, gradually transferring responsibility to the classroom teachers.

Community education news

Brochures for winter session activities and classes have been mailed. Extra copies are available at St. Anthony Park Elementary School or St. Anthony Park and Merriam Park Branch Libraries. The Community Education department is always seeking persons as instructors who have a profession, hobby, livelihood or skill they would like to share. Instructors are paid for their time and expertise. Potential teachers should call David Larson at 645-2456.

The process of community education is based on the concept of local citizen participation. The backbone of any Community Education program is the local advisory council. The St. Anthony/Merriam Park Community Education area is seeking interested residents to provide input on program ideas, school usage and classes or activities. The council meets approximately quarterly. The next meeting is Jan. 27, 7 p.m., at St. Anthony Park Elementary School, Room 201. Come and bring a friend.

A St. Anthony Park Elementary School kindergarten teacher, Melanie Nelson, will be teaching an after-school Spanish course for elementary students in the community. The children can enjoy learning another language through games, music and art. Participants will learn basic expressions, numbers and vocabulary in Spanish. Classes begin Jan. 21 at the school and continue every Tuesday for eight weeks. Cost is $6. Advance registration is necessary. Call 645-2456. Class schedule is 4-4:45 p.m. for K-3 and 4:45-5:30 p.m. for grades 4-6.

Obituary

Phoebe A. Uhl, longtime St. Anthony Park resident, died Dec. 4. She would have been 92 years old Jan. 5 and had been in poor health after a fall in the spring shortly before moving to the Luther Place condominiums.

Mrs. Uhl moved into the Park in 1928 when she and her husband, Alfred, purchased and operated the Home Hearth Inn, an early Park restaurant at Raymond and Doswell which had been opened in 1920.

She was also a home economics student at the university and received her BA in 1936. In 1932, at the urging of student acquaintances on the St. Paul campus, she converted the restaurant into the first co-op boarding club for University of Minnesota students. The co-op was for male students and she had more than 120 boarder members before World War II reduced the ranks of male students and the co-op was closed.

Mrs. Uhl later ran the Dugout grocery at the same intersection.

She is survived by her daughter, Carol Faust, and son, Al Uhl, both Park residents, and grandchildren, Lyn Uhl and Al Uhl Jr.

Herness from 1

members became the nucleus of the group. "We used to meet in the living room," Herness explained, "but the group got too big so my husband adapted the basement into a meeting place." When the basement became crowded, they moved to the Whittier Community Center in Minneapolis where they are currently meeting. The Council still uses the basement, however, for teaching Russian language classes once a week. There are now over 20 Councils of American Soviet Friendship throughout the United States. Their purpose is to work for peace through promoting friendly contacts between the Soviets and the Americans. If we could establish "free open communication and cultural exchange between the Soviets and the United States, war would be impossible," stated Herness. "I could no more fight those Soviets than I could fight my neighbor."

Relations between the Soviet Union and the United States have cooled within the last few years, Herness noted, and with the arms race continuing, it's becoming more and more dangerous. Herness is hoping that the long-awaited summit meeting between President Reagan and General Secretary Gorbachev will produce some positive results which will contribute to peace.

Meanwhile, Herness continues to encourage people to shed their old image of the Soviet Union and replace it with a new, more accurate one. If that is accomplished, she believes, the two super powers will be much closer to their stated goal: PEACE.

BACK PAIN

If back pains are a way of life for you, the reasons can be varied and complex. Some may be pathological, but very often the cause is muscles which are either over or under-exercised which are producing spinal distortion. Vertebrae slip into abnormal positions, resulting in "pinched" and irritated nerves, which cause pain and even loss of function of the affected body part. Poor posture, or even emotional tension, can be the root cause.

A quiet career

Garnet and Claire Rice have been taking in foster babies from Children's Home Society for years and they're still at it. They pose here with a recent visitor in front of photos of their own children and grandchildren. See page 6 for more about this St. Anthony Park couple.
