Business in St. Anthony Park

By Joel Schurke

The exodus of a few St. Anthony Park businesses in the past months has cast a question mark on the health of the area's business climate. This uncertainty may seem new to some residents, but for the business community it is ever-present. Managing to traverse the peaks, valleys and plateaus of business activity is key to the success of these small businesses.

The stability of a business community in a residential area is dependent upon an array of factors that make these commercial districts distinct from commercial areas such as shopping malls and downtown districts.

From the vantage point of a realtor the reasons people locate in St. Anthony Park are clear. "Schools, sports, block programs, but more than that it is just the neighbors. It's an attractive neighborhood—but that's not enough. Recently we were involved in the sales of Luther Place. The consistent reason people gave for locating there was the business district being just steps away," Steve Townley, owner of Knudsen Realty, explained.

This convenience factor is a big part of the balancing act many area businesses must perform. The difference between success and failure depends in part on the stores' ability to successfully sell their convenience to the neighborhood. The patronage of each and every neighbor does make a difference.

Stewart McIntosh, owner and manager of Park Hardware for 14 years, expressed his sentiments. "We've always been pretty smug and proud that you have one of everything you need in the neighborhood. You really don't need to go anywhere else if you don't want to."

Freedom of choice has a lot to do with the health of this business community. But the luxury of choice presumes something to choose from.

"Merchants who have located here to a large degree depend upon the neighborhood, but to an even larger degree depend on the public outside the community. Basically the way I see it is that everyone in the Park knows that Park Hardware, the Mobil station and the realty company are here. Reacquainting yourself with the neighborhood has more to do with selling the perceived value to the neighbors. You can probably get gas cheaper elsewhere or screws cheaper elsewhere," Townley said.

Selling this "perceived value" is not an easy task. Reaching a consensus on how to surmount the problem is part of the focus of the St. Anthony Park Merchants and Professionals Association.

"The general purpose of this organization shall be to promote the business, industrial, social and civic welfare and interests of St. Anthony Park." This all-encompassing proposal is the Association's reason for being. Attendance at Association meeting show that not all businesses consider being there to be very important.

"The Association is a very important thing that we can't allow to fall down to the point it was eight years ago—nonexistent," Mike Basich of Lederviva said.

As chairperson of the Association's advertising committee, Basich understands the complexity of attempting to weave together the needs and interests of such a diversity of businesses. "We started with the goal of promoting St. Anthony Park. Then you have the problem of how to promote it.

Which aspect? The retail, restaurants or professionals? It is very difficult to reach a consensus. Our strategy has been hit and miss. It is very difficult to pull together," Basich stated.

McIntosh, the president of the Association, concurs with Basich. "We are really fragmented on the advertising. There are professionals who

Exchange students find small world in local experiences

By John G. Shepard

The world has grown a little smaller and more familiar for two foreign exchange students who are in the last half of their year-long visit to St. Anthony Park. Randi Mogstad, 17, from Norway, is a senior at Como Senior High, and Juan Zatarain, 15, from Mexico is a sophomore at Central High. Both have found their time here to be highly rewarding and valuable, to a great extent because of the diversity of people they have come to know.

"My experience has been great," proclaimed the soft-spoken and friendly Mogstad. "One of the reasons is that I have met students from all over the world and before I did their countries were just names on the map," she continued. "Now I know someone who lives in those places." She explained that two French fellow exchange students have become close friends along with several Americans her age.

Zatarain, from Culiacan, the capital of the state of Sinaloa in western Mexico, has also found the exposure to young people from other parts of the world to be important. "It has been a wonderful experience because

Library renovation Major improvements planned

By Peggy Johnson

Constructed in 1917, the St. Anthony Park Library was one of the last Carnegie libraries ever to be built. From a distance, the building appears to be in good condition—but close inspection reveals serious deterioration. Last fall the St. Paul City Council allocated funds for renovating the library; if those funds remain intact, construction will begin this summer.

The renovation plans include both interior and exterior improvements: roof replacement, soffit and cornice repair, new ceiling and windows, better lighting, plumbing, and heating systems. "If you poke around you'll see things deteriorating—things that would cost more down the line to fix, if they're not fixed now," said Philip Broussard, architect, and member of the Long Range Planning Committee of the Library Association.

According to Broussard, the library has needed major maintenance work for several years. Four years ago, the planning committee was formed to identify areas that needed attention, and to find necessary funding to improve those areas. It hasn't always been easy.

Throughout the years, requests to the City Council for financial assistance have been denied, said Broussard.

But last fall, things began looking up. Mayor Latimer inspected the St. Anthony Park Library and recommended that it be given over $500,000 from federal revenue sharing funds, to complete its renovation.

The City Council approved the recommendation and now construction is scheduled for this summer. But there may be one more catch. Efforts to trim the federal deficit may result in a trimmed library budget. If so, the construction plans may have to be revised to fit the reduced budget.

"I think that various parts of the plan will have to be prioritized [if the budget is reduced]," said Janie Schomberg, president of the Library Association.

Janet Quale, member of the Library Association, agreed. "I guess they would do the most imperative things first."

In addition to maintenance reconstruction, the long range planning committee has developed some renovation ideas of its own—ideas not included on the City Council's priority list.

Bush Foundation awards $50,000

The Bush Foundation has awarded the St. Anthony Park Block Nurse Program $50,000 for direct client services over the next two years. "It was the high level of community support which St. Anthony Park has given the Block Nurse Program that most impressed the Bush committee," said Marge Jamieson, director of services for the Block Nurse Program. "Our recent external evaluation emphasizes the quality of care provided in the program and its low costs, but equally impressive to the Bush Foundation is the community's role."

That role has many players. The District 12 Council serves as the program's fiscal agent and also recruits and trains its volunteers. Neighborhood members of the Block Nurse Board of Directors and Advisory Board serve without pay. Churches—laity, youth and clergy provide pastoral care and help with special projects. Service groups—scouts and "4-H"ers—take on specific tasks. Businesses cooperate to convenience clients and to assist the program's board of directors. And many individual citizens contribute generously in fund drives and in words of support to those who staff and manage the program.

The Bush grant will enable the program to serve more clients. "We hope to do more outreach now so that people who need our services can hear about them," said Mary Libera, the primary Block Nurse.

The St. Anthony Park Block Nurse Program provides those services needed by older persons to remain independent and in their own homes. Registered nurses, homemakers and trained volunteers—all of whom live in the neighborhood—are the care givers.

The future of the block nurse concept is a constant issue for the program's board of directors. Whether the concept will survive depends on three things: Can it be replicated in other communities? Will it be accepted and integrated into the wider health and long-term care system? And will home care services be granted a stable funding source?

The third question could be answered positively by a change in Medicare and Medicaid coverage and/or the provision of private insurance to cover needed home services. Public support for such developments is vital.

The second question could be answered positively if present health and long-term care systems come to see that the long-term care of elderly people in their homes is not well-served by large, centralized organizations but is best done, at much less cost, in the neighborhood where existing resources can be pooled and personalized care can be given. If this fact is recognized, then present systems could contract with local block nurse programs to provide long-term care services for elderly persons in their homes.

It is the first question, however, "Can the Block Nurse Program be replicated in other communities?" which must first be answered for the block nurse concept to be of real interest in the wider system. Several neighborhoods want to begin. Finding the short-range funding is the problem.

Whatever happens, the St. Anthony Park community is to be commended for its effort to improve the quality of life for its elder citizens and to be a model for other communities who wish to do the same.

St. Anthony Park Community Gardens Workshop

A Garden Workshop will be held in the District 12 office on April 5 from 10-12 noon to provide gardeners with information on how to produce quantities of high quality fruits and vegetables. Master Gardeners, trained by the University of Minnesota, and experienced gardeners from the St. Anthony Park Community Gardens will teach the workshop.

The workshop is open to any interested gardener. Those renting plots in the community gardens are especially encouraged to attend. Call 646-8884 to reserve a place so that adequate materials can be provided.

Neighborhood Crime Watch

The Northwest area police have informed District 12 of a number of burglaries which have occurred in the community recently. Reports of several garage break-ins and auto thefts and vandalism have been reported in the District 12 office.

Residents are reminded that they must call the police even if nothing is stolen. Police can then trace the incidents, increase surveillance, and see developing patterns.

Our Neighborhood Crime Watch is only as good as we make it. Everyone needs to report crimes, tell neighbors when leaving town, and watch for unusual activity in your block.

Compost site opens

If the snow cover is gone, the District 12 Compost Site between Cromwell and Bayless on Robbins will be open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Apr. 26 and 27. Residents may deposit grass and leaves from yard and garden clean up. No brush or wood will be accepted.

Plot now for your gardens

Garden plots, 15 x 20 feet, are still available at St. Anthony Park Community Gardens on Robbins near the Raymond Avenue bridge. Applications for plot rental are at Park Hardware, SAP Foods, ParkBank, First Security Bank, and the District 12 office. Cost per plot is $11 per year.

Gardeners may request as many as two plots. Last year's gardeners who wish to reserve the same plot still need to mail in an application. First preference for plots will go to District 12 residents. Remaining plots will be assigned in the order the applications are received.

Gardens will be spread with compost and tilled before the plots are opened for planting in May. Water is available on the site.

It matters

I became an advocate of small businesses by owning one. It wasn't entirely successful, but that didn't matter. All of the warnings of family, friends and statistics went unheeded. I didn't swim very far, but I didn't sink either. What did matter was that I learned. I learned to appreciate small businesses. For what they do goes far beyond their own bottom-line.

It is hard to daunt the enthusiasm of small business owners striving for success. They have an unequalled tenacity for survival. But like other organisms they need basic things. Each business needs a viable product and people to buy that product. They need the reward of hearing from appreciative patrons that their business is a valuable resource to the community.

And the businesses need your money.

A recent billboard advertisement carries a simple message of a complex problem. It states "made in the U.S.A. — it matters." It could read "made in St. Anthony Park — it matters."

Support for local businesses is needed. The small-town-in-the-big-city description would hardly fit without the local businesses. Without the local businesses many of us wouldn't have our jobs.

The closing of Bridgeman's, for example, shocked our community. And it should. There aren't any neatly packaged answers to why Bridgeman's closed.

As a business Bridgeman's did not receive the necessary support from the neighbors as patrons. So why is the neighborhood shocked? The neighborhood helped to decide Bridgeman's fate.

Bridgeman's closing isn't entirely tragic. The personal and personnel losses are. But times change and the businesses with them. Fast food chains have cut deeply into the pockets of businesses like Bridgeman's. It is the consumer that really makes the decisions.

Be brazen enough to tell merchants what you like and dislike about their businesses. They will listen. Give them your ideas and give them support.

It matters.

Showalter resigns from Bugle board

By Elly Lahr

Susan Showalter has seen lean times and prosperous times at the St. Anthony Park Bugle. On March 1, Showalter stepped down after ten years of service on the Bugle board.

"We went from a paper that didn't know if it was going to print to one that had extra money and started winning awards," Showalter said.

Showalter has recently been named vice president of marketing and development for CurTech, Inc., a newly formed company which is developing technology to cure wounds that would not normally have been curable. Because of her new position, she does not feel she is able to be an effective member of the board.

Showalter began to work for the Bugle in 1975, when she was looking for a job that would allow her to spend time with her young children.

In 1981, Showalter left the Bugle and began her own consulting firm. She believes this gave her the chance to further her management skills, while still having time for her family.

"Consulting was a good way for me to do something that was professionally stimulating, but gave me time to be with my kids," Showalter said.

One of her consulting jobs brought her back to

Tell it like it is

Dear Editor:

You have a rare opportunity to do a story on Bridgeman's—a story which would give the facts on its status. Many St. Anthony Park residents would like to know.

There is a great deal of guessing and speculation, but no solid information. A recent issue of the Bugle carried a feature about the Bridgeman's, but the thing most people wanted to know about Bridgeman's was missing.

A factual presentation would create a lot of interest in your paper. Something like: "Did you see the story about Bridgeman's in the Bugle?"

Enlightening point

Dear Editor:

As a reasonably active member of several community organizations, I have participated in numerous meetings and discussions over the years where the inadequate lighting around the entries and exterior walkways of St. Anthony Park Elementary School has been raised as an issue of concern. My wife served a two year term on the St. Anthony Park School Association board several years ago only to leave the board with the lighting problems still unresolved.

Parents of young children, school staff members and members of the general public continue to be increasingly concerned and vocal about the lighting problems. The issue has been a concern for as long as I can remember, defying resolution through the terms of at least three school principals.

St. Anthony Park School is an extremely active school, both during school hours and evenings. It enjoys immense parental and community voluntary support. The community has historically supported its public schools voting heavily in favor of most school bonding issues. For the life of me I cannot understand why even minimal street and walkway lighting around the school's entrances has been such an elusive target for so long.

The bottom line, though, is that it shouldn't be that difficult! Something as basic as adequate lighting for the safety and convenience of those who come to learn, those who teach and those who support a very good public school should not be such an insurmountable problem.

Wanted: A champion and sponsor to solve this problem...hello...hello... Can anyone out there hear me?

Book Him

It was a foul night in early spring. The southern wind brought no comfort as it howled under the eaves and rattled the window behind my big overstuffed chair in the corner. It was late, and my reading lamp was the only light on in the house. The rest of the family had long since gone to bed and left me in that chair reading a book that I had intended to get to for weeks. Having finally found the time to open its heavy covers, I had been reluctant to put it down. So my kids had kissed me good-night between chapters, and my wife had called it a day without my really paying much attention.

I was totally absorbed in the story. It was one of those heavy political novels about a quiet man in an oppressed country who is suddenly and without explanation seized from his home in the middle of the night and never heard from again.

Just as the beautiful young wife sank to her knees to plead before the huge and surly sergeant, there was a sudden explosive knock on my door.

The book flew from my splayed hands. My body, my heart, and my hair all shot straight up in the air from the unexpected thunderous intrusion on the silence.

As I was catching my breath and calming my nerves, the knocking sounded again, drowning out the noisy pounding of my own heartbeat.

I arose trembling from the big chair and, stepping to the front entry, leaned forward and put my ear to the massive oak door. "Yes?" I squeaked.

"Mr. Hanson?" boomed the voice from the other side. It was a deep male voice, octaves deeper than my voice has ever been, even in the early morning, even with a cold.

"Yes?" I peeped. Who could it be, at this hour? The only strangers that ever come to my door are collecting for the Minnesota Freeze Campaign, but they usually come at supper time, and their voices are even wimpier than mine.

"Warren D. Hanson?" demanded the voice.

"Y-Yes? Who is it?"

"Library Police, Mr. Hanson. Open up."

I felt the blood instantaneously drain from my face. The room began to spin, but I quickly grabbed the doorknob for support, or I surely would have crumpled to the floor. The Library Police! So they had caught up to me at last. I guess I had known all along that it would happen someday. I looked up into the darkness at the top of the stairs and thought about my family, sleeping innocently up in their beds, unaware that their father, husband, provider, was about to be taken away into the night, to pay for his life of library crime.

I opened the door and two men in dark overcoats stepped into the room. In the dim hard light of my reading lamp, they cast two huge shadows on my living-room wall. One of the men reached into his coat pocket and produced a badge, a chromium likeness of Andrew Carnegie, with the inscription "Ex Libris" above his head.

"May we see your library card, Mr. Hanson?"

"Library card? Oh ... uh, sure. Library card. Let's see. I think it's in ... my, uh, ... coat pocket. Yeah, coat pocket." I went to the coat closet, both men close at my heels. I fumbled through the pockets of three or four coats and jackets before I came upon the crumpled scrap that had once been my library card. I handed it over, and the first man smoothed it out and examined the card number.

"That it?" he asked, showing it to the other man.

"That's it," came the gruff reply.

"Mind if we have a look around, Mr. Hanson?" asked the first man.

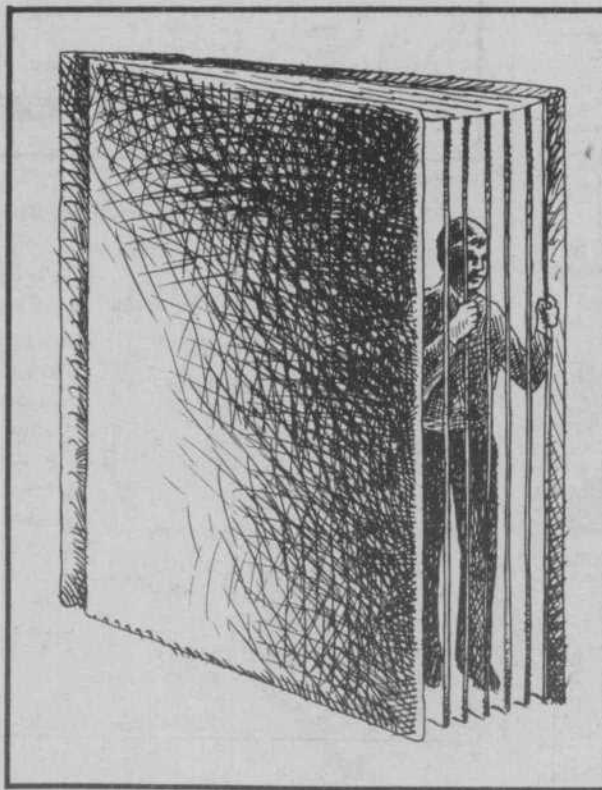

Illustration by Warren Hanson

"N-No. No, you go right ahead," I said with pathetic innocence, gesturing with my trembling hand to indicate that the whole house was theirs for the looking.

One went back to the living room, the other to the den. Both ignored me when I asked what they were looking for, as if I didn't know.

After a short while, as I looked over the shoulder of the man in the living room, the other's voice boomed from the den. "Bingo!" The man in the living room, who had been on his hands and knees looking through shelves of magazines and old Lettermen records, got up and went to the den. There he found the other man, standing on a chair, reaching to the top of the bookshelves and pulling down an armload of old library books, while dozens of unopened overdue notices cascaded to the floor. The man next to me turned and said, "You'll have to come with us."

They followed me to the coat closet, each with his arms full of books, as I got my jacket. As I poked my arms into the sleeves, I looked at the titles on the stack of spines. None of them rang a bell. But I wasn't surprised. There are always lots of books in the library that look great to me, but there is seldom time to read them once I get them home.

We went outside and got into a black sedan. The men piled the books into the trunk. I sat in the back seat, behind a wire fence, feeling every bit like a criminal. "This is just like that book I was reading tonight," I thought.

We drove into the darkness, eventually turning onto Carter Avenue and pulling to a stop in front of the library. Every light in the place was on. "At this time of night?" I thought. "No wonder the library is never open when I go there in the daytime. They run a night shift!"

I was ordered out of the car and up the library steps. As I opened the front door, I could see inside that the entire library staff was there, watching me intently as I entered. As I passed through the newly installed electronic security gate, suddenly a siren screamed, an alarm bell rang, red lights flashed, and a search beacon swept swiftly around the room, until its blinding beam fell upon me and came to a halt. I couldn't see a thing, but I heard the quick footsteps of the head librarian as she rushed up to me shouting, "That's him! That's him!"

A chair was shoved against the back of my legs, and I dropped involuntarily into it. The light was brutal. I couldn't see a thing, until a huge silhouette of a man stepped before me. "Did you check out these books, Mr. Hanson?" From nowhere, 38 overdue library books, all hard cover, dropped into my lap. "Well, let me see," I began, trying to appear as conscientious as I could. "The Oral Surgeon Murders, Madame Noir's Little Secret, The Humorous Actuary ... no, sir, I've never ready any of these books."

"We know you didn't read them. I asked if you checked them out. But you needn't answer. We know that you checked out The Oral Surgeon Murders in July 1981, Madame Noir's Little Secret in October 1979, and The Humorous Actuary in January 1973! In fact, you have not returned one book to the library on time in 14 years, yet you continue to ignore the overdue notices and refuse to pay the fines. We have no choice, Mr. Hanson, but to revoke your library card."

And with that, he held my crumpled card in front of my face and slowly tore it into little pieces, letting the bits fall into my lap, as the library staff cheered and applauded.

When he was done, I was lifted from my chair, turned around, and pushed out the door. I stood there alone on the limestone steps, as the reality of what had happened sank in. My days of free books were over. And I had no one but myself to blame.

I don't remember much about the rest of the night. I must have wandered around the neighborhood for several hours. All I know is that, early the next morning, my wife found me trying to read an opened book through the window at Micawber's. She took me gently by the arm and led me home.

After working with the board as a consultant, Showalter decided to become a member in 1982. While a member of the board Showalter was awarded a Busch fellowship and began to attend the University of Minnesota's Master's of Business Administration program.

As much as the board feels they benefitted from her experience, Showalter feels she benefitted from the board.

"I have never experienced a group of people like the Bugle board. A lot of good examples of leadership and commitment are on the board," Showalter said. "The board really works for the community."

Showalter lives with her husband Dave, and their two daughters, Abbey and Kiri, in Minneapolis. Although she won't be spending as much time in St. Anthony Park as she has in the past, Showalter hopes to remain a part of the community.

The Committee's plan includes improving the efficiency and appearance of the community interest room, providing more space for books, and creating a special children's corner with smaller tables, chairs, and bookshelves.

They also want to build a second exit in the back of the library leading from the community interest room to a courtyard. According to Broussard, the ground near the basement could be cut away and a courtyard about the size of the community interest room easily constructed. Also, a sidewalk leading to Como Avenue could be added, making the library wheelchair-accessible.

Within the courtyard, plans include constructing a little amphitheater and a seating area for community productions or gatherings. "Any changes would be in keeping with the character of the design," Broussard said. "It's on the National Historic Register and once that happens it can't be changed extensively on the outside."

Before any changes can begin, however, the Long

Laser technology comes to St. Anthony Park

Garrett Bayrd, M.D., demonstrates Group Health's laser technology with Lisa Edgett. A public demonstration will be held Apr. 9 at 6:30 p.m. in the third floor reception area of the Como Medical Center, 2500 Como Ave.

By Lynn Alcorn

Group Health was the first health clinic in Minnesota to buy a laser specifically for dermatological purposes in March, 1985. And Twin Cities residents will be able to watch the new technology in action April 9 as Group Health's four dermatologists will demonstrate how the laser can remove warts, tattoos, blood vessel birthmarks and other skin conditions.

"It's very much like what you see in 'Star Wars' " Dr. Carol Souter explained. The extremely hot laser beam can be set to either vaporize or cut out the problem area. Thus the laser is far superior to other methods such as cutting with a scalpel, freezing or burning, elaborated Dr. Geanna DuComb.

For example, if a man wants a tattoo of a ship removed from his chest, the old way would be to cut it out and probably do some skin grafting, leaving many scars. However, the laser is so precise that the doctor removes only the skin with the tattoo dye in it. By not damaging the "good" tissue surrounding the tattoo, less skin is damaged, there are fewer scars and healing is quicker.

Infection is less of a worry with a laser because it is so hot that it continually sterilizes itself during surgery, DuComb said. There is also a small vacuum attached to the laser to suck up dust in the air that could land on the new wound and cause infection, she said.

Another reason the laser is preferred over other methods is because as the laser cuts, the heat seals off tiny blood vessels making surgery less bloody. One case in which DuComb operated with the laser on a boy, she used only one sponge to absorb the blood. But with the old method she would have used 40 sponges, she said. Less blood, less mess, she said, means less time in surgery.

The best thing about the laser, Souter said, is that doctors can remove things that could not be treated by other methods in the past. Deep planter's warts can now be burned out with the laser. Other methods could never get to the core of the wart, she said.

There are virtually no characteristics such as age, race, pregnancy or disease that would disqualify someone from having laser surgery, Souter Range Planning Committee must receive approval for St. Paul's Library System (they've sent their proposal) and raise money.

"Lots of people use the library," said Kathy Heiderich, St. Anthony Park librarian. "Changes to make the library more functional and attractive are desirable." Quale agreed.

"We want to raise $20,000 to make the library more beneficial to the community.

"The Library Association is 50 years old and there's never been a major fund-raising drive," she continued. "Mainly, people will help us because they appreciate the library." The Library Association will begin its first major fund-raising drive this April with a goal of $20,000.

Library open house

The St. Anthony Park Branch Library Association will welcome the community to an afternoon of entertainment at the Branch Library, 2245 Como Avenue, in celebration of National Library Week on Sunday, April 13.

The program to be given from 2-3 p.m. in the Community Interest Room will include the Sir James Barrie play, "The 12 Pound Look," and some selections sung by the Community Chorus. A Puppet Show will be presented for the children at 3:30, 4, and 4:30 p.m.

The new library furniture will be dedicated in the main library room at 3 p.m. A tea will be served for adults from 3-5 p.m. upstairs, and children will be given punch and cookies in the Community Room.

The City Council-approved list of work to be done in 1986 to the library building may be seen in the main library room. Renovating the deteriorating physical structure of this fine Carnegie Library will cost over $500,000 of General Revenue Funds. The Library Association will also display plans that illustrate projects proposed by its Long Range Planning Committee to be paid for by money raised in our library community. The first major fund-raising drive ever carried on by this Library Association will begin in April. For further information please contact Janie Schomberg (Open House, 644-6090), Barbara Dyball (Tea, 646-0904), Robin Lindquist (Program, 645-9861), Philip Broussard (Long Range Planning proposals, 646-8887) and Kathy Heiderich (Librarian, 292-6635).

have a really tight advertising budget. Then the specialty shops that need to draw from outside the community. Then there are businesses that rely on the community to make it. Our interests are too diverse to come up with a good ad plan. It has been sort of hit and miss."

Basich is closing his specialty shop after ten years of business in St. Anthony Park. The decision to close, although related to a decline in business, had more to do with Basich's goals.

"My business has kind of plateaued. If we are to continue at all, we want to be in an area that can attract more people. We are destination-based. Since we're back off the street we've been unable to attract people into the courtyard (of Milton Square)," Basich reflected.

Tim Smith, co-owner of the Carter Avenue Frame Shop, relates to the problem of location. "Not many people will drive across town to shop here. I suppose the biggest disadvantage for me is the limited potential. I think this is something you have to live with. The best thing we could do is tap into the University faculty and students," he said.

For some businesses success doesn't depend on location, but it remains an important factor. "I didn't want to be in a mall. You just don't have the personal touch in a mall. I wanted a solid neighborhood with rents that aren't too high and easy to get to. You can say 'just off 280 and Como' and even people from Minneapolis can get here. You say 'Snelling Avenue' and they think in Wisconsin," Donna Smith, owner of the Learning Square, commented.

The Learning Square located in Milton Square about two years ago and has had a continual pattern of growth. Smith sees very clearly the need for a united effort through the Association.

"I think we need to work together or we're done. My store is a specialty store. It's not your staples. The retail is not even half of our business. We are very diversified. If I was strictly retail I wouldn't sleep at night—I really wouldn't," Smith said. "When you are involved in so many areas it evens out your highs and lows."

The Bibelot Shop doesn't sell many staples either. Yet the Bibelot Shop along with the Muffuletta have become landmarks in the business area.

The most significant change in St. Anthony Park's business community during the past 14 years has been the Bibelot Shop, according to McIntosh.

"The advent and success of the Bibelot has kicked off the recent surge of business activity. Their success has brought in traffic," McIntosh said.

As their receipts simply state the Bibelot Shop carries 'gifts and more'—more is very appropriate. Roxana Freese owns the Bibelot Shop and has operated her business in the Park for 20 years. During that course of time Freese has witnessed a tremendous expansion and redirection of her market—a market that directly affects the other businesses.

Smith is far less modest about the Bibelot's success than Freese, and said, "I hope we all know that if Roxie left this area we would all suffer."

This interdependence among the businesses creates a complex network of mutual concern and competition. The closing of H.B. Fuller's research and development facility had a domino effect on Bridgeman's business activity. Bridgeman's closing in turn had a positive effect on Dorsh's Deli and Muffuletta.

These businesses are in competition with each other for the spending power of the neighborhood. But to keep the business area viable the businesses need each other. And to keep the businesses in the neighborhood the neighbors need to shop at the local businesses.

Financial information you can use from ParkBank.

WHEN YOU... ARE THINKING BIG...

Now is the time to think about that home improvement that you have been putting off. ParkBank will study your plans and your family budget and come up with a solution that will work for you.

For example, you may want to borrow against the equity in your home. You can borrow up to 80% of the current market value of your home minus the mortgage balance. With this flexible, revolving Home Equity Credit Line, you don't have to apply for a loan every time you want to borrow. You simply write yourself a loan by tapping into the equity you have in your home. Interest is paid only on the funds used and a monthly interest payment is all that is required. A Home Equity Credit Line is the perfect way to finance that cruise, a new sailboat or a winter vacation home.

The Home Equity Credit Line is just one of a number of financial services that ParkBank has to offer. And because home improvement frequently increases the value of your property, think of your loan as an investment. So don't put your plans off for another day, come in and talk to us (or call us at 647-0131) about your plans. We'll help you think things through.

HOW SAFE ARE YOUR VALUABLES?

If you have jewelry, certificates, stocks or other valuables at home you may find replacement difficult with or without insurance in the event of a fire, burglary or other unpredictable loss.

ParkBank now has a limited number 3" X 5" X 25" boxes available for rent. You may make arrangements to lease a box between 9 a.m. and 3 p.m. in the Main Bank Building. The yearly rental fee for customers of ParkBank is $18.00. Your rental fee is conveniently deducted from your checking or savings account each year.

I am always learning more about people," he said. "In Mexico I never see people from Asia or Europe, and I know now that we are [basically] the same because I have talked with them."

Establishing a rapport with these students from diverse backgrounds was not something which came immediately to Zatarain, who had studied English for only five months before his arrival here last fall. "The first month was very difficult for me," he admitted. "I was maybe a little scared and people would talk to me and I wouldn't understand them." However he learned quickly, graduating from a class for students learning English as a second language into his regular 10th grade English class by the end of the first semester. His confidence both in his new linguistic ability and in himself was evident in Zatarain's gracious and hospitable manner.

Establishing a sense of self-confidence and learning English were two of the reasons Zatarain was interested in spending a year in America. His goals also included wanting "to learn about other customs and to be more independent, to make decisions on my own." In these respects he says he has not been disappointed by his experiences.

AFS host families sought

Your family can host a student from one of 63 AFS nations around the world.

Each year more than 3,000 students from abroad come to live with families in the United States. The AFS student usually arrives in early August in time to register for high school classes and get acquainted with the community before the school year begins.

Hosting a student gives your family a chance to explore another culture while in your own home. AFS families come from all walks of life and vary widely in their income levels and occupations. The most important criteria for AFS host families are curiosity about others, understanding of differences, and a desire to share and love.

For more information contact Dorothy Evans at 484-6044.

Murray Junior High

A brochure tucked inside the Community Education quarterly newspaper will inform all St. Paul households about the alternative programs in the St. Paul schools for next year. The back page consists of an application form. This must be completed and taken to the school the child is now attending by Fri., Apr. 11. If a child is attending a private school, the application must go to the school to which he/she is applying.

Murray Junior High will become a Science/Math Specialty Magnet in September. This means that added courses in science and math will be offered for students in the specialty program. These students will take two full years of math and science, in addition to the core curriculum of subjects now offered.

Students in the Murray attendance area from either St. Anthony Park or Chelsea Heights Elementary Schools will automatically come to Murray and be enrolled in the general curriculum. If a student in this attendance area so wishes, he/she may apply for the Science/Math Specialty program.

Plans are being made at Murray for the changes which will take place next year when this new curriculum is adopted. Enrollment may go up, and more staff may be added.

Parent Conferences at Murray will be held on Wed., Apr. 2, from 5:30-8:30 p.m. and on Thurs., Apr. 10, during the same hours. Fri., Apr. 11, is an Inservice Day for the faculty, with no classes for students.

Isabella trip stresses "it's OK to have diversity"

"We are more alike than different" was the theme for the multicultural/environmental retreat at the Environmental Learning Center near Isabella, Minnesota, for 50 students and 11 adults from Murray Magnet Junior High. A racially-mixed group from the school spent four days in intensive activities, related to nature and to human relations, from Mar. 3-6. Peggy Jones, a Murray parent who does Affirmative Action training, led group discussions on diversity, how we are different, and how we are the same.

Students evaluated their experience as follows:

Scott Kroona: "I believe that the most important thing that I learned was how to deal with people—their problems, their good times, whatever!"

Rebecca Russelle: "I met a lot of new people and made new friends. And I found out that every time you step on the snow and it crunches, you are breaking the points of the snow flakes."

Tim Miranda: "The staff people were very helpful and willing to teach anybody. They don't care if we're not like them; they want us to have the best of times. It was an excellent learning experience for everyone in junior high."

Michal Lavee: "Since I came to Isabella, I have learned much more about nature, people, friends, and growing up, thanks to the wonderful staff, equipment and support, even though the days I spent here were very hard and tiring."

Sarah Pahl: "I have gone to Isabella twice before, but no trip has ever been such an experience as this one. When we came up here, I didn't know I was going to change, to learn more about people, and the things we have in common."

Jenny Greene: "Isabella helped me communicate with other people easier. We learned many new things that they don't teach in regular classes."

Kari Nelsestuen: "Everything that we did rewarded us in some way or another, from environmental learning to self-confidence buildups which I witnessed from skiing to the ropes course to KP duty!"

Amber Swanson: "Isabella says PEOPLE—getting to know and appreciate different people with different backgrounds and lifestyles, learning with and about the most important thing in this world—people. Isabella is a thing to treasure."

Robert Williams: "I truthfully believe that this trip is the BEST experience anyone could ever have. When we got here, it was almost like being in another world. We learned to get along with each other, we learned survival techniques, but most of all, we learned that 'we are more alike than different'!"

Gina Robinson: "This was the first time I was away from home,

Community mourns death of Naomi Mergenthal

By Dave Merk

On February 25 St. Anthony Park resident Naomi Mergenthal, 13, was killed in a tragic automobile accident, which also critically injured her mother, Mary Mergenthal.

It can easily be said that Naomi was one of St. Anthony Park's most talented youths. She was a top dance student, and often performed in the liturgical dance ensembles at St. Anthony Park Lutheran Church. While at church, she was also actively involved in the junior high youth group, confirmation class, and choir.

Naomi was also an active 4-H member. She was voted president this year by the youth in her local chapter. While in 4-H, she won numerous "court of honor" awards for her presentations at 4-H style shows.

Not only was Naomi active in the community, but she was also an accomplished student. She recently participated in the University of Minnesota's "Talented Youth Math Program." "She was one of the most delightful students a teacher could ever dream of having," said a teacher at Murray

Magnet Junior High School, where Naomi attended.

On Sunday, March 1, a memorial service for Naomi was held at St. Anthony Park Lutheran Church. The impact of Naomi's death upon the community showed as the church swelled beyond capacity.

In the sermon, Pastor Rolf Hanson noted that Naomi's name means "delight." And by every account, a delight is exactly what Naomi Glain Kjersti Mergenthal was. Her family, and this community, will sorely miss her.

Donations to the Naomi Mergenthal Fund can be sent to Robin Lindquist, Park Bank, 2250 Como Avenue.

the center of a business community she entered 29 years ago. The fluctuating business activity in St. Anthony Park doesn't worry her.

"I've been through lots of dips on this corner and I'm still very positive about it," Milton said. "But the neighbors need to know that we need their patronage. My tenants keep track of their checks and not many of them come from this area. They are all so sick about [the closing of] Bridgeman's. Well why didn't they come down and patronize it?"

Obituary

Osgood Magnuson, long time St. Anthony Park resident, died suddenly March 1. Magnuson, 67, was working half-time as regional director for the Lutheran Council in Life and Missions. Among the many projects he worked with were: Campus Ministry, Leisure Studies, Soil Stewardship, the future of the church in rural America, and poverty in Appalachia.

Prior to joining the Lutheran Council, Magnuson worked for the Agricultural Extension Service at the University of Minnesota. While working for the Extension Service he was active in 4-H, serving as Assistant State Director.

Magnuson was active in many St. Anthony Park activities. He was president of the St. Anthony Park Lutheran Church, spent many years as its Sunday School Superintendent, and was Scoutmaster of Troop 80 for many years.

He had been involved with the Education Committees of the Park Association and served on the Board of Directors of the Park Co-op service station.

Magnuson was born and raised on a farm near Wheaton, MN. He graduated from the University of Minnesota in 1947 and received a Masters Degree in Public Administration from the "U" in 1955.

Survivors include his wife, Carolyn, two sons, John and Roy, a daughter, Alice, a stepson, Mark Pederson, a stepdaughter, Deborah Pederson, two grandchildren and four brothers.

standing students in crowded settings due to the noise and because, in her words, "I learned Oxford English in school, I didn't learn all the slang." Traveling about St. Paul has been a frustrating experience for Mogstad due to the city's relatively poor public transportation system as compared to Trondheim's. "I haven't been able to be as independent as in Norway," she reflected.

While both students see many similarities between teenagers in their own countries and in the United States, they have noted significant differences as well. Zatarain believes that Mexican youth are faced with more problems than American young people. The number of parentless teenagers in Mexico is high and "there is much more poverty," he said. He also explained that many students attain only a fourth or fifth grade education to enter a world with few opportunities for employment.

Mogstad observed that American teenagers are more concerned with earning money to pay for college and automobiles. Norwegian students, on the other hand, "don't have to pay for college, only for the books," she said. "And here almost every student has a car he has to pay for, whereas in Norway we can't drive until we're 18 and public transportation is better so we don't need the cars much."

Mogstad and Zatarain both said they are enjoying the opportunity to be away from their own schools for a year, partly because American schools offer far more choices for students in selecting courses and activities than do their own. Mogstad has been involved with tennis, cross country ski racing, softball, drama and band at Como, while Zatarain has participated in soccer, swimming and track at Central. In his first encounter with snow, Zatarain also has enjoyed cross country and downhill skiing with his hosts, Greg and Nancy Haley and their children.

When asked what he misses most about being away from home, Zatarain quickly answered, "the food," to which he added, "my friends and family, too." Then, in reconsidering, he reversed priorities and

.....Murray Junior High School's boys' basketball team, coached by William Acree, had an outstanding season—finishing with a 9-0 record. The Pilots' record earned them the St. Paul City Conference title. Park resident, Josh Larson, was a starting forward for coach Acree's team. Acree's other starters were Clem Tucker (guard), Stephen Kennedy (guard), Kenny Carter (forward), and Jason Martinez (center). "All the guys really played well," Acree said. "They all scored, and they all played good defense. What was most impressive, though, was that they weren't only big and strong, but they were intelligent students. That's what helped make us an excellent basketball team."

.....First-year coach Elizabeth Parr helped the Murray girls' gymnastics team to a respectable 3-5 record in the St. Paul City Conference. Parr termed the season as a building year, citing that the team is still young. Some of Parr's stand-outs were Park resident Elena Guevera, a 7th grader, who was "very good on the balance beam." Other bright spots were Chandra Johnson on the uneven parallel bars, and Mara Hill on the floor exercise. The team will participate in the city meet on Tues., Mar. 18. "I'd hope to finish in the top half," Parr said.

.....Coach Tom Johnson's Como Area B-Pee Wees had a great season—finishing with an 8-3-1 record. The Pee Wees finished 2nd in the St. Paul District 1 league. On Feb. 23rd the Pee Wees won the district championship, and went on from there to finish 4th in the South Regions, played in St. Louis Park.

Think winter is on the way out? Don't count on it. Viola Peterson was caught here entertaining the same thoughts. She's been waiting ever since 1923 for the ice to melt.

Sports from 16

Tom Laird, Dave Berlund, Mike Tressel, and Jacob Doer were all on the Pee Wee squad. "I had a pretty solid team all the way around," Johnson said.

.....Como Area A Bantams won the District 1 and the Regional Hockey Championships. They represented Como Area in the State Championship. Erik Sjo-wall and Jon Challey skated with the team this season.

Students from 16

admitted that he probably misses his family most.

"I miss my friends and my cat and my family a little bit, but not as much as I should, probably," reflected Mogstad, who is being hosted by the Sherm Eagles-Sue Conner family. "And I miss the mountains and fjords too," she added.

Laser from 7

said. Each case, however, is evaluated to determine if laser surgery or a different method would be best to treat the problem. If a lesion is very large or close to the eyes it could warrant not using the laser, she said. Usually the laser can eliminate the skin problem in one visit, but again it all depends on the size, depth and nature of the problem, she said.

The laser has increased success rates in the dermatology department, the doctors said. Warts had a 50-50 chance of being completely removed with old methods. With the laser, success rates for warts have increased 10 to 20 percent. Laser treatments are faster, less painful and heal faster than old methods of treatment nearly 100 percent of the time, DuComb said.

At the demonstration the doctors will use the laser on objects such as apples and oranges to show how the procedure is done. The program is the first in a series that will highlight certain services that Group Health provides. It is offered to show non-members services they can now get by paying for each office visit and treatment they receive, instead of paying the regular membership fees which allow the person to go to any department for treatment without paying for each visit, Walt Cooney, clinic manager, said. The demonstration will be held in the hope that people will become Group Health members when deciding on a health plan, he said.

The laser demonstration will be held at 6:30 p.m. in the third floor reception area of the Como clinic. The free program will also highlight other dermatology services and discuss topics such as skin cancer and aging. Everyone is welcome.

Talk to the little bank when you're thinking bigger.

Thinking about a new family room? Extra bath? Finishing the attic or basement? Then talk to the people at ParkBank, the little bank with big ideas on home improvement. We'll study your plans and family budget, discuss options, and come up with the solution that's right for you.

For example you might be able to borrow against your equity, providing you with a cash reserve you can tap whenever you need it, paying interest only on the funds used. In the meantime you don't have to apply for a loan every time you want to borrow.

So don't put your plans off another day. Come in and talk to us about them.

We'll help you think things through.
