Maureen Ruddy and two other St. Anthony Park youth are making plans for their 40-day canoeing expeditions to the Canadian Arctic.

By John G. Shepard

Thundering whitewater rapids, rolling expanses of tundra and the satisfaction of traveling safely and efficiently through some of the most remote wilderness on earth are a few of the things which three St. Anthony Park youth are looking forward to this summer. Maureen Ruddy, Cindy Pierce and Dave Scamp, all graduating seniors at Central High School, will be members of lengthy canoeing expeditions across the Canadian Arctic. The trips will be sponsored and led by St. Paul YMCA Camp Widjiwagan, and represent to each participant the culmination of years of canoeing experience acquired through the camp's programs.

Scamp, with his counselor and four male companions, and Pierce and Ruddy's all female group plan to set out in early July near the town of Yellowknife in Canada's Northwest Territories. The two groups will follow separate routes for the first several weeks of rigorous upstream paddling to the headwaters of the Coppermine River. Then both parties, who plan to avoid contact with each other, will follow the Copper-mine's tumbling whitewater course northward across the Arctic Circle to its mouth at the Arctic Ocean. Both groups will be completely self-reliant for the duration of the trip, requiring each to carry as many as nine food packs weighing upwards of 100 pounds apiece in their three canoes.

Among the difficulties Scamp expects to face on this adventure is the challenge of living harmoniously with his fellow campers—who may well be the only people encountered for the entire trip. "I'm looking forward to being able to be with my group for 45 days and to make it work out," he said.

Pierce and Ruddy have similar goals. "Every night on trail we're going to have a sharing time where we can say what we liked about the day and what we can do better the next day and express things that bother us," explained Pierce. "If you're paddling with a person all day and something's really bothering you, you have to get those things out because if they keep building, after 42 days you can go insane," she added.

"I think that the whitewater is the biggest physical challenge we're going to face," speculated Ruddy. She described an experience that occurred on her trip last year which she is determined not to repeat. Her canoe was upset in a rapid and, as she recalls, "we lost our cook kit, my camera and my rain gear—the kind of things that you really need, especially the rain gear."

Ruddy explained that in addition to the years of canoeing experience they have gained through other Widjiwagan trips in the Boundary Waters Canoe Area and in Ontario, both groups of campers will receive additional training in whitewater skills this spring to prepare them for the Coppermine's numerous rapids.

Beyond these anticipated challenges, all three adventurers have particular interests they are hoping to pursue in the course of their expeditions. "I'm looking forward to bringing my camera," said Scamp. "It's going to be a great place to be out in the field, doing photography." Both groups may have opportunities to see barrenland caribou, musk oxen,

Festival seeks wide participation

By Barbara Thoemke

Strolling musicians, ethnic dancers, refreshments, animals from Como Zoo and an attic sale are just a few of the attractions which will line Como Avenue at the 13th annual St. Anthony Park Festival on June 7. Other attractions include sidewalk sales, a pancake breakfast at the United Methodist Church, a showmobile and an art show and sale.

The purpose of the Festival is twofold, according to Festival chairperson Robin Lindquist of the Park Bank. The Festival is a way for St. Anthony Park businesses to thank the community for their patronage. "You can't have a community with just residents. It is the residents and the businesses which make up this unique community," Lindquist pointed out. The Festival also provides a good opportunity for people from outside the St. Anthony Park area to learn about businesses and in turn patronize them throughout the year. Organizers hope to attract more people from outside the area this year than in the past.

"I worked doubly hard to make this year's Festival attractive to outsiders. The business community needs outsiders in order to grow," Lindquist said.

In 1974, the Festival originated when the St. Anthony Park Drive-In Bank celebrated its opening by giving away free ice cream. The Festival, sponsored by the St. Anthony Park Merchants and Professionals Association, later blossomed as more attractions were added each year.

The Festival is held in conjunction with the Arts and Crafts Fair which will be held on the St. Anthony Park lawn for the 17th year. Over ninety artists will sell a variety of creations including water colors, oils and woodcarvings. Ten percent of each sale will go to the library for repairs.

Lindquist said of the Art Fair and the Festival that, "one complements the other—they provide art and we provide entertainment."

Down the block in Milton Square will be an attic sale. Residents are invited to clean out their attics and garages and bring things to sell. "They can

Roots: History grounded in our community trees

By Alice Duggan

Trees. They bloom, they leaf out, they color the world. They fill our sky and wake us up to the landscape we're part of. As the earth warms, the trees break their winter quiet and burst into the sky. They seem to escape their property boundaries too, creating their own patterns and connections that have nothing to do with ownership. Now is the time to wander, to enjoy and explore all the green corners of the neighborhood, all the new growth. Our neighbors will forgive us for staring at their trees and bushes. They'll know we're celebrating spring. And while we wander and enjoy, we might be scheming too, about planting one of those trees ourselves.

There's the red bud, for instance. Now almost fifty years old, it's at home in the front yard of 2143 Commonwealth. It may be blooming just as the May Bugle goes to press. It blooms without leaves, and the blossoms seem to float like a cloud of magenta pink. Margaret Hummel Cohn, who

Thanks, Block Workers

Special thanks from the community are due the area coordinators and blockworkers who helped publicize the District Council election which resulted in a significant increase in participation for the April 8 elections. Coordinators and blockworkers are recruited and organized by the St. Anthony Park Association as one of its community services. Margot Monson is second vice-president of the Association in charge of the blockworker organization. Kathy Clark, District 12 Council member, coordinated the distribution of election flyers in South St. Anthony.

Nursing Course offered

"Aging Changes: A Nursing Challenge" is being offered by the St. Anthony Park Block Nurse program for nurses wanting to increase their understanding and skill in dealing with elderly clients. The course will be held in two sessions from 8 a.m. to noon on May 3 and 10 in the community room of the St. Anthony Park Library, 2245 Como Ave.

The course, taught by Gwen Ladner, is designed to increase understanding of normal aging and how related changes need to be recognized in health promotion, disease prevention, management of disabilities and chronic conditions, and in services. Ladner, a registered nurse, was a primary nurse at St. Mary's Rehabilitation Center for four years and is now the gerontology consultant for the Continuing Care Department of Group Health.

Cost is $20 for eight contact hours. Registration form with a check made out to the St. Anthony Park Block Nurse Program should be returned by May 1.

Brass Revue to perform in Music in the Park

With classic America as its theme, the American Brass Revue will present a program of classic popular American music on the next Music in the Park concert, May 11, 7 p.m. at St. Anthony Park United Church of Christ, 2129 Commonwealth Avenue. The Revue features David Baldwin and Michael Brand, cornets, Thomas Gilkey, horn, Steven Lund, horn and trombone, Lee Dummer, euphonium, and Paul Maybery on tuba. Using modern reproductions of period instruments to retain the mellow sounds of the 19th Century brass band, the Revue will perform repertoire spanning two centuries.

According to Steven Lund, manager of and trombonist with the Revue, America's bicentennial celebration in 1976 sparked renewed interest in American music. "Being 200 years old made us recognize America's unique musical heritage and resources have become available to help us understand American performance traditions," he explained. The ensemble will also play several hymns in recognition of St. Anthony Park United Church of Christ's centennial celebration.

Tickets for the concert, sponsored by the St. Anthony Park Arts Forum and partially funded by the Northwest Area Foundation and the Metropolitan Regional Arts Council, are available at the Bibelot Shop and Micawber's Bookstore or at the door on the evening of the concert.

Holocaust remembered at seminary

A Christian Holocaust Remembrance Service will be held at Luther Northwestern Seminary in St. Paul on Sunday, May 4, at 7 p.m.

This service will remember the victims of Nazi genocide who were exterminated in the concentration and death camps of Europe and allow one to find in that memory the specter of others who face death today because of racial and political prejudice and injustice. Readings from Holocaust literature and prayer will provide a dialogue on the memory and presence of Holocaust.

The service is designed to enable Christians to stand with their Jewish sisters and brothers to remember the monstrous evil of Hitler's policies against the Jews and to affirm the hope that the world will not again remain silent before the cries of those who suffer similar evil today. In that memory and hope is the prayer that the genocide of Nazi Europe will never again be the experience of any people.

Following the service there will be an opportunity to discuss the implications of Holocaust remembrance with a Holocaust survivor and others representing Soviet Jewry and the people suffering in Central America and South Africa today.

The service will be held in the chapel in the Campus Center at Hendon and Fulham Streets. The public is invited.

KTCA-TV Production wins Ohio State award

KTCA-TV, Twin Cities Public Television, is the recipient of a national award in the prestigious 50th annual Ohio State Awards competition. The KTCA television drama Scheherazade has been selected as a winner in the Performing Arts and Humanities category in this year's competition.

Scheherazade was selected by KTCA as the first in a series of original made-for-television dramas featuring some of the finest actors and writers in the Minnesota region, and was produced by KTCA's Arts and Humanities Specials unit, headed by producer Catherine Allan. Research and development funding for the five-year series of dramatic specials is made possible by a grant from the Jerome Foundation.

This one-hour television drama is an honest and thought-provoking treatment of the crime of rape and its aftermath, and tells the electrifying story of a woman trapped in her apartment by a rapist. Like the legendary Scheherazade in the Tales of the Arabian Nights, this woman must use her wits to stall her attacker and save her life.

Scheherazade was written by Marisha Chamberlin and produced for television by Catherine Allan. Coordinating Producer was Mary Anne Wallner. Directors were Sean Dowse and Michael Lorentz. Story Editor was Miranda Barry, Director of Program Development for the PBS drama series, American Playhouse. Executive Producer was Gerald Richman.

Neighbors

As local students prepare for the end of their academic year, the Bugle has received word of the following area student who were named to dean's lists at their colleges for the fall or winter semesters. May Slagle, Falcon Heights, at Johns Hopkins University; James Genia, St. Anthony Park, Augsburg College and Michael Gross, South St. Anthony Park, College of St. Thomas.

Ralph Wayne 2300 Carter Ave. was recently honored with the Long Time Meritorious Service Award by the Minnesota Holstein Association. Ralph and Verna Wayne have lived in St. Anthony Park for more than 40 years.

Wayne received the award in consideration of his many contributions to the Holstein industry in Minnesota and nationwide. Wayne was a dairy extension specialist at the University of Minnesota 27 years, retiring in 1972. Known as "Mr. Dairyman" by Minnesota farmers, Wayne had a major part in more than 6500 public meetings and judged some 400 dairy, general livestock and poultry shows.

Since 1936, Wayne has been active in dairy farm operations. He owned and operated a 327-acre dairy farm near Ellendale, Minnesota where he had a herd of more than 100 registered Holsteins. Wayne served on the board of directors of the Minnesota Holstein Association for 10 years and was superintendent of the national dairy show in Iowa for 9 years.

During Wayne's professional career, he was elected to life membership in the American Dairy Science Association and the Royal Agricultural Society of Denmark. He was elected to the Minnesota Livestock Hall of Fame, given the Jacob's award for significant contributions to the livestock industry and the Man of the Year Award in 1971 for extra ordinary service to community and government by the Minnesota Holstein Association. The U.S. Department of Agriculture presented him the Superior Service Award in 1958 and Special Service Award in 1966.

Anne Green, St. Anthony Park, was recently awarded the Sebago Pin by St. Paul Council of Camp Fire in recognition of her outstanding service to Camp Fire in the field of camping and outdoor programming. Green has been the leader of two Park groups and has been involved with Camp Fire for many years.

The continuum of memory

The Vietnam War Memorial, in Washington, D.C., is more an environment than a monument. As you walk into the ebony-black cavity a stillness strikes you. The more than 58,000 names become legible, and you are struck again. The reality of the loss is overwhelming.

Memorial Day is a time set aside for remembering losses, a holiday unadulterated by commercialism, but changed by the efficiency of time management. As an extra day tacked onto a weekend, Memorial Day has lost its significance.

Remembering is a significant human need. We all need to remember—and want to be remembered.

Pain may be part of the package. It accompanies many things worth remembering. Consider it tuition, because in remembering we learn. We learn about the past, and we learn about ourselves.

Reluctantly, my grandfather told stories about the war. He didn't bother with keeping track by number—one was enough. His reticence was puzzling. Perhaps the half-century-old memories remained untarnished, too clearly painful.

These stories brought the events of his past into the present and made the war become real again.

A recent poll of Korean and Vietnam War veterans asked why the veterans didn't share their war-time experiences. The majority of these veterans didn't share their war-time experiences. The majority of these veterans responding to this question stated that no one had cared to ask.

Celebrate Memorial Day this year by caring to ask questions. There are 58,000 easily.

Life at home during World War I

By Robert A. Manke

Editor's note: This remembrance of St. Anthony Park during World War I is by Robert A. Manke. Manke moved to St. Anthony Park with his family in 1910 and resided here until 1952. Manke wrote an article about St. Anthony Park that appeared in the March 1986 Bugle.

For perhaps the first time ever, St. Anthony Park was disturbed; first by the shadow in 1914, and then the reality of World War I. That event made even bigger waves than the paving of Como Ave.

A rather large contingent of the infantry, wearing red braid around their campaign hats, was billeted all over the Farm Campus. A troop of cavalry, with yellow braid, was stationed at the race horse barns in the Fair Grounds. Of course, these areas instantly became off-limits for the Park's young ladies.

The infantry "drilled" to its band every afternoon on the green in front of the Main Building, frequently in the charge of Lt. Lord. He was handsome as all get out in his leather puttees, Sam Brown belt and the swagger stick which they furnished these guys to keep their hands busy. You could almost hear the mothers' hearts skip a beat as the lieutenant would glance along the line of spectators seeking out the young, beautiful women.

Once a week, the local populace would gather in the Auditorium of "the Main," and for a dime would be treated to a propaganda horror film such as "Hearts of The World," or "Hearts of Humanity." This was followed by group singing of such war-time ballads as: "Pack Up Your Troubles In Your Old Kit Bag," "It's A Long Way To Tipperary," "Til The Boys Come Home," "Til We Meet Again," and "Where Do We Go From Here?"—not to mention

Memories

Dear Editor:

I want to thank you for the article "A stroll down memory lane" by Robert Manke. I grew up hearing all of the homes mentioned in that story. A few of those names would recognize mine. My grandfather was Fred S. Berry. Florence and Len Blodgett were my aunt and uncle. So was Freddy [Blodgett].

The Robert Manke who wrote the article had me baby-sit for his children all the time I was at Murray High School. He also directed the choir at St. Matthews (Episcopal) Church on Carter Ave.

The "Brill House" was home to my husband's family for over thirty years. Bob and I lived there briefly in the late forties. We left the Park in the fifties—but we are still "Parkites." We frequently take our own stroll down memory lane.

Street lights

Editor's note: This letter was sent to the Bugle. It is in response to a letter, printed in the April 1986 issue of the Bugle, sent by Stuart S. Peterson.

Dear Mr. Peterson:
Thanks for your letter of March 6, 1986. Even though I was only one of 13 people the letter was either directed to or carbon copied to, I was glad to help you out of this bureaucratic mess.

As I explained to you on the phone March 21, the Public Works Department has agreed to install additional street lighting on city boulevards by the school. Mike Klassen, Public Works specialist on lighting, can be reached at 292-6293. He told me the installation could take a couple of months because of soil and grade problems. In addition, electrical hook-up problems have to be worked out. His idea was to put in temporary lights on wooden poles as soon as possible to address safety and security concerns.

Since I talked to you, I received the District 12's March 17 letter asking for old fashioned green lanterns. As you know, Saint Paul is now involved in major sewer separation and street repaving projects throughout the city. Cost of lights in these project areas are being assessed to the property owners.

It seems only equitable that green ornamental lights at Langford should follow the assessment policy. Perhaps we could wait for ornamental lights until the question of payment is worked out. In the meantime, boulevard lights on wooden poles could go in this year. What do you think?

As you and I discussed, any lights on the school property are the School District's responsibility. In addition, money earmarked for landscaping in the budget of the Langford Park renovation project could be studied to see if there are available funds for more park lighting.

If you have any additional questions or concerns, please call me at 298-5378. Thank you again for bringing this problem to my attention and for your commitment to neighborhood safety.

Home archaeology opportunity

Journalism at times can be a bit disconcerting. Recently the boxes that define the navigable floor space of the Bugle office were unearthed, literally. Within these boxes lay the not-so-official archives of the Bugle. Much to my amazement the archives were intact but it was difficult to see nearly 12 years of work reduced within two cardboard boxes. The Bugle does need a few issues to serve as second copies. If you have any of the following issues the Bugle would appreciate having them: the Preview Edition (this is the very first issue that served as an announcement), August 1974, January 1975, February 1975, and June of 1985. Send them to the Bugle 2380 Hampden Ave., St. Paul, MN 55114.

Little Ooga does a pirouette

If you stop and think about it, this human body of ours is a pretty primitive machine. In fact, it hasn't changed all that much since we first crawled out of the mire. (Or, if you prefer, it hasn't changed one bit since the Garden of Eden, if those 16th century engravings of Adam and Eve are to be believed.)

The human body is designed primarily for survival. We still store energy in fat cells, in case of a bad harvest or a long winter. (My own body is particularly good at that skill.) We are still covered with hair which stands on end when we are scared. In more overtly hairy creatures, like cats and dogs, that mechanism makes the animal look larger, in hopes of scaring away predators. In humans, we call the condition "goose bumps." It apparently makes us look like a goose, and saves us from predators by giving them a debilitating case of the giggles.

We still have an appendix. The appendix was a very useful organ in the digestive system, when our diet was primarily roots and berries. Now our diet is primarily McNuggets, so the appendix just hangs there, looking for a chance to cause trouble. The only purpose it now serves is the raising of funds for the medical profession.

There are some who say that our bodies aren't even designed to walk erect. They say that when we arose from all fours we began to have all kinds of back problems. Well, maybe they're right. I know that I have a sore back once in a while, don't you? Yet, if you have ever been down on all fours on the living room carpet with a couple of kids climbing on you (like our cousin, the opossum), you know that that doesn't feel so great either.

No, these bodies of ours haven't changed much since Mr. and Mrs. Caveman and their daughter, little Ooga, first scratched about for survival during the stone age. The opposable thumb, which we now use for holding a racquet, is pretty much the same as the thumb Mr. Caveman used to pick up a club. The eyebrows which once kept the sweat out of Mrs. Caveman's eyes as she did her primitive chores in the hot sun, are structurally the same as the eyebrows we use when we try to balance our check-books. And the joints and muscles which helped little Ooga to squat down to collect berries in the thicket near the cave are pretty similar to the ones we torture on the Nautilus equipment at the health club.

All of these revelations came to me as I watched my daughter's ballet class last Saturday. Here was a group of little girls trying desperately hard to do things that the human body simply is not designed to do. They pointed their toes. They held their backs straight, stretched their necks, and tied their legs into knots. They practiced all kinds of positions of the body which had nothing at all to do with survival. They were striving for beauty.

Illustration by Warren Hanson

But to the Caveman family, beauty meant nothing, and survival meant everything. Can you imagine Mr. Caveman en pointe, running tippy-toe into the woods with his club to konk a saber-tooth tiger for dinner? His only hope would have been that the beast would die laughing.

Or how about the arabesque? Just imagine Mrs. Caveman leaning forward at the waist, standing on one leg, with the other leg straight out behind her and her arms stretching in opposite directions, calling the family to the cave for supper.

Or try this. Point your left foot straight out to the left. Now, right in front of it, put your right foot down and point it straight to the right. Now, with your back and head erect, squat down without moving your feet. One knee will go east and one will go west and the whole arrangement will hurt like crazy and you probably won't be able to keep your balance for more than three seconds. If little Ooga had tried collecting berries that way, the Caveman family would have starved and we wouldn't be here today.

So why do they do it? Why do these little girls, looking so cute in their leotards and legwarmers, try to make their bodies do things that have nothing to do with survival?

Here's my theory: I think that, while the body is stuck in the stone age, the brain has decided that there must be something better. It's like the software is way out ahead of the hardware. At some point in human development, the brain got bored with mere survival and decided it needed a hobby.

So one day Mr. Caveman picks up his club, like he does every day. But the brain says, "Hey, why don't you pick up another one in the other hand, and let's invent rhythm on that hollow log?"

Or Mrs. Caveman pulls a handful of clay out of the river bottom as she's doing the laundry, and the brain says, "You know, if you use your opposable thumbs, you might be able to make that clay look like little Ooga."

Little Ooga herself, you'll remember, is off somewhere collecting berries and putting them in a hollow gourd. She is so happy when her gourd is finally full, she rises up en pointe, runs tippy-toe up to the top of the hill, invents the pirouette right there on the spot, and, choosing syllables at random from her rapidly developing brain, starts to sing, "The hills are alive with the sound of music."

I felt genuine pride last Saturday, watching my little girl as her brain pushed her body to the limit. When she was done, she ran gracefully toward me, and I pondered the revelation that she could spend her life striving for beauty, not thinking about survival. And as I picked her up in my arms she said, "I'm, hungry."

WWI from 4

"K-K-K-Katy."

There was an especially touching scene in one film, "Hearts Of Humanity," in which poor old (French) Grandpa was blown quite in half by a shell from a German Howitzer aimed dead at him from 25 miles away. Some aim!

Thus aroused, the Park folks went looking for revenge, and found it at Holbrook household on Buford—two doors down from Cleveland. Suspecting these good people (Mr. Holbrook sang in St. Matthew's choir) of the offense of being "Pro-German," their friends and neighbors splashed their house with yellow paint on all four sides!

When folks gathered on the front walk—after church, for example—the ladies were frequently in tears as war news and casualty lists were discussed. And it was not too hard to know the emotions of Mrs. Kennedy (Keston and Commonwealth) as she put up the seventh star—for Dave, the youngest of her seven sons—on the Service Flag in her bay window.

In the absence of radio and television, almost everyone had a wall-mounted map of the Western Front, marked with various armies and divisions.

In our homes, the primary activity in support of the war was knitting: sweaters, blanket squares, and helmet liners—all of the same monotonous, olive-drab yarn. I put in quite a few sessions in the Red Cross bandage operation in the library basement "picking oakum." This was the very same loose rope of jute or hemp impregnated with creosote that a plumber packs into the joints of soil pipe before soldering. Our sticky and smelly job was to "pick" this rope into fluff which the ladies inserted into the compresses, ultimately to be inserted into wounds to retard the loss of blood.

We kids were in no way immune to the fever of war. An older boy (by about two years) who lived down on Priscilla, organized "The Yellow Dogs" among sixth graders. The name was intended to signify our goal of rooting out persons suspected of being "slackers" vis-a-vis an all-out war effort. We were to be furnished with guns and uniforms, and would have had to drill several times a week. The initiation fee was 10¢, but for some reason or other, the movement never got off the ground.

To the humiliation of the boys in our family, not one male relative was eligible to serve—too young, or too old—a blessing we didn't recognize at the time.

So, we ate what Mom offered as bread made of rice flour, and walked to the store for our pound of sugar every week, and in numerous other ways joined Herbert Hoover's grand Conservation Drive and managed to survive.

A happy occasion was the return of the Kennedy boys who lived across the street from us. Five of the seven met in New York and came home together. They arrived in a "jump-seat" taxi followed by a yellow truck with all their baggage. They lined up by rank on the steps up to the porch while Dave—youngest, and lowest in rank—carried all of the trunks and bags into the house. What a day for that family!

By War's end I was a member of the Boy Scout Drum, Fife, and Bugle Corps. I was ordered out to walk myself to death in the Armistice Day Parade. That accomplished, I took a street car to Minneapolis to see what was doing over there. Being in full uniform, I had the good fortune of being mistaken for a returned veteran (from the Midget Corps?) by a drunk who gave me a ticket to the Palace Theater where I saw my very first leg show!!

The War was over! On with the good life!

Tooting our horn: Bugle wins awards

By Mary Mergenthal

At the 1986 annual conference and award luncheon of the Neighborhood Press Association (NPA) at Hamline University on April 19, the Park Bugle and its staff members were high among newspapers noted for quality work.

The Park Bugle won first place for best overall design on a continuing basis and third place for editorial coverage on a continuing basis. These awards certainly serve to note the continuing effort of the paper to meet both the needs and interests of the communities it serves and to maintain high media standards at the same time.

The paper and staff members also won several specific awards. Joel Schurke placed third for his investigative story on Victory House in the December 1985 issue. Warren Hanson placed first in the opinion/editorial division for his article, "Missing you," in the September 1985 issue. Hanson also won first place in the best illustration division with his drawing in the November 1985 article, "A guide to modern canning." Terry Lee Johnson placed second in the feature photo division for her photo of Claire Sweet which ran in the December 1985 issue. In addition, the paper won second and third places in advertising design—second for the ad of St. Anthony Park merchants, "Discover the magic," which was designed by St. Anthony Park resident Warren Hanson, and third for an ad for University Dance Center designed by bfa Design.

In the overall awards the Bugle also placed second in the graphic unit division for the August 1985 photo special on neighborhood houses.

The St. Anthony Park Congregational Chapel pictured above in 1887 was originally located at the intersection of Raymond and Wheeler Avenues.

Congregational church centennial

In 1884 Charles Pratt, an original developer of St. Anthony Park, determined that his new community would be "a place where people would have a real love and zeal for the Sabbath and the worship of God." From the worship services that subsequently began at the old Baker School, the St. Anthony Park Congregational Church was founded by thirteen charter members in 1886. The church, the oldest institution in the neighborhood, originally located at Raymond and Wheeler, between the two railway lines, has been at its present location at Commonwealth and Chelmsford since 1914.

This month this congregation now the St. Anthony Park United Church of Christ, celebrates its centennial and invites its friends and neighbors to share in that celebration.

That invitation extends to all Centennial events, particularly the Centennial Banquet Friday evening, May 16 (reservations required, please call the church office - 646-7173) and on Sunday, May 18, the Centennial Festival Service at 10 a.m. and the Centennial Reception and Musicales beginning at 1:30 p.m.

Coops address problems

By Dave Merk

Vietnam, civil rights, and ecological awareness; hippies in patched jeans, and demonstrations on the streets ....

These circumstances accompanied the birth of the co-op movement in the United States, co-ops like St. Anthony Park Foods. Along with these events came a new food awareness that blossomed into alternative food stores across the country.

Today, co-ops have begun to lose some of their appeal. Life styles and attitudes have changed. Co-op memberships have declined, and sales have dwindled. The 40-year-old Consumer's Cooperative in Berkeley, California has closed 9 of its 13 food stores. Locally, 12 food co-ops have closed in recent years.

St. Anthony Park Foods (SAP), which started in 1971, and its sister store SAP Too, have had to come face to face with this trend in recent months. In the last four years SAP's sales have dropped almost $300,000. Accompanying the sales drop, SAP's membership—which is split between SAP and SAP Too—has decreased by almost half. The result was a proposal by the co-op board, at its annual meeting in November, for SAP to close, and its resources shifted to the more prosperous SAP Too.

"We're a non-profit organization," said Carolyn Bass, the board chair and an active member for 10 years. "We're not designed to make a profit, but we're not designed to lose thousands [of dollars], either."

"We're not designed to make a profit, but we're not designed to lose thousands of dollars, either."

One popular theory about the loss of interest in co-ops is that their uniqueness has vanished. With the arrival of large grocery chains, and their increasing inventory of health foods, co-ops have lost their specialty.

Competing with chain stores in the area of every-day products has also been difficult, said Kathy Vaughan, a SAP Too coordinator and an eight-year member. "Our food products aren't that unique anymore," she said, "but we can offer people a more decent shopping experience. It's a more comfortable social situation at a co-op."

Jan Walsh, a sales representative for DANCe—a co-op distribution warehouse in St. Paul—agrees that co-ops offer a social climate that the larger stores cannot.

"The co-ops appeal to a certain kind of person who is looking for something a little different," Walsh said, "something a little more personal."

Another theory, suggested by a SAP member, for why co-ops are having rough times suggests that the social movement which helped them start has lost its intensity. People have lost some of their ecological awareness—their concern for what they are buying.

Randy Stoecker, a sociology graduate student at the University of Minnesota who has studied co-op trends, sees some merit to this theory.

"One possibility," Stoecker said, "is that people have become less attentive how they buy things. Also, since most of these folks [who started co-ops] were baby boomers, and are now having kids, they don't have the time to devote [to operating the co-op]."

Keeping the volunteer posts filled at SAP and SAP Too hasn't been easy, said Bass, even though the co-op has a membership of about 550. Bass said that only 70 percent (approximately 400 people) are considered "working members." And when those people work during the day and have other obligations, that's not a big pool to work from, she said.

Despite the problems SAP and SAP Too have been experiencing, members voted 18 to 17 at a membership meeting in December to rescind the proposed closing of SAP. Since then a crisis management team has been formed to help put SAP back on its feet.

One of the first steps taken was to separate the management operations at both stores from each other. This move, said Bass, will enable both stores to operate independently of the other in such areas as food ordering, thus enabling management decisions to be made more quickly and efficiently.

In other areas, SAP has cut the number of its paid employees, according to Lucy Cutler, currently a SAP coordinator and a member since the early 1970s. Most cashiers are

Our Wildlife Neighbors

May's program promises to be a special one, Jim Cooper will be talking and showing slides on "The Park's Newest Wildlife Neighbor," the Canadian Goose. Jim is associate professor in the Fisheries and Wildlife department at the University of Minnesota and also a scoutmaster. He has been involved in banding the birds and studying their habits. The birds pair bond and have strong family bonds. When a flock of birds return the male always returns with his female. If the reaseachers do not find her they know that either she is with the flock and has lost her band or that she has died. In 1973 the neighborhood had one pair of geese with young. At present the larger area including Roseville and Arden Heights now is a stop-over point for about 1,600 geese. Come join Jim in his fascinating program in the year of a life of the Canadian Goose. He will answer questions after the program. See you there! Would I lead you on a wild goose chase?

Election of Officers

The nominating committee recommends the following people for election at the May membership meeting:

President: Joan Styve

Styve has served as a neighborhood representative on a task force to plan the remodeling of the Langford Park Recreation Center. 1st Vice President: Arnold Lindquist

Lindquist is a graduate of St. Olaf, past president of Mid America Mutual Life Insurance Co. and former general manager of Group Health Plan. He serves on the board of directors of Bethesda Lutheran Hospital and is president of St. Paul Council of Churches Foundation.

2nd Vice President: Suzanne Brust

Brust is a diagnostician who assesses preschool children in the Anoka Hennepin school district. Because of an interest in ecological issues, she helped organize a small recycling project with neighbors.

Secretary: Deborah Von Riedel

Von Riedel is a potter with a studio arts degree from the U. of M. She has three young children and as the oldest enters school, she looks forward to more active participation in neighborhood concerns.

ParkBank Celebrates 70 Years in the Park

You are invited to join us on Wednesday, May 14th for Birthday Cake and Coffee at our Main Bank and Drive-in Buildings.

We express to you, our customer, our thanks and sincere appreciation for your continued support on the celebration of our 70th Anniversary.

St. Anthony Park State Bank was incorporated on May 16th, 1916 by area residents, businessmen, and employees of the University of Minnesota Farm School who wanted to have banking services close to their home and place of employment. Since that time, the bank has grown to $46 million in assets and 47 employees.

Throughout the years, there have been many changes at ParkBank. We started with a small teller window located in what was at that time Guertin Drug Store. A year later we occupied the building at 2250 Como Avenue which was later enlarged twice. To accommodate our customers further, the Drive-In Building was added in 1974.

We look forward with anticipation of our new offices to be located across the street in October, 1986. We thank you, our customers, for your continued support which makes this move possible.

During our Anniversary Week, May 12th-May 16th, we will have on display at the Main Bank Building historical documents, pictures and equipment. Plan now to stop in to view this interesting exhibit.

Bulger named WCCO "Good Neighbor"

By Mary Mergenthal

Ann Bulger recently was named WCCO Radio Good Neighbor. Bulger is a lifelong resident of St. Anthony Park who has been active in numerous community activities, especially involvement with children and youth. In the words of the WCCO award statement, "throughout her many volunteer activities she's been a true friend to young people."

The award recognized several of Bulger's contributions to area youth. Her nearly perfect attendance as a listener to weekly fifth and sixth grade book reports at St. Anthony Park Elementary School was noted. "Even 15 inches of snow didn't keep her away," one teacher was quoted as commenting. Bulger's help to the Isabella program at the Environmental Learning Center was also acclaimed. Her help was no informal offering, the radio award pointed out. "She helped to get the program started and she's volunteered to help keep the program going."

Bulger has accompanied fifth and sixth graders on five-day trips for eight years and has taught environmental classes, winter survival, camping and canoeing. Yet other student-related activities were noted: Bulger's work with the American Field Service (AFS) program at Como Park Senior High; her production of a newsletter for Murray Junior High School and her tutoring of students in Spanish.

In addition, Bulger was recognized as a founding member of Corpus Christi Roman Catholic Church and co-author of a history book on the congregation.

One good neighbor action which the radio omitted but which neighbors in the Park certainly appreciate is Bulger's contributions to the Bugle on a monthly basis. As with much of her life, such contributions tend to focus chiefly on young people and their needs and accomplishments.

School News

International Weekend at Como Park High School

What does Juan from Ecuador have in common with Kwan from Hong Kong or Sonja from Switzerland? All three are AFS exchange students here for the year at Twin City area high schools. They are among ten students from eight different countries who will attend the International Weekend at Como Park High School from May 8 through May 11. Other countries will be Honduras, Brazil, Finland, Sweden, and Belgium.

The young people will arrive May 8 and go to the homes of their host families. On Friday they will speak to various classes at the school before attending the dance that evening. On Saturday, they will get together with all the host families for a potluck dinner, before visiting the Tokyo Exhibit at the Walker Art Museum, then the Tokyo Theater performance at the Guthrie. They return to their yearlong host families on Sunday.

Each AFS student attends three International weekends during the year. These mini-experiences with different host families and high schools expand the cross-cultural learning that takes place during the exchange. The students gain from the opportunity to get acquainted with other foreign students and compare notes on their experiences. The Como weekend is the last for the year, so there are prolonged farewells at the end of this one.

Como junior Angie Dolney left in March for a year in Japan as an AFS "American Abroad". She is living with a family outside of Tokyo near Mt. Fuji. Learning the language while attending school there will be a challenge for Angie.

The AFS program at Como High School is funded through Penny Tuesdays, a carnation sale on Valentine's Day, a Christmas fruit sale, and the Fourth of July barbecue at Langford Park. Host families are needed for the International Weekend, as well as for the school year beginning in September. If interested, call Judy Brown, 488-5477.

Central High School

The Student Council announces some community activities in which Central students are involved. They want the community to be aware of these activities so that they may become involved.

Penny Tuesday: Every Tuesday money is collected. Every month this fund is donated to various charities; April collections were given to The Dorothy Day Center, and the March monies were donated to Cross Roads.

Walk-America: A large group of students and staff participated in the March of Dimes, Walk-America, on April 27.

Sponsor-a-Child: Central is sponsoring a child in need, for a year, through the Sponsor-a-Child program.

Other community activities include: a food drive for food shelves on April 28-May 2; a blood mobile for volunteer donors on April 16; and a student council sponsored Wellness Week, on April 14-18, with aerobics, healthy food sale, smoke-free day, a fun run and other various health related activities. In addition several students visited nursing homes this spring in the interest of community involvement.

Como Park High School

Music will be in the air during the month of May at Como Park High School. On May 8, the Como Area Band Festival will feature bands from the area grade schools, junior highs, and Como Senior High. The All-City Orchestra from the elementary schools will also perform at the 7 p.m. concert in the school gym.

The Spring Fling dance will be the next evening, May 9, from 7 to 11 p.m. in the gym. On May 15 and 16, at 7:30 p.m., the Como choir will give the musical "How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying" in the school auditorium.

The Como Concert Band will entertain at their spring program on May 22 at 7:30 p.m. in the auditorium. The following Thursday, May 29, is the date for a concert featuring the Varsity Band, plus ensembles, and solos from the Concert Band. Time is 7:30 p.m. in the auditorium.

The bloodmobile will be at Como High on May 8, from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. in the gym. Year-book Day is May 30.

For the first time, the senior honors program will be held during the school day, rather than in the evening. Parents are invited to attend the awards assembly at 9 a.m. on May 22 in the auditorium. Parents and seniors are reminded by school administrators that there is no such thing as an authorized "senior skip day." Seniors are expected to attend school every day until the close of the school year on June 6.

School to 14

April was wild life month at St. Anthony Park elementary school. Speakers represented Como zoo, The Nature Conservancy, The Department of Natural Resources and, shown here, "The Raptor Program" of the University of Minnesota. Daisy Ritter thrilled the children with a Red Tailed Hawk, a Barn Owl and a tiny Screech Owl.

grew up in the "red bud house," recalls that her father brought it back from Pennsylvania and planted it in the 1940s. It's been a curiosity ever since. Professor Mullin brings his "Woody Plant Materials" class here each fall, and they struggle to identify this rare specimen. In its warmer, natural range it's not rare at all, but as common as a weed, growing everywhere through the woods, a lower story tree beneath taller trees. Here in Minnesota, where its hardiness is sketchy, we might plant it on the east side of the house, and hope.

There's one other red bud in the neighborhood, on the University mall at the corner of Cleveland and Buford, sheltered by steep banks and a ring of spruces. It needs that shelter.

The red bud has broad, heart shaped leaves and an attractive low form, often multi-stemmed. It grows to 25 feet. You can pick it out in winter by its reddish brown bark, or the few pea-like pods still clinging to its branches. It is available from at least one local nursery.

From the red bud house it's only a block to College Park and the grove of Colorado spruce planted by Samuel Green. The spruces look a little mournful and tired right now, among all the giddy blossoming oaks and maples, but it's not fair competition and it won't last. It's a quiet, cool spot in the park, and the red granite stone with its simple statement stirs our curiosity about the past." This park and these trees," it reads, "perpetuate the memory of Samuel B. Green, 1859-1910."

Colorado spruces are a common choice for an evergreen in Minnesota. They're hardy, easy to grow, and soften our bleak winter landscape. In springtime mourning doves nest in them, and in summer they cast as cool a shade as any deciduous tree. Sassy and cute when they're little, they can grow into giants 80 to 100 feet tall. It takes some foresight in planning for the future to decide where best to plant an evergreen giant.

Close by, on Samuel Green's "hackberry street," otherwise known as Doswell Ave. north of Como Ave., we find the ginkgo house. Its address is 2174 Doswell Ave., but you can find it without the number. The green shutters give it away, with their ginkgo-leaf cut-outs, and so does the tree itself, with its somewhat prehistoric appearance. The house was built in 1928 for a family named McWethy. The tree was purchased from Rosehill Nursery and planted, probably, in 1929.

The newer ginkgos on Carter Ave. brought a recent surprise to the newer owners of the McWethy house. For the first time in its long life, the ginkgo tree proclaimed its femininity and began to bear fruit. The owners were not pleased. City foresters, nurserymen and homeowners agree on this point: the fruit of the ginkgo smells vile. They use various impolite analogies to describe it.

If you want to plant a ginkgo, you won't have to worry about the unwanted produce. Nurseries are only interested in selling males, like the ones on Carter Ave. that do not bear fruit. Ginkgos are expensive and slow growing, but a good investment as a city tree because they're resistant to disease, insect problems, and air pollution. Their rubbery, turgid, fan-shaped leaves turn a pretty yellow in the fall, and when they drop, they drop all at once.

Basswoods aren't as plentiful as oaks in the neighborhood, but there are some nice ones, particularly those at Langford Park. There's one with six trunks, beloved of children, growing close to St. Anthony Park Elementary School. Seventh-grader Sara Campbell remembers how "we used to eat our lunch fast and run outside and climb into it." You

These snow-laden Colorado spruce in College Park are a living testament to Samuel B. Green's commitment to forestry in Minnesota.

"Green's Folly" was a wise decision

Samuel B. Green came to Minnesota in 1888 to work for the new University Agricultural Experimental Station. Green had a rich background, both of work experience and education, in the field of horticulture, a profession he never abandoned. As the years passed, he found himself involved with forestry and foresters. He served on the state's new Forestry Board in 1899. In 1900, he spent the summer in Germany, visiting forestry schools, agriculture schools and experimental stations. He came to believe that at least some of the required forestry courses should be taught in the woods, and as a very influential member of the Forestry Board, he was able to help make this happen. The University of Minnesota has a teaching campus at Itasca State Park and a demonstration forest at Cloquet, largely because of Samuel Green.

Samuel Green lived in North Saint Anthony Park on Commonwealth Ave., and attended the Congregational Church where he served on the board of trustees and as Sunday school superintendent.

In 1907, Green heard that a tract of land surrounding a small pond in a deep depression was tax-delinquent and about to be sold. He convinced his neighbors to contribute enough money to buy the land and to donate it to the city as a park. It was named Partridge Park, but gradually people began calling it College Park, and the new name stuck. It had another name for a while, too, "Green's Folly," because some neighbors were disenchanted with the project.

Green practiced forestry in a personal way in his neighborhood. He had a grove of Colorado spruce planted in Partridge Park. (Later, after his death, a granite stone with a plaque was placed near the grove in his memory.) He also insisted that Doswell Ave. (north of Como Ave.) be planted with hackberries instead of elms. Hackberries are an elm-like tree, but not vulnerable to the Dutch Elm disease that has killed so many elms. Today, Doswell Ave. is one of the rare streets that still has a solid, cool tunnel of arching green branches.

Green was fifty years old when he died of a heart attack. His gift to neighbors is a day of sledding in College Park, a cool walk down shady Doswell Ave., and a few green thoughts.

were properly settled for a good talk when your shoulders rested on one trunk and your feet on another, making you a sort of propped-up human hammock. And things haven't changed; fourth-grader Meg Davis says it's still a talking tree.

The taller, mightier basswoods (also known as American Lindens) stand down by the basketball/volleyball court, and shower it with fragrance on June evenings. Basswood flowers are small and inconspicuous, but their scent is potent and sweet. Bees love them.

Basswoods grow tall, up to 120 feet, so they are not a suitable companion for a one story house, but lovely at Langford. Their leaves are heart shaped, broad, up to eight inches across. A relative, the Littleleaf Linden, is more commonly planted these days. It's a little shorter (grows up to 90 feet), has the same fragrant flowers and smaller leaves. Neither tree has good fall color.

There's a partnership between the tall 19th century house and the battle scarred catalpa tree at 2239 Gordon Ave. If you look west, you can see them from the basswoods. The house was built in 1891, and the catalpa must have been planted soon after. Its trunk measures ten feet five inches, which, according to Peggy Sand of the Minneapolis Heritage Tree Program, means it's among the largest in the Twin Cities area. In 1981, a tornado winged it, woodpeckers and squirrels invade it, and younger oaks crowd it, yet it still has that belonging look, as if it were married to the house.

Catalpas were very fashionable at the turn of the century and up until World War II, but fashions change. Today few nurseries carry them. They're marginally hardy here, which is part of the reason they're ignored. Forty to fifty percent of newly planted catalpas won't make it past their tenth birthday. Those that survive, however will bloom in June with blossoms that are large, white and fragrant. These are followed by long, bean-like pods and no fall color.

A catalpa can grow as tall as

School from 11

St. Anthony Park Elementary

A Celebration of Talent will take place all during the week of May 19 to 23 at St. Anthony Park Elementary School, with the culmination being the program on May 22 at 6:30 p.m. Neighborhood residents are invited to visit the school during the week, especially for the Thursday evening program.

The annual school carnival will be May 2, from 5 to 8:30 p.m. There will be games and tests of skill for all ages, prizes, foods, a cake walk, a bake sale, and a plant sale. All are welcome.

The public is also invited to the Memorial Day program on May 23 at 10 a.m. at the bandstand at Langford Park, where the American war dead will be honored. In case of rain, the program will be held in the school gym. On May 30, from 9 a.m. until noon, children will participate in a field day at Langford Park, with races and track events.

"Peter Pan" at the Children's Theatre will be the destination of the first, second, and third-graders on May 6. These primary grade children will be accompanied by their teachers and some parents.

Murray Junior High School

Heritage Fair II, the second annual celebration of ethnic backgrounds of Challenge Social Studies students at Murray Magnet Junior High, will be held on May 7 in the school gym. The fair will be held during the day from 9 a.m. until 2:30 p.m. and again from 5 to 8 p.m. The public is invited to come and sample authentic foods, customs, and atmosphere at the various booths.

Many nationalities from all over the world will be represented: Scottish, German, Norwegian, Russian, English, African, Italian, Asian, Swedish, Mexican, Irish, Indian and French. The French exhibit will display the Arc of Triumph, while the Mexican will feature spicy foods. Admission fee is 50¢ for adults and free for young people 18 and under.

On May 17 senior citizens are invited to have lunch at Murray before attending a matinee performance of the musical "Oliver." Reservations may be made through Community Education, 645-2456. Evening shows of "Oliver" will be at the school on May 16 and 17 at 7 p.m. There will be a spaghetti dinner preceding the Thursday play from 5 to 6:30 p.m., sponsored by the Murray School Association. Cost is $3 for ages 12 and up and $2 for children. Tickets will be available through Bonnie Brandt at Speedy Market, or Penny Chally 644-5340, Mary Ann Williams, 646-6291, or Nancy Myers, 645-7879.

The Murray Band will give its spring concert on May 20 at 7 p.m. at the new Luther Northwestern Seminary building on the southeast corner of Hendon and Fulham. The public is invited.

The Murray Chess Club will hold a tournament on May 22 at 6 p.m. in the school gym.

There are two candidates for the openings on the Murray Site Council, Joanne Laird and Marge Grahn Bowman. Laird is the mother of Tom Laird, who will be in eighth grade next fall, and Bowman is the mother of Brian Maddock, an incoming seventh-grader. Election will be on June 3. It is still possible to nominate candidates.

now volunteers drawn from the membership, she said.

Although SAP still has some paid cashiers, SAP Too decided in an April 14th board meeting to cut all paid cashiers and work exclusively with volunteers. In addition, a new management team was formed so that paid managers will be present in the store on a continual basis, from opening until closing.

"The new plan," said Vaughan, "is going to free us [coordinators] up for more time to do some long term planning, (such as budgets, ordering, etc.). The load is not going to be as intense. It's a new management approach, and that's what we need. It's aimed at increased sales, and that's the point of the whole thing."

SAP and SAP Too are also trying various outreach programs, such as public tours, in an effort to promote a greater awareness of the co-ops in the community.

Some community members feel that SAP and SAP Too are a benefit to the community and serve a purpose.

Whether the St. Anthony Park co-ops will get the chance to continue to serve the community is as yet untold. Like countless other co-ops, they too may fold.

"Even if we do close," said Cutler, "effectively we've won the war. Right now people are more aware of what they are eating than they might have been when we started. Stores are carrying more health foods today. But short of disaster, there's no reason for us not to keep going. The fact that sales have been stable for three months now [under the new management plan] shows that we're here, maintaining like we were before. I think it's going to be OK."

May days celebration

We're celebrating the new season with special springtime festivities May 1 and 2. Stop in either day for a complimentary fresh flower or a packet of garden seeds, sip a glass of cooling lemonade and munch some appropriately decorated baked goodies. Both our lobby and our employees will be dressed in their finest spring fashions. Come take a look and help us celebrate spring.

Interest grows for consumer loans

With the double impact of spring fever and a strong economy, more and more consumers are considering major expenditures, especially new cars and home improvements. If you're among those planning a big project or a major purchase, come to the First Banks for your financing needs. We're here to help you get that new kitchen, extra car or vacation you've been dreaming about.

Or maybe you're thinking about investing some money. Consumer loans are also available to buy that stock you've been eyeing or the mutual fund you want to join. We can help with almost any financing need. Just call your First Bank personal banker.

ATMs: How to bank here, there and everywhere

Many of our customers have discovered the ease and convenience of using an automated teller machine (ATM) for their routine banking activities. They withdraw cash, transfer money from savings to checking accounts (or vice versa), deposit money and check their balances — all without waiting in line at a teller window.

At the Fastbank ATMs, more than a million of these transactions take place each month.

Still, we realize some of you are hesitant about using a machine to do your banking. That's why we have people in the bank to answer your questions, handle your First Bank Card request form and show you how to operate the machine.

Stop in or call for specific information. With an easy-to-get, easy-to-use First Bank Card, you, too, can discover the convenience of banking fast at a Fastbank service location.

Small business is big business

May 19 is the beginning of national Small Business Week, and we at the First Banks think it's an appropriate time to salute all our local entrepreneurs. Small business owners contribute substantially to the economic health and diversity of our community. We acknowledge their efforts, while continuing our commitment to serving their financial needs.

Trees from 13

90 feet, so it's a fair match for a tall house. For a 19th Century house, it's a very happy match, reflecting a certain time and taste.

Another good building/tree match is outside the drive-in bank building. It's a little cox-burn hawthorne. Loaded down with large, dramatic thorns and last year's berries, it waits until May is nearly over, then bursts out with glossy green leaves and small white blossoms, closely followed by bees. It's a graceful, multi-stemmed tree in perfect proportion to the low, one-story bank. It was chosen by landscape architect Marion Fry as part of her landscaping design for the drive-in bank.

The hawthorne is a native Midwestern tree, unlike the catalpa, and a tough one that can thrive in poor soils. It will grow taller, up to 35 feet. It typically takes a horizontal form, spreading low and wide.

Oaks are the true natives of our neighborhood, which may explain why nothing we can buy from a nursery looks so natural, so right, as an oak that just grew by itself. And in fact our native oaks, the red and white and burr oaks, can't be bought from a nursery. You have to plant an acorn, or protect a seedling already started by a squirrel. Pin oaks, though, like the ones planted on Carter Ave. south of Como Ave., are available from nurseries. Nurseries don't sell native oaks because of their deep tap root, which makes them hard to transplant. The tornado of 1981 illustrated this; it couldn't topple them, because their roots went too deep. Instead it broke them off, or twisted off great hunks, leaving them upright, but mangled.

Oaks are fine by themselves, better in small groups, and wonderful in groves, like the small grove at 1311 Keston, which spills over into neighboring yards. Here and all through the neighborhood, oaks plant themselves, and if they escape our lawnmowers, grow and thrive. Miniature furry pink leaves unfurl beside the blossoms. Soft green overtakes the pink, then the deep green leaves of summer that insects like to chomp on, followed by deep crimson or brown in the fall. Some trees will hold their leaves through the winter, adding a soft touch to the landscape.

This is only a tiny sampling of the abundance of our neighborhood trees. This is a small token of appreciation for what they are—reliable, substantial, and to our everlasting pleasure, green.

Business News

All the construction and new windows at 2278 Como herald the remodeling of the Villa Sportswear Shop. The Villa is taking over space formerly occupied by the Village Optics. The additional space will give the Villa direct access from Como Ave. and will also allow for more display areas on Como Ave. The Villa Sportswear Shop will have nearly twice the show floor area it presently has. A Grand Opening is tentatively scheduled for June.

Spring is here and for many it's a time for redecorating. After the long winter months of looking at the furniture or the wall color or that corner that "just isn't right," it may be time for a change. Stop by a unique new shop called Home Accents. Doreen Nichols, owner, believes that "the right accent pieces can save a decorating 'disaster' or add life to old furnishings or simply pull together the look of a room. Even grandma's old sofa with a throw over the top can be made to look like part of a planned decorating idea and not just a hand-me-down."

Home Accents is located in Lexington Plaza, at Larpenleur and Lexington in Roseville.

99¢ Movies have opened at the intersection of Como Ave. and Raymond Ave. 99¢ Movies rents video cassettes.

St. Anthony Park State Bank has announced the promotion of Bonnie Warren to Vice President/Senior Operations Officer. As a Senior Operations Officer, Ms. Warren will be responsible for the daily management and operation of ParkBank.

ParkBank is celebrating its 70th Anniversary during the week of May 12-16. ParkBank will have on display at the Main bank building historical documents, pictures and equipment. Plan to stop in to view an integral part of this area's history. ParkBank continues to make an impact with the recent groundbreaking of their new building on Como Ave. Plans call for the completion of the building in the fall of 1986.

wolves and arctic fox along the river which follows the northern limit of the tree-line.

"We're going to do a lot of exploring when we get to our campsites," offered Pierce. "There are lots of streams that flow into the Coppermine and we'll be going through two mountain ranges—maybe we'll even be able to do some hiking."

Ruddy explained that the girls' group is planning to bring an assortment of small musical instruments with them and Pierce said she expects to provide coaching as choir-director-in-residence. "I can't see this trip without music and I don't think any of the rest of us can either," Pierce asserted.

Pierce's interest in singing almost deterred her from taking the trip, as she had an opportunity to travel to Vienna for two weeks this summer with a choir in which she sings. Most of her friends couldn't understand why she would choose not to go to Europe. But as she weighed the options she came to the realization that, "this arctic trip is a once in a lifetime thing and I just had to do it. Besides, I can't imagine not going back to Widjiwagan."

Based on their prior experiences canoeing at the camp, which offers backpacking and canoeing programs each summer to youth aged 12-18, all three adventurers anticipate that their arctic experiences will contain valuable personal lessons as well as a strong dose of fun and excitement. Expressing their collective sentiments about canoe trips at Widjiwagan, Scamp noted that "you're in a totally different world up there and you learn a lot about yourself that you didn't know before. You discover you can do things that you didn't think you could do, like how to be able to deal with people for an extended period of time on a really close basis—living with them, basically, 24 hours a day."

For more information about Camp Widjiwagan and its programs contact: Bob Rick, Director, Camp Widjiwagan, 1761 University Avenue, St. Paul, MN 55104; 645-6605.

have all the space they want to sell them [in]," Lindquist said.

Coordinator of the attic sale Mary Atwood said the sale is open as a fundraiser for groups and clubs. "It's also a good way to participate in the neighborhood and meet people," Atwood said. Those interested in the attic sale may call Atwood at the Park Bank, 647-0131.

Lindquist attributes the success of past festivals to the variety of entertainment and attractions which appeal to children as well as adults, making the occasion a unique family affair.

Also planning the Festival is Michael Basich who is in charge of publicity. Judy Flinn and Joan Dow-Stuyve are organizing the Arts and Crafts Fair.

On June 4, Terry Amsberry, who is lining up the entertainment, will appear on Good Company to publicize the Festival.

Details of the schedule of events will be printed in the June issue of the Park Bugle. Don't miss it!

Sports

By Kent Lundberg

.... With spring arriving, Langford Park is in the process of getting ready for the new outdoor sports season.

Intramural hockey now begins for the first and second graders and girls volleyball starts for the fifth and sixth graders. Approximately 120 participants are expected for the spring soccer league that begins on May 1. For older people who are athletically inclined, a man's outdoor basketball league will begin on June 18. Co-rec volleyball begins on April 1.

.... Murray Junior High School's spring sport season is beginning. Boys' baseball and girls' softball are the two major activities. Both teams will have first-year coaches. Pat Cherrier, coach of the boys' team, expects his squad to improve upon last year's 3-5 standing. Eight home games will be played on Murray Field. Returnees to the team include Park resident Troy Sperbeck. Jan Anderson is the girl's softball coach. Her team's games will be played at Luther Northwestern Seminary grounds.

.... St. Paul Central High School's baseball team, coached by Jim Fritsche, is starting its season with six out of the nine starters being juniors. All home games will be at Dunning Field.

.... Coach Bob Turner's baseball team at Como Senior High welcomes back eight lettermen from last year's squad. The team is 1-1 in conference play. Fourteen conference games are to be played at Municipal Stadium.

—Join Langford on a trip to the Metrodome to watch our Minnesota Twins take on the Baltimore Orioles. Game night is Tuesday, May 6. COST is just $6.00 which includes a reserved ticket and transportation. Call Langford (298-5765) for more information.

—Registration for summer sports at Langford has been extended through the month of May. Sign-up early to ensure your spot on a team. Register between 3-9 p.m. Mon.-Thurs. Volunteer coaches are also needed to assist with these teams. Call Langford if interested.

Men's Basketball League — Langford's Men's Summer Outdoor League will begin on Wed., June 18.
