Energy Park—from dreams to development

By Joel Schurke and Dave Merk

The vision was clear. Energy Park would be a self-sufficient community where one could live and work with minimal environmental impact. Today, nearly five years since the initial stages of planning, the vision is realized.

"So, while the design of Energy Park is still a matter literally not consigned to concrete, this Master Plan is intended to be the form into which that concrete will eventually be poured," The Master Plan for Energy Park was completed in October, 1981 and reads a bit like a poorly-written fairy tale. Its laudable albeit idealistic goals remain largely unreached, but as an inter-city development Energy Park is a late-blooming success.

The late 1970's brought an increased awareness of the need to conserve energy resources. Escalating costs and depleting supplies were the primary incentives that kept energy issues at the forefront of everyone's attention. Energy was the issue and Energy Park was a concept.

Chester Wille has a unique vantage point of Energy Park. As owner of Gabe's by the Park, 991 North Lexington Ave., Wille witnessed the development of Energy Park from the beginning. "I've been here nine years, and I've watched them really raise this place up. I certainly feel positive about it," Energy Park and Bandana Square. There is more traffic, full-time residents and it has done nothing but help me," Wille said.

As an Energy Park homeowner and adjacent business owner (the Park stands for Community Park) Wille is more reserved in his review of Energy Park's goals.

"A self-supporting community sounds nice, it's a great idea, but I wouldn't say that it's worked 100 percent. Mean, everyone has to go down the road to buy groceries. How many grocery stores do they want?" Wille inquires.

"The Master Plan is specific for starters, the plan calls for the development of an autonomous community with energy-related businesses, a development that would not adversely affect the existing communities. Grocery stores are not specifically considered, but the plan does detail a variety of well-thought considerations regarding traffic flow, response time from existing fire stations, increase in use of recreational areas and educational facilities, etc.

To insure that no ill effects would befall existing communities from the development of Energy Park, Council 46 was formed. It assumed the task of preparing for the following, for the bordering communities. Kathy Zieman, chairperson of Council 46, said, changes made in the original plan.

"The focus has changed. It had to change from energy. The ideas that we had for the solar design companies ended when they went out of business. When we set goals for five years, they may or may not come true. But we have housing, employment, and a future that all seem to be compatible," Zieman said.

Housing

Ray Barton made a very personal investment in Energy Park. He and his wife purchased a townhouse in MacArthur Hills—once of the housing developments in Energy Park. In a 1983 Bugle interview the Barton expressed optimism and excitement about their decision. For Barton the optimism harked to a sense of hope.

"I think our investment in the city hasn't really lived up to our expectations. Frankly, the taxes in the city have brought us just about to the breaking point. I'm very disappointed. I think the city (St. Paul) is going to be in deep trouble because those of us who can afford to live in these homes are going to move back to where we can plant trees and have elaborate financial resources" and ability to sustain long-range marketing.

Long-range was an apt description. The 90 condominiums and 32 townhouses have not sold quickly. High interest rates and a sluggish real estate market were blamed for slow sales. Since February of this year, however, things have been going fairly well according to Carlotta Molyne of the MacArthur Hills sales office. Molyne notes that 60 percent of the condominiums and 70 percent of the townhouses are sold.

AHW also developed Bandana Square. Like the housing, Bandana Square got off to a slow start, but has become the focal point of Energy Park. Ellen Higgins, president of AHW Corporation, noted that "typically shopping centers don't open until they have 50 percent occupancy. We opened shopping center wasn't completed. There is something in Energy Park, Bandana Square has really brought everything together. It's a neat place to take people rather than traipsing over to Minneapolis," Zieman said.

Some question whether this marketplace is working. Europa Unlimited, a business formerly located in St. Anthony Park, located in Bandana Square. Editto Rajar, who co-owns the shop with Michael Juranich, said times have been fairly tough.

"We were one of the first 12 stores here in 1983," Rajar said, "and it was tough the first year. I think a lot of stores have gone out, and it's not the most perfect mix of stores." Rajar said one problem is that people don't know where Energy Park is to 7

Recycling returns

District 12 Community Council and the St. Paul Neighborhood Energy Consortium have announced plans for curbside recycling in the St. Anthony Park neighborhood. Meetings of the program will be held on the second Wednesday of each month.

The city has received requests from the Minneapolis Foundation, the Metropolitan Council, and the city of St. Paul to develop and implement curbside recycling in St. Paul. Currently, the city is working on a pilot program that will include Districts 10, 11, 12, and 13. Additional areas of the city will be added to the program in the coming months.

The city is also planning to hold a Town Meeting in late winter to discuss and comments on the final plans provided by the consortium.

The District 12 Community Council is a group of 21 citizens elected to serve the District 12 area of St. Paul, including residents of north and south St. Anthony Park, and some citizens. It is one of 17 citizen participation councils in the city.

The council meets the second Wednesday of each month. All meetings are open to the public. Check for location.

Redevelopment proposed
Residents and property owners will have an opportunity to comment on plans for a proposed development located between St. Paul and Minneapolis at a meeting of the District 12 Physical Planning Committee at St. Cecilia's Church, 2357 Bayless Pl., on Sept. 4 at 5 p.m. The committee will review, discuss, and hear concerns, needs and desires of interested parties regarding the initial development plans for the creation of a tax increment district in our area.

The area north of University Avenue to the Burlington Northern tracks and east of Minnesota 280 to the city limits is currently being studied by the architectural and engineering firm of Bennett, Ringrose and Woldfeld (BRW).

The site includes several older industrial properties and vacant railroad property which lack adequate streets and utilities. The cost of acquiring existing buildings, demolition, and soil cleanup will be high, making it unlikely that it would be developed without public assistance.

Mary Schweiger of the Planning and Economic Development Department estimates that tax revenue from development of offices and light industry will eventually yield nearly $16.0 million annually, compared with existing taxes of $26.2 million.

The city will hold a Town Meeting in late winter to review and comment on the final plans provided by BRW.

Neighborhood needs assessment
District 12 Community Council has received a $1,300 grant from the City of St. Paul Human Services Initiatives Program to conduct a needs assessment of the neighborhood housing issues. Part of the grant will be used to train eight community members, through the U of M Extension, to act as facilitators for focus groups. This training will require a 9 hour time commitment—three hours each on September 6, 11 & 13 (two evenings and one Saturday). Three of these eight new facilitators would lead focus groups in October. There is room for one or two more individuals to receive the focus group training. If you are a resident of District 12 and would like more information about becoming a facilitator, call the Council office, 646-8884 or Andy Jentis, Housing Committee Chair, 646-0797.

Harvest and Storage Workshop
Gardeners—bring your favorite vegetable recipes to the "Harvest & Storage Workshop" at the District 12 office, 2380 Highland Ave, on Saturday, Sept. 25 from 9 to 10 a.m. This workshop will focus on preparing and preserving this year's harvest, as well as swapping recipes with your neighbors. The public is welcome. See you there.

Fall harvest fun run
Attention runners, joggers, garden lovers, and others! On Saturday, Sept. 20, the Park Gardens (formerly St. Anthony Park Community Gardens), located at 2217 Robbins St., will host the 1st annual Fall Harvest Fun Run. This event will interest young and old, with legions of walking tours of St. Anthony Park gardens. Register at the Park Gardens at 9:30 a.m. The Fun Run will begin at 10 a.m. Special prizes awarded. For more details, call the District 12 office at 646-8884 or Barb Buehrer at 644-7464.

Alarming facts
The city of St. Paul recently enacted an ordinance to deal with the problem of false alarms. During 1984, the police department responded to over 10,000 alarms at a cost of approximately $2.25 per call. During the first six months of 1985, the police responded to between 800 and 900 alarms, a decrease of 98.5% of those alarms reported no crime or attempted crime but were a result of human error or system malfunction. The end result is a enormous waste of police resources and money.

The established program also deals with the problem of structures that are damaged either by a criminal act, storm or accident. In the past the police have not had access to information about people who can secure these structures. This again has resulted in an inefficient use of police time. However, under the permit system, those names are now available, thus enabling the police to quickly secure property and return to normal patrol duties.

Saint Paul Ordinance #1295, which has been in force since December 20, 1985, requires all city of St. Paul residents and businesses that have alarm systems to be licensed. The cost of the permit is $12.50 per year. Citations are issued for unlicensed systems, a $10 fine is assessed for any/all false alarms. Applications may be obtained from the License and Permit Division, Room 203 City Hall, 298-5065.

If there are any additional questions relative to the alarm permit requirements, contact Janet Odalson at the License and Permit Division or Tom Walsh at the Police Department, 292-5551.

Music in the Park

The 1986-87 Music in the Park series, which will include one jazz concert and five chamber music concerts, will open with Bluejeans/piano/singer. Leonard "Baby Doo" Caston on Sunday, Oct. 19 at 4 p.m. at St. Anthony Park United Church of Christ, 2129 Commonwealth Ave. Sixty-nine-year-old Baby Doo Caston, who has performed in Twin Cities clubs for four decades, recently appeared at the Guthrie Theatre and on MPR's "Live from Landmark" series. His just-released recording, "The Truth About The Blues," was described by St. Paul Dispatch/Pioneer Press jazz critic, Bob Protzman, as "a terrific album, with Caston in great voice, and his piano playing fresh, vital and original."

This season's diverse programming will also be highlighted with performances by critically-acclaimed Philip Myers, brilliant principal hornist of the New York Philharmonic, as guest of Twin Cities-based Ensemble Capriccio; Julia Bogard, SPCO principal flutist, who, with New York pianist Gwendolyn Mok, will preview some of her NY debut recital, and by the University of Minnesota Brass Choir, David Baldwin, conducting, in a program to celebrate St. Anthony Park's centennial.

Season tickets for the Music in the Park series, which is sponsored by the St. Anthony Park Arts Forum, will be available in mid-September at The Bibelot Shop (460-5615).

It's OK to dream

When city planners first imagined a business and housing development in the undeveloped plot near Snelling and Lexington Aves. north of Hamline University, they were, in every sense, dreaming.

It was five years ago this month that the St. Paul City Council gave its no-nonsense stamp of approval to the dream. They caught, or bought, the vision of developing a model energy efficient urban community. They had high hopes that the unique development would enlist innovative technology to create new jobs, new homes, new businesses, and, most importantly, save energy.

It was a dream that, if realized, would have made St. Paul a front-runner in urban development. It was a dream that sought to deal positively with the challenges of the energy crisis. It was a dream that spoke optimistically of encouraging "innovation, creativity and excellence."

Without dreams, all of us would stagnate and with dreams our dreams have power to invigorate us and thrust us out of dead center into the boundaries of life. Of course, one of the risks and challenges of following dreams is that the road is uncharted. When we step forth we don't know for sure what changes and pitfalls lie ahead. But the vision that propels us gives us enough energy and nerve to proceed anyway.

When St. Paul decided to invest time and money in following the Energy Park dream, it didn't know how things would change in the nation's perception of energy issues. It couldn't accurately predict what sort of businesses would be willing to move to the Walden-like business development. The dreamers weren't able, or willing it seems, to envision that most workers who needed jobs wouldn't choose or be able to afford living in an idyllic yuppie community even if they could get employment there.

Hindsight is clearer than foresight, they say. But it's not nearly as imaginative or interesting. So rather than bewailing the aspects of the Energy Park dream that haven't materialized, why don't we celebrate the joys of having new and innovative places to shop and eat and live right at our back door? Let's delight in development which is attractive and diverse. Let's recognize that it's good to dream and that when we act with vision and energy we can help dreams come true.

Energy Park was a dream. It hasn't exactly materialized as imagined. But it hasn't resulted in new problems either. The Bugle celebrates the reality, and possibility, of that dream.

For Sarah Quie

I hope we have appreciated you enough. Over the past few years, you have given this neighborhood irreplaceable gifts. You have given grace to our children, new vision to our worship, and beauty to us all.

We wish you nothing but the very best in your new home. We know that there will be other children there to teach, other stages to dignify, other audiences to delight.

But no matter where in this world you might go, you will always belong here. In a very, very special way, you are ours. You will be missed.

"A community newspaper, whether in remotest Minnesota or the depths of a far away metropolis, functions on a truly human scale. The big news is what happens next door. If that sounds only too obvious, bear in mind that many daily newspapers are joining the fashionable parade to special sections and other tactics to penetrate that market. So far the community press has held its ground; it will be a sorry day for American journalism if it can't."

Looking back at businesses that looked forward

By Art Helland

Editor’s note: With this installment we conclude Art Helland’s thorough quiz of historic St. Anthony Park businesses. Natives of the area can test their memories and newer residents can see what a busy area this community has been through the years.

The many companies and family businesses that were started in St. Anthony Park played an important role in the employment of numerous neighborhod families in the early teens and twenties, and setting a good example of entrepreneurial skills among the youth in the area.

A majority of the firms and family businesses are no longer in business, but several have developed and expanded in their fields of endeavor. Informational comments have been included in the answers, which will help to more firmly establish in the minds of the readers the approximate locations of those names on the list, as well as the types of businesses in which they were engaged. No doubt, there are some that are not on the list.

Noncredit classes offered through Informal Courses and Continuing Education for Women at the University of Minnesota may not carry credit but they have plenty of everything else. Like college-level learning, with in-depth presentations by experienced University faculty and other experts. And lively discussion, exciting field trips (in many cases), and useful instruction in short-term, inexpensive classes.

New courses this fall include women’s lives and women’s writing, Nicaragua and the U.S. government, professional selling skills, Mozart and his times, underwater photography, and much more.

Select from 50 classes — in arts and literature, career development, the natural world, and society and culture — designed to stimulate and inform, but in a more casual way, without the obligations of grades or exams.

Call for the new 600-page Extension Classes Bulletin that describes all credit and noncredit courses and convenient mail registration procedures (allow 10 days for delivery).

ST. ANTHONY PARK ASSOCIATION

Fall, rather than being the end of summer, always seems more like the beginning of something. This year, St. Anthony Park Association is celebrating fall, the beginning of its programming year, with a kick-off program "Know Your Neighbor (hood)." With the objective of bringing together current members and new members with local support organizations, the September 9 "neighborhood fair" will feature representatives from four organizations who will illuminate their roles in the community.

The four groups that will provide the program include the newly formed Neighborhood Watch Network whose purpose is to bring together citizens with a shared concern in "the integrity of the neighbor (hood)" to prevent crime. Children's Home Society will highlight some of its 13 programs such as the Crisis Nursery, an abuse prevention program which utilizes foster homes and its Unplanned Pregnancy Service which provides information to 11,000 teenagers annually to prevent teen pregnancy. The Society also sponsors single parent groups. Commonwealth Healthcare Center and Linneau Home both will describe their programs. Linneau's being the Community Outreach Good Friends program in which they attempt to give back to the community in addition to receiving from it. Commonwealth's Volunteer Program includes a wide range of activities and is based on a match of the interests of individuals from the community and the needs of the residents.

In addition, many other neighborhood organizations will be on hand to provide literature and answer questions including the Park Community Chorus and Band, the Leisure Center, District 12, Langford Boosters and others. Interested groups should contact Joan Mey or Joan Dow-Steve.

SAPA needs your membership support to continue providing sponsorship for programs brought to the entire community throughout the year, including support of the Langford Park Booster Club, 4th of July Activities, monthly meetings and numerous other activities and projects. Please take time to join or to renew your membership today and continue to give support to all of the worthwhile activities of the St. Anthony Park Association.

Energy Park from 1
Energy Park Drive is located. "But our main problem is convincing people to shop here. We don't need more traffic, we need more buyers," Mike Kampmeyer works for Coldwell Banker's commercial division in charge of leasing space. "It's a lot of work," Kampmeyer says, "but we're making it work."

Typically, it's a great location. The park [Energy Park] is a nice mix of business and residential areas," Kampmeyer commented.

Control Data, and its super-computer branch, Computer Systems, bases its Energy Technology Center (ETC) in Energy Park. A large portion of Energy Park is used for micro-computer training, while a small portion of the space is designated for small business practices. Together Control Data and ETA systems account for some 2,500 jobs, making them the largest employers in Energy Park.

Employing both residents of Energy Park and making a concerted effort to attract new opportunity to "hard-to-employ" individuals was a goal outlined in the Master Plan. While not actually meeting those goals, the development has been relatively successful with projections made in 1981, regarding the creation of new jobs. By the end of this year 2,400 new jobs should have been created through the development.

The prospect of such growth is what lured dentist Charles Kath to the Energy Park Business Center. "It seemed like a growing area of the city," Kath said. "It certainly has met with my expectations. The whole area is picking up." Kath said his practice has actually attracted more business than his previous location on University Avenue.

Norris Waalen is a certified public accountant who moved to Energy Park for the location which put him conveniently in range of clients from both Minneapolis and St. Paul. "I think it's nicely laid out, and there's the appeal and image of Bandana Square," Waalen said.

In many respects Energy Park has fulfilled, and in some cases surpassed, the dreams of its planners. But the grand plans of an energy efficient community have slipped from reality. Someday many of the unmet goals and objectives outlined in the Energy Park Master Plan will become a reality as they become necessities.

Bill Huesit, owner of Road Rescue, formerly located at University and Vandalia St., is a member of Council 46 and was very active in the early planning stages of Energy Park.

"We had a ground breaking for a building that was never constructed. We turned a few spades full of dirt, took photos and everything... well the concrete was poured. But I guess we don't look too bad. What's there is quite good and gives good impressions," Huesit said.

Seminary offers cross-cultural studies experience

By Alice Duggan

The tight little capsule of self-protection described above is actually home to more than just four. In fact, it may be because so many of us are living in that capsule that Luther Northwestern-Theronological Seminary undertook a program, called Cross-Cultural Studies, two years ago. In the summer of 1984, Steve Charleston arrived and became program director with optimism, energy—and, symbolically enough, in a new barrier-free building (LNTS Campus Center).

The Seminary's cross cultural program won't reach everyone. But it will touch future pastors who choose to have their coursework include cross-cultural experiences.

What's at the heart of this cross-cultural experience, as Charleston describes it, is something called "the other." "The other" is who or what we perceive as foreign people of a different race, of unfamiliar nationalities and cultures; people whose religion or way of life is beyond our ken. Charleston wants his students to relate to "the other," to find out "what reality is like out there" for that other and—importantly—"what they can do to help.

This kind of learning, though it's enriched by books and coursework, must happen in real communities with real people. The program stresses "experiential learning, within the context of the Twin Cities' Black, Asian, Hispanic, and Native American communities."

Charleston sees himself as leader, teacher, resource and collaborator in this venture. The work is "challenging" and "cooperative" crop up often in his speech. They represent a higher level of maturity for seminary graduates that they be imaginative, creative, flexible—and cooperative. Cooperation means, to him, not just going out in the world to help others, but also seeing and understanding what others can do for us.

The LNTS Cross Cultural Studies department educates seminary students, but it also has another function. It looks out for the needs of newly arrived foreign students and their families. The office is responsible for a manual, a guide to life in Minnesota, which covers everything from banking to garbage to winter survival. Jean Fingalson, the administrative secretary, works with an international student coordinator—to fill in all the gaps not covered by the manual. Their tasks are as diverse as peoples' needs: picking up new arrivals at the airport, helping people open a bank account, locating five more forks. The office is almost always in need of household items. Fingalson says. A particular need right now is for dressers. Anyone with items to donate should call Fingalson at 641-5223.

Ecumenism— an old idea

By Roseann Wolak

If you were to look up the word "ecumenism" in the dictionary, chances are you would find a definition similar to this— "A movement seeking to achieve worldwide unity among religions through greater cooperation and improved understanding." Now, if you had to go out and actually find an example of this word you might be at a loss. Possibly you'd make a belated straight for the Minnesota Council of Churches and ask for their direction. Or perhaps, keeping the matter closer to home, you'd seek the advice of a neighborhood pastor. Or maybe you'd decide to chuck all the legwork and just ask your Mother. Another choice, and maybe an easier one, would be to attend a service at the St. Anthony United Methodist Church or the St. Anthony Park United Church of Christ. This is a safe and sure bet since for about 60 years or so these two churches have been participating in their own type of ecumenical worship by holding joint summer services. Though it's not clear how the joint services began it's apparent that they are enjoyed. Peg VanZandt, a long time member of the St. Anthony Park community and an active member of the United Church of Christ, said she looks forward to the summertime services because it enables her to interact with people from both churches. "It's a good idea," she said, "because with summer vacations there never are as many people in church and with the shared service you get more of a community feeling." When asked if there seemed to be any minor complications with a different minister leading the congregation she said, "Oh no, not that I can see. The ministers usually concentrate on one theme for three or four Sundays so there are no problems. The ministers are very supportive and the churches in the Park are very close knit." Wendy Hanson, an active member of the Methodist church said, "It's a tradition and it works because people just assume it will since it has been going on for so long." Wendy grew up in the Park community and said she thinks that the shared services help promote membership and a neighborly feeling. This seems to be the overall general consensus. Bryant Durkee, a long time member of the Methodist church agrees wholeheartedly and added that this enables everyone to meet and introduce ourselves and it also gives the ministers a bit more free time. He pointed out that at one time both churches were combining programs for children and also the suprising fact that all churches in the St. Anthony Park community share Good Friday services and other events. He candidly expressed how about twenty years ago the Boy Scout troops in the Park community were very strong. However, when membership started slipping the Scout office decided to fold the Methodist troop #22. Well, to get some smiles back on young faces the St. Anthony Park Lutheran Church, the Falcon Heights Church, and the St. Anthony Park Methodist Church joined the United Church of Christ to form a troop that's still together today and is one of the oldest troops around. Durkee stated that he has never heard congregation members voice discontent or ill will about the shared services. Rather it's seen as quite a positive venture.

Methodist minister, Greg Renstrom, is a fairly new face in the Park. He said he has been settled in the community for about one year and the shared services have been a special way for him and his family to become part of the Park community. He has no doubts about the obvious success, "I think it's a highly viable and cooperative program," he said.

One thing is for certain. It takes a lot of good players to make a strong team. This appears to be a fine example of teamwork and showmanship paying off.
Principal from 1 state as well. Only 8 percent of the principals in Minnesota are women. This situation, however, is changing and Blank believes that an increase in the number of female principals will occur during the next few years.

"A role model is badly needed. It seems to be ingrained in the children's heads that the principal is male and the teachers are female," Blank says.

She recalls a situation when she filled in for the principal at Edgerton Elementary. Blank was standing in the cafeteria making sure that the lunch hour went smoothly when a young girl asked her where the prin-

Blank believes this type of stereotype has no place in the school system.

At 40, she has established an extensive history with district 625. Growing up in Roseville, Blank attended Lexington Elementary and then junior high and high school in Roseville. She credits education and master's degrees in physical education from the University of Minnesota. Blank returned to Roseville; this time as a teacher.

Blank taught for two years as the district's Teacher Effectiveness Trainer and for four-

Walls have also been built around the adjacent area, with some folding walls left between classrooms to provide flexibility. Fire doors have been installed. At the time the new addition was built, open space was the trend in education. Now some experts are advocating the return of the self-contained classroom. Teachers at St. Anthony Park learned to accommodate their teaching style to the open areas and will now have to adjust once more, although team teaching will still be possible.

gram or the core curriculum with a humanities component. Seventh-graders in the new specialty will be selected in the 6thgrade math class and to physical science, with work in computers. All will take a full year of both science and math, with a weekly lab with hands-on experience in both. Dr. Fred Pellet of the University of Minnesota helped to develop the cur-rriculum this summer.

will have 8000 books, 5000 of them new. "It's a start," Blank says. "We will keep increasing the number as the years go on."

She is excited about the thought of a new school building; one that will have a full, with the athletic team build one would expect a physical education teacher to have. Her professional dress and manor are complemented by the enthusiastic smile she flashes when talking about Falcon Heights and her new position.

Her staff is a hand picked group of teachers from within the district who volunteered to move. Blank needs to take 11 separate teaching styles and combine them to make one special and flexible group.

"I want a school where everyone cooperates, I think if we have a school where we are thinking as a unit, we will have reached a major goal," Blank said.

"I want to be known as a leader and be able to lead people. I don't want to be just a manager," Blank explained.

The most important part will be to help the teachers teach.

Teacher awareness and ongoing training is one of the goals Blank hopes to implement at Falcon Heights. For students, she wants to increase the computer and technological aspects of education by obtaining equipment offering progressively more advanced classes.

Increasing the number of books in the school's library was the first dilemma Blank faced. By receiving books from other schools and being allotted funds from her district, however, Blank was able to escape a major problem.

Business News

A business is born

As part of a program to assist in developing small businesses, the city of St. Paul used some innovative financing mechanisms to establish a small business incubator in a warehouse located in South St. Anthony Park at 2525 Endicott.

The incubator program is staffed by the St. Paul Department of Planning and Economic Development (PED). The incubator gives promising small businesses a better chance for succeeding by reducing their overhead. The program offers employee training, technical assistance and low rent.

In June, the incubator succeeded in hatching its first business, Becher Enterprises. Becher Enterprises started with one truck, three full-time staff members and 3,500 square feet of warehouse space. The company moved from the incubator last June with seven trucks, 20 full-time staff members and 2,500 accounts to its new facilities nearby at 881 Hiway.

Becher Enterprises is a food vending business that specializes in serving businesses that are too small to have vending machines. Becher's "snack pack" trays are delivered to clients where they are left unattended on an honor system. Becher Enterprises maintains a computer tracking system that helps to spot accounts that are losing money.

Becher's success is a real "feather in the cap" for PED according to Hugo Hendrickx. Hendrickx works with the incubator program for PED and said that Becher's success demonstrates that the program is working.

Ideally the businesses that enter the incubator program should be able to move on in three years. PED maintains a listing of commercial properties available for those businesses that do succeed.

Since its creation in 1982, the incubator program has seen only three failures. There are presently eight tenants in the program with a capacity for nine. Becher Enterprises was the first business to "graduate" from the program.

Neighborhood bids farewell to Yahanda

By Ann Bulger

"I want to retire while I can still enjoy fishing, traveling, and gardening. I can drive an hour to the Kinnickinnic River and catch all the brown and brook trout I want. My daughter received her Ph.D. in Education from Harvard last spring, so I think it's time for me to relax." So says David Yahanda, 62, as he looks forward to his last day as owner of Yahanda Cleaners on August 29.

Yahanda and his parents opened the business on the corner of Cleveland and Buford in 1971, after 20 years in the city town near the University of Minnesota campus. Burger King forced the move when they bought out the corner on which Yahandas were located, but it proved to be a good move, as Yahandas came to be a fixture in St. Anthony Park. At first, the emphasis was on the tailoring business, but gradually the drycleaning took over.

The jungle of plants in the large front windows is evidence of Yahanda's love for gardening. The shop has been more than a cleaning establishment—the informal, friendly atmosphere has made it a neighborhood gathering place. An orange cat often naps on the counter. The mailman stops to warm up or cool down, depending on the season. David Yahanda detains each customer long enough to find out the latest family news. "I wanted to just slip away, but the neighbor ladies are insisting on bringing in coffee and cookies for a retirement celebration," he smiled.

Yahanda grew up in Montereay, California, where he enjoyed the beach and the abundant plants. After service in World War II, he came to Minneapolis with his parents and younger siblings. He now lives with his wife in Fridley. The business will be taken over by a Korean family.

David Ammerlee Doolittle Shippee, born in St. Paul on February 5, 1957, died on the banks of the Taosau river in the far western province of Qinhai, China on August 3, 1986. Shippee learned photography at Film in the Cities and at the University of Minnesota School of Journalism. He practiced his photographic and writing skills at the Dgie and the Minnesotan Daily. From the age of fifteen, he wore his camera like a third arm. The awards he received in less than five years as a professional photojournalist gave promise of an outstanding career. He brought to his work technical skill and an artist's eye. Shippee is survived by his wife, mother and father, sisters Lisa Dubil of Berkeley, CA and Susan of Minneapolis, and two brothers, John of Atlanta, GA, and Douglas of Brooklyn, NY. A memorial service was held on August 18, at St. Matthews Episcopal Church, 2156 Carter Ave. The Shippee Dgie Memorial Fund is being established at the University of Minnesota's School of Journalism and Mass Communication.

There will be a meeting of the group Sept. 17, 7 p.m., at Merriam Park, 2000 St. Anthony Ave. Call Judy Miller, 298-5766, if interested.

Osteoporosis

Falcon Heights Learning Center, 1953 Garden Ave., will be the location and sponsor of a program on osteoporosis Sept. 15, 7-9 p.m. Cost is $3 per person. Osteoporosis is a thinning of bone which can lead to fractures and disability. It is a major health problem for older women. The good news, however, is that osteoporosis can be prevented by lifestyle choices made by women early in life. This program will examine how osteoporosis is as related to causes, risk factors and prevention. Speaker will be Kitty Dornfeld, R.N., head nurse at the Orthopedic Clinic at the University of Minnesota Hospital and Clinic.

Briefly from 14 Centennial quilt
Plans are underway to create a quilt to commemorate the St. Anthony Park Centennial. A group of interested people including Linda Munchwitz, Judy Frifelt, Robin Linquist, Pat O’Connor and Ruth Donhowe met in August to begin planning for it. They hope to find enough people to create thirty applique squares depicting scenes of places and events around the Park. Initial support has come from the St. Anthony Park Arts Forum and the Community Peddler Quilt Shop. It is hoped that others will join to make this a successful project.

Anyone interested in helping may contact Ruth Donhowe or Robin Linquist (see ad in the classifieds).

Yoga
Two yoga classes will be offered at Falcon Heights United Church of Christ, 1795 Holton St., starting Sept. 11. An eight-week class meeting Thursday evenings from 7:30 pm will include a period of mini-body re-hab, stretching and awareness of the body with awareness and a succession of gentle exercises designed to stretch and stimulate all parts of the body. "Easy Does It Yoga" for older persons will be offered on Thursday afternoons from 3-4 p.m. Participants must register in advance as enrollment is limited. For more information, call 646-2861.

Runaway cow
Lots of residents of St. Anthony Park are eager to stay as long as they can. That wasn’t the case, however, for one resident at the University of Minnesota. On Aug. 15 a 1-year-old Simmental cow jumped a 4’6” fence and headed west on an exploration of the area. He covered five miles before his adventure ended. Nick Mayes, manager of the Mobil station on Como, was quoted in the St. Paul Pioneer Press and Dispatch as claiming that when the cow came by with a rope trailing behind, his staff “tuned it up, but it refused to pay its bill.” It took veterinary police and tranquilizer darts to end the two-hour expedition. The cow was captured in Breck Woods in Lauderdale.

Street lights
Lantern style street lights in St. Anthony Park are receiving a new coat of paint this fall. As part of regular maintenance of the lamps, city crews have begun scraping and repainting the green lamps chocolate brown. Residents with concerns about the changes should contact City Council member Kirk Sommers at 208-5878 as soon as possible. City Council members are attempting to monitor the city’s actions regarding the lamps and are concerned about residents’ preferences for color of the lights.

Tselos and AFS celebrate #25

Dimitri Tselos was the winner of a free chicken dinner at the 25th annual Fourth of July barbecue. Tselos was the 25th person in line at the dinner. Since it was also the weekend for the Statue of Liberty celebration in New York, Tselos was an appropriate winner as he is an immigrant from Greece. He came to Minne- sota to teach art history at the University of Minnesota and is now retired.

The chicken barbecue began in 1962, the brainchild of Park resident Al Deuter, who was looking for a fundraising idea for the American Field Service (AFS) program at Murray High School. He also felt that the barbecue would fill a need for the community. At that time, most people brought a picnic supper to Langford Park on the evening of July 4. The AFS Club members bascd around the neighbor- hood and sold tickets in advance that year. 715 dinners were served. Price was $1.25 in 1962, and total profits were $770.

Costs have risen since then, and the total number of dinners served has fluctuated from a low of 950 to a high of 847. This year, 700 quarters of chicken were all gone by 7 p.m., and total profits were $1028, almost dou- ble those of 25 years ago. Adult tickets sold for $4.00 this year. For the past three years, the AFS group has shared the profits and the work with the Isabella committee from St. Anthony Park School. The AFS program transferred to Como Park High School when Murray closed as a senior high in 1979.

Both groups provide educa- tional enrichment opportunities for young people. AFS sends and receives students on foreign exchanges, as well as short-term exchanges with other schools. The Isabella program sends fifth- and sixth-graders to the Envi- ronmental Learning Center in the north woods, near Isabella, Minnesota.

Corpus Christi adopts mission parish

By Ann Bulger

God bless me and my wife, My son John and his wife, Us four—
No more. Amen.

The Church of Corpus Christi, a Roman Catholic community in St. Anthony Park, has adopted a mission parish in La Union, New Mexico. La Union is located almost on the Mexican border, 20 miles west of El Paso, Texas. Most of the parishioners in our Lady of Refuge speak only Spanish. The parish is administered by Sister Mary Ellen Quinlivan, who has the services of a priest only once a month.

The St. Pauls marched in the July 4 procession in the city park and were treated to many Mexican delicacies. They presented a framed picture of the Ice Palace to the parish, where the people are not even familiar with ice, much less a palace made from it. In turn, they were given an album of pictures of La Union. At Christmas time, the New Mexicans sent a "tejana" to Corpus Christi Church. It was a colorful wreath made of red chili peppers.

Other news of the Sisters of Mercy spends their vacations with Sister Mary Ellen. One of these was a carpenter who helped the people build and repair their homes.

The Minnesotans enjoyed visiting a farm called "The Lord's Ranch," where volunteers spend a day, a week, or a month raising crops for the poor. They look forward to another visit in the future.

Judson Reaney of St. Anthony Park has been named the new medical director of the Family Support Center at Minneapolis Children's Medical Center. The center comprises the ambulatory medical and mental health programs as well as the psychosocial services for hospitalized patients at the hospital.

Robert S. Shoffner, who grew up in St. Anthony Park, was installed as president of the National Association of Urban Bankers during its 12th annual convention in San Francisco in June. Shoffner, a Murray High School grad, worked for Chase Manhattan Bank in New York and currently is employed by First Interstate Bank of California.
