Block Nurse Program wins award and recognition

By Mary Mergenthal

Most any resident of St. Anthony Park would agree that it's great to live in a neighborhood where there are programs, services and people which are worthy of admiration and praise. Many residents are pleased to brag to friends about the "quality of life" in the area. The Bugle regularly hears from former residents who remember the community with fondness. Now residents can burst new buttons of pride and join the loud clapping which shows gratitude and appreciation. The cheering is because a neighborhood project—conceived here, experienced here and celebrated here—has received national acclaim. The cheers of homebound seniors, business women, student renters and longtime homeowners are now increased by the recognition and praise of national experts.

The Ford Foundation, a private philanthropic institution which grants funds to institutions and organizations for research, demonstration and developmental efforts, has named the St. Anthony Park Block Nurse Program as one of ten national winners in an awards program for innovations in state and local government. Out of 1,350 applicants from across the country, the Block Nurse program has been chosen to receive an $80,000 grant from the Foundation.

The award, which was announced in New York City Sept. 25, was based on several criteria including creativity in responding to social or economic needs, effectiveness and results, adaptability to other jurisdictions and diversity. Representatives from the local program made a presentation about block nursing in New York this summer and representatives of the Foundation shot a documentary film about the program here in July.

The St. Paul delegation which received the award in New York City on Sept. 25 included Mayor George Latimer; Diane Ahrens, chairperson of the County Board of Commissioners; Barb O'Grady, Director of Public Health Nursing for Ramsey County; JoAnne Rohricht, new chairperson of the Block Nurse board of directors and Marge Jamieson, director of replication of the program.

Jamieson's new title indicates how the grant money will be used. The $80,000 grant is designated for replication of this successful program in other cities and states.

The local delegation were part of a national press conference at noon Sept. 25 and were present when the documentary film about Block Nursing in St. Anthony Park was premiered. The delegation had breakfast with New York Mayor Edward Koch and was part of a seminar sponsored by the Ford Foundation to help interested persons and agencies draw on the insights of local initiators of the program.

The awards program is being administered by the John F. Kennedy School of Government of Harvard University, which is also conducting research on the process by which new policies and programs are introduced by state and local governments. The total cost of the Foundation program is $3.75 million.

The selection committee included former Michigan Governor William Milliken; Yvonne Braithwaite Burke, attorney and former member of Congress from California; Richard Capen, publisher of the Miami Herald; John Jacob, president of the National Urban League; Hernan Padilla, physician and former mayor of San Juan, Puerto Rico; Neal Peirce, syndicated columnist; Dorothy Ridings, journalist and immediate past president of the League of Women Voters of the U.S.; Max Sherman, dean of the Lyndon B. Johnson School of Public Affairs at the University of Texas and William Winter, attorney and former governor of Mississippi.

The Block Nurse Program originally was a mix of national ideas and local need. Following a meeting of the White House Conference on Aging in 1981, Park resident Ida Martinson, a registered nurse, wondered whether there might be a better way to care for the elderly than putting them in nursing homes. Marge Jamieson, another St. Anthony Park nurse, and Martinson organized the Block Nurse Program to draw on the professional and volunteer services of neighbors and family to provide care for elderly in their own homes.

They looked at federal statistics which indicate that from 20 to 40 percent of nursing home patients are not so disabled that they need to be in institutions. The St. Anthony Park program attempts to make a significant response to that problem. More than 80 elderly men and women have been served since the program's inception in 1982, about ten percent of the neighborhood population 65 years and older. Without the program, the vast majority of those people would have had to enter nursing homes. The program costs about $350 a month per client, compared to $1,200 to $1,800 per month for nursing home care.

The Block Nurse Program has served the neighborhood well because of an outstanding staff of neighborhood professionals who are willing to be involved. In addition, the program's success reflects the involvement of community volunteers, church youth groups, local Boy Scouts and general neighborhood backing and concern.

Staff in the program include three groups: block nurses, block companions and block volunteers. The block nurses

City budget cuts threaten area recreation center

By Dave Merk

Editor's note: After this article was set in type the city council voted to restore all 14 neighborhood recreation centers that Mayor Latimer had wanted closed. Latimer's concerns about the low usage rate of the centers were not answered at this time but the Parks and Recreation Department has promised to conduct a use study during the coming year. The information and feelings presented in this article still reflect the St. Anthony Park situation and will still be the basis for long-range decisions.

In 1985, St. Paul Mayor George Latimer attempted to close South St. Anthony Park Recreation Facility (SSAP)—along with numerous other St. Paul parks—as part of his proposed budget cut. After community upheaval, Latimer's proposal was defeated and SSAP remained open.

This year, Mayor Latimer has once again proposed park closings as part of his budget cut. And SSAP is one of 14 such parks which, if the proposal carries, will lose its staffing, and will lose the use of its building. The SSAP building includes basketball courts, a warming room for the ice rink and a staff office.

This year's proposal has again triggered neighbors into fighting for SSAP's existence.

On Sept. 10, community members debated the issue at the District 12 Council Meeting. It was decided that the council would draft a formal letter to Mayor Latimer in protest to his budget proposal.

Meanwhile, area resident Andrea Burmeister has started a neighborhood ad hoc group to further protest the SSAP's proposed closing. The group is distributing informational fliers, along with going door-to-door asking for people's support.

"Basically, we're organizing to assure that the facility stays open," Burmeister said, "and that it gets programming which is more appropriate to the area." Such programming would include senior citizens and possibly cooperative scheduling with Langford Park's athletics, Burmeister said. "I honestly believe there are enough children in this area to

Safety meeting

In response to neighborhood concerns about excessive speed on Raymond Avenue north of Como Ave. and the safety of the Luther Place-Grantham intersection, the District 12 Community Council will hold a town meeting on Oct. 8 at 7 p.m. in the Community Room of the St. Anthony Park Branch Library.

To address the problem of speed on Raymond Ave. the Department of Public Works (DPW) has suggested one-way designation between Scudder and Como Ave. along with an alternate grid arrangement of stop signs on Raymond Ave. ceived by the residents to be dangerous because it is wide and the traffic pattern is not well defined. DPW will present several options to redesign the intersection including a traffic circle, one-way designation and redesigning and extending the sidewalks to define the intersection.

Drawings of the proposed changes will be reviewed at the town meeting and Mr. Jim Stanke, DPW, will be available to answer questions. At the close of the discussion, the District 12 Council will make a decision regarding recommendations on both issues. Several days before the town meeting, fliers illustrating the proposed changes will be distributed to residents on streets affected by the proposals.

The District 12 Community Council is a group of 21 citizens elected to serve the District 12 area of St. Paul, including residents of north and south St. Anthony Park, commerce and industry. It is one of 17 citizen participation councils in the city.

The council meets the second Wednesday of every month. All meetings are open to the public. Check for location.

Recycling update

More than 15 tons of recyclables were picked up in St. Anthony Park on Sept. 10 when the program resumed! The response demonstrates our commitment to a community based recycling program.

Lawn signs were in place prior to recycling day thanks to 100 volunteers who agreed to place the reminders each month. Unfortunately, many of the signs were soaked in the rain and may need to be replaced. Suzanne Brust, coordinator for residents north of Energy Park Dr., can be contacted at 641-0095 with questions about sign placement or replacement. Dana Donatucci, coordinator for residents south of Energy Park Dr., can be contacted at 641-0762 about lawn signs.

The rain made the pick up difficult because of bottles and cans which had been placed in paper bags or cardboard boxes. The hauler, Super Cycle, suggests that a reusable container be used for cans and bottles to eliminate the problem.

If you have questions about recycling, call the District 12 Office at 646-8884 or contact the coordinator for your area.

Composting yard waste

Reusing yard waste instead of sending it off with the trash is another way area residents can reduce trash output. In the fall, 30 percent of the solid waste in the metropolitan region is made up of yard waste. Composting grass clippings and leaves can provide us with a valuable resource in maintaining our lawns and gardens.

The District 12 compost site will be open three weekends this fall. The site, located on Robbins between Bayless and Manvel, will be open 10 a.m.-4 p.m., Oct. 18-19, Oct. 25-26, and Nov. 1-2. Please place grass clippings and leaves in the marked location; no brush or tree branches will be accepted. All containers must be emptied and removed.

Block nurse donations

The Block Nurse Fund Drive in St. Anthony Park has received contributions from area residents and businesses providing financial support for the program in our community. Donors in the last four months include: Donna and Robert Bulger, Ann and William Bulger, Lorraine Lee, Homer and Mary Mantis, Robert and Beverly McKinnell, Mae T. Polson, L.J. and Janet Quale, Paul and Elizabeth Quie, Alma M. Roisum, Lowell and Elizabeth Satre, L.A. and Margaret Snyder, Mildred Wall, Anne B. Webb, Dean Westad, First Bank Security, and St. Paul-Midway Rotary.

New energy auditor hired

Vicki Carey Shields is the new energy auditor for District 12. Shields has 10 years of experience in the energy conservation field and is a state-certified residential energy auditor. Fall is the time to begin thinking about conservation measures and methods to transform your house into a warmer home. Call 646-8884 to schedule a $10 audit or for more information about the program.

Leadership development series

Ramsey Action Programs is offering two leadership development programs for people who want to increase their skills and potential as respected decision-makers in their communities or areas of interest. The programs are divided by skill and interest areas.

1. Community Leadership Development Series will begin Sept. 2 and end Oct. 14.

2. Issues in Applied Leadership Development begins Oct. 21 and will end Dec. 9.

Each series will cost $53.00 which includes the cost of tuition and educational materials.

For more information call Amanda Martin, program coordinator, 227-8954.

Neighborhood Watch Network

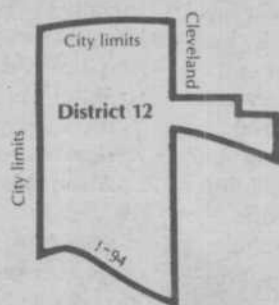

First, on a very positive note, we wish to express our gratitude to neighbors who sent generous contributions to support the publication of the Newsletter (their names are listed below). The Newsletter forms the core of our communication on matters of concern to the neighborhood, and is an essential part of our purpose. Thanks, neighbors! We are also very grateful for the support of the blockworker network and the blockworkers who distribute the Newsletter. Last month it was delivered on very short notice to publicize a meeting. Thank you, blockworkers!

On the other hand, we have not received the response we hoped for in neighbors reporting incidents and annoyances to the District 12 office. These reports are an important part of the Newsletter and of the NWN's plan to improve the situation in our neighborhood. Only by taking careful note of incidents that occur in our neighborhood can we pinpoint trouble spots and take appropriate action. While it is apparent that "things" are happening, the NWN is largely uninformed. We are therefore planning to get our future information from the police. The obvious shortcoming of this plan is that we will not have any more information than the police already have. Your suggestions and comments on this or any other topic are always welcome.

The NWN still needs your support, financial and especially otherwise. We have entertained a variety of ideas for action (see previous editions of the Newsletter and the District 12 page of the Bugle), but have not heard a consensus of support. Our neighborhood still needs ideas that can work and people to make them work. If you have some ideas or want to kick some around, call the District 12 office and let us know. If a contribution is your preference, rest assured that money not needed for the Newsletter will be needed by other NWN programs.

Thanks to the following neighbors for their contributions: G. Steinhauser, Cora A. Martinson, Mrs. Bryce Crawford, Jr., Henry Olsen, Howard E. Bergstrom, Bill K. and Mary Jane Addison, N. Horton, Sr., Paula Alner, Gladys Shoffner, Olaf Pfannkuch, Roderick Macpherson, Gordon Murdock, Diane Emerson-Nelson, Phyllis Hayes.

University Ave. development explored

District 12 physical planning committee is currently reviewing early plans for proposed development in the area north of University Ave. extending to the Burlington Northern tracks and west of Minnesota 280 to the city limits. The architectural and engineering firm of Bennett, Ringrose and Wolsfeld (BRW) is studying a plan to make the area a tax-increment district. Such a proposal would allow any increment in taxes in the area to be used to pay off the debt for public improvements.

Proposals that consider various possibilities for industrial or business development will have to relate closely to the District 12 strategy plan for the area developed in January 1985. That plan encourages redevelopment of the project area as an industrial park and insists on improvement of transportation, protection of current housing and consideration of level of truck traffic on Territorial Road. The plan also encourages landscaping and improvement of the interchange at University Ave. and Highway 280.

A representative of BRW reviewed plans and heard concerns of neighbors at a community meeting in Sept. The District 12 Community Council will continue to monitor the proposals. The tax-increment district will not be created until the consultants' work is complete and will require a vote by the City Council. The process should be finished by early spring. District 12 will hold a town meeting to review and comment on final plans provided by BRW.

Jazz and blues at Music in the Park

Jazz/blues pianist and singer, Leonard "Baby Doo" Caston will open the 1986-87 Music in the Park series with a concert Oct. 19 at 4 p.m. at St. Anthony Park United Church of Christ, 2129 Commonwealth Ave. The 69-year-old "Baby Doo" Caston is, according to St. Paul Pioneer Press jazz critic Bob Protzman, "a gem of a musician, singer, performer and personality." Although Caston has been living and performing in the Twin Cities for more than 15 years and is well known in jazz circles, his concert appearances have been infrequent. He recently performed at the Guthrie Theatre and was featured on MPR's "Live from Landmark" broadcast in May.

The six-concert Music in the Park series, now in its eighth season, is sponsored by the St. Anthony Park Arts Forum. Other concerts, featuring locally and nationally known musicians, are: Nov. 16, Philip Myers, virtuoso principal hornist with the N.Y. Philharmonic and pianist Judy Lin as guests of Twin Cities based string trio, Ensemble Capriccio; Feb. 1, Kathryn Greenbank, oboe, Robert Levine, viola, Paul Schoenfield, piano; Mar. 15 (changed from Mar. 12), Julia Bogorad, flute, Paul Schoenfield, piano, Charles Ullery, bassoon, Kathy Kienzle, harp; May 10, University of Minnesota Brass Choir in a program to help celebrate St. Anthony Park's centennial; June 7, The Kilbourn Woodwind Quartet, Season and single tickets for the Music in the Park series are available at the Bibelot Shop and Micawber's Bookstore in St. Anthony Park or may be obtained by writing to: Music in the Park Series, 2380 Hampden Ave., St. Paul, MN. 55114. The first one hundred to mail (or purchase) a season ticket order will receive a bonus in the form of Baby Doo's new recording, "The Truth About The Blues," described by Bob Protzman as "a terrific album, with Caston in great voice and his piano playing fresh, vital and original." St. Anthony Park residents in need of a ride to the concerts are encouraged to call 644-1118 for further information. A student rush price of $3.00 is available at concert time.

Neighbors

St. Anthony Park resident Clyde M. Christensen has recently published a book entitled, "E.C. Stakman, Statesman of Science." Christensen, a Regents' Professor Emeritus at the University of Minnesota, was a former student, colleague, and long-time friend of Stakman's. Stakman was an outstanding figure in the plant pathology department at the University for many years and also a resident of St. Anthony Park. He was world-renowned for his work on stem rust of wheat and the recipient of many honors and awards, including the Distinguished Service Award from the American Institute of Biological Sciences.

Glenda Eoyang, St. Anthony Park, has been selected to participate in Leadership Saint Paul, a training program for future and current community leaders, sponsored and conducted by the Saint Paul Area Chamber of Commerce. Forty-four people will be taking part in this seventh annual program. Eoyang is employed by Excel Instruction, Inc.

Decent exposure

Some things are never better left unsaid. This is true especially when the information regards the welfare of our community, in this case, community as in county.

Victory House, a home for chronic alcoholics located in St. Anthony Park, is an ongoing concern to the Bugle. Considering the size and frequency of our publication, Victory House is a topic that has received considerable coverage over the past ten months. The coverage ranged from informative to investigative. The latter raised many questions—some of which remain unanswered.

The unanswered questions relate to the management and use of Ramsey County funds funneled to Victory House, specifically the funds received prior to July of this year.

One county employee who spoke on the condition of remaining anonymous said, "Where there is smoke, there's bound to be a fire. If I were on the board (of directors of Victory House) I would call for an outside investigation by the Attorney General."

This source stated that at some point the county will call for an investigation, but not until there is some hard evidence. Hard evidence could be hard to find. The county source said that it was impossible to audit the books because they were in such bad shape.

Scott Jefferson, president of the board of directors of Victory House, stated that an audit has been completed and will be made public information. There is no legal requirement, however, for the audit to be made public as Victory House is a private corporation.

There is no doubt that Victory House is a facility that is badly needed. It needs proven, capable management. It appears that the day-to-day operation of Victory House is well on the road to recovery. But stability is another factor and without a complete board of directors it is unclear how long Don Mackey, interim director of Victory House, and his staff will be guiding Victory House down recovery road.

The Bugle is not accusing. It is questioning. Victory House, like any other corporation receiving county funds, should be open to public scrutiny of the use of those funds.

Rumor and innuendo abound. It is time to clear some very smoky air. If improprieties are found in Victory House's audit they should be investigated by the appropriate authorities. If everything is in order, making the information public will serve as polish for a badly tarnished reputation.

Home Words

The October heart

October. The word sounds like the month feels. It starts with the cloudy short o sound, then pulls its collar up around the long o and ends with the sound of cold. There are no optimistic long a sounds, like in April or May. No long i's to make it hot like July. October sounds like fall.

And with the sounds come the smells and sights that mean October. Leaves crunch underfoot on the way home from school. Suppers smell more often of beef stew and less of fruit salads. And by the time the supper dishes are cleared from the table and brought to the kitchen sink, it's dark outside.

There's something else about October. It's a time for telling stories. It comes from a long tradition of coming in from the summer, building a roaring fire and spending time together indoors. Who can resist a gripping tale well told on a chill October night?

I was thinking of this as I sat in Manning's the other day, nursing a hot chocolate. I couldn't help but eavesdrop on the conversation between two eighth grade boys in the booth behind me. Their discussion reminded me of this story that I heard a while back. Maybe you've heard it, too.

It has to do with a house in this neighborhood which I'm sure you have noticed. If you go a couple of blocks up the hill from the park, then turn left, you can see it on your right. It's set back from the street and mostly hidden behind an overgrown hedge. All the paint has long since fallen off in big flat flakes, and the bare wood is now gray from years of Minnesota weather.

But it's that window that everyone notices. You know the one. High up in the third floor, partially hidden in a tangle of overhanging oak limbs, there is a beautiful heart-shaped window that looks down on the expansive front lawn, now overgrown and thick with many years' accumulation of decaying oak leaves. It is that heart-shaped window that says there was once pride living in that house.

It was built by hand by Jacob Glee in the early 1920s. He had become a wealthy brewery-owner in Winona, but had not found time for marriage until his late forties. Then he met Evelyn Meanington, and he gave her his heart.

Jacob sold the brewery and moved his bride to Saint Paul, where he promised to give her a magnificent home and the life of a fine lady.

He drew the plans himself. He hand-picked the lumber at a mill in Canada. And the glass for the windows was specially ordered from a glassmaker in Germany who mixed silver in with the silica. Jacob went by ship himself to pick up the glass. Most of the order was stowed in the cargo hold, but one parcel he kept in his state room. It was a heart-shaped pane which would be a special gift to his adored wife, the window next to her bed, so that the last thing she saw at night and the first thing she saw in the morning was this crystalline symbol of his love for her.

The house was finished in October. To celebrate its completion, Jacob lit the first fire in the big brick fireplace. He and his wife toasted the occasion with a hot toddy. Then Jacob Glee settled back into a big velvet wing-backed chair, and died.

There was a small notice of his death in the St. Paul Pioneer Press. It was conspicuously lacking in detail, and ended by saying, "Funeral arrangements are pending."

Evelyn Meanington-Glee was not the same after that. The beautiful bride of a short time before became old almost overnight. No one ever saw her on the streets of St. Anthony Park anymore. In fact, very few people saw her at all. The Methodist minister tried to visit her a few times, but she never opened the door for him. All he saw was a hand pulling the curtains back, a wild eye looking at him from through the German window glass and the curtain fluttering closed again.

I myself saw her once. It was only shortly after I moved into the neighborhood, and before I had been told the story that I now tell you.

I had worked late and was taking a walk to get some fresh air. As I kicked through a pile of crackling oak leaves on the sidewalk, I heard a voice calling, "Jacob? Jacob?" I thought it was probably a mother calling her son in for bed. I looked up and saw a silhouette in the open front door of an old house. Against the light of the fireplace inside, I could make out the shape of a woman in a long dress, with a shawl around her shoulders, her hair wiry and uncombed. I could tell she was looking at me as she said once again, "Jacob?" Then she turned quickly and closed the door. My eyes were drawn upwards to the light shining through that heart-shaped window at the top of that old house. I couldn't take my eyes from it. Then a chill went down my neck, so I pulled up my collar and headed home.

Evelyn Meanington-Glee died a few years ago. It was during a noisy late October thunderstorm. They say that she awoke with a start, looked out through the silvery glass of that heart-shaped window and cried, "Jacob?" Then there was a blinding flash of lightning, and she died, sitting up in bed.

The reason I tell you this story now is those two eighth grade boys in Manning's the other day. One was telling the other that he was walking home past that house one rainy evening a couple of weeks ago, and he found himself looking up at that heart-shaped window just as there was a flash of lightning. And he swore to the other boy that he saw an old lady, with her hair all wild and her eyes wide and crazy, staring out of that window. But when he looked again, she was gone.

I've heard of the phenomenon before. Silver mixed in with glass can sometimes act like photographic film. So under certain conditions, if there's a bright flash of light, an image can be recorded forever in the glass. I think that Mrs. Meanington-Glee was captured forever in the heart-shaped window as she cried out one last time for her husband.

But you can decide for yourself. I guess we can expect a good thunderstorm late on the night of October 31. You can stand in front of that house and look up at that window and see what you see. But I hope you don't mind if I don't join you.

Thanks, Bugle

Dear editor:
I very much enjoy reading the Bugle each month. As an apartment dweller it makes me feel more a part of the community. Thanks to your staff for all the time and hard work I'm sure it takes.

Thanks, voters

To the editor:
Thank you to the voters in district 63 for your overwhelming support in the primary election. I have enjoyed the opportunity to meet so many of you door-to-door, listening to your concerns and sharing my ideas.
During the weeks ahead, I will continue the positive issue-oriented campaign that I have begun, and ask for your continued support in November.

To our readers:
Two misconceptions appeared near my bylines in the September issue.
I did not write the caption for the picture on page 12. I do know that my sister-in-law's name is Donna Bulger, not Donna Delger. The Bulger-Delger names have often been interchanged in the past, probably for two reasons:

- 1) The names are similar.
 - 2) Both are associated with Miller Pharmacy. Bob Bulger (Donna's husband) and Arnie Delger have worked there together for almost 40 years.
- Even more peculiar than this explainable error is the catchy little poem under my name on page 15. I don't know where it came from or what connection it has with the article on the mission. Our son John, who has spent the last three years studying baboons in the swamps of Botswana, will be surprised to learn of the existence of a wife! Our seven other offspring may feel deprived of God's blessings, as well as ours. I would hope that God, in His infinite goodness, would have blessings enough for all of them, their spouses, and their children—a total of 20 at the present time—rather than merely "us four, no more." Amen!

Ann Bulger

Editor's note: In the last issue of the Bugle a small poem appeared at the beginning of an article written by Ann Bulger. The poem was not intended for Bulger's article but rather it was meant to lead an article written by Alice Duggan. The Bugle editorial staff apologizes to all involved.

life in the area, is just beginning. Thanks to the energy and insight of local planners and the Ford Foundation grant the program will now have an impact on communities all over the United States and will lead to better resources for the elderly in many states.

Breck Woods—home of trees and trolleys

By John G. Shepard

Taking a walk through a woods so thick that you can't see even the trace of a house may seem like an odd way to celebrate the history of an eminently civilized community. Indeed, Breck Woods—a steep series of ravines with a lush understory and a canopy of towering hardwoods just north of Luther Northwestern Seminary (formerly Breck School)—may well be the least civilized corner of the neighborhood. But even if there were nothing more to recommend it, its wildness alone makes Breck Woods a good place to begin an exploration of St. Anthony

Street and then crossed College Park to track what has since become Hythe. As it proceeded through what is now the University Grove, an area where wildflowers once grew in abundance, this trail intersected the path of another future transportation route, one whose tracks have come and gone leaving only a trail of weathered railroad ties through the heart of Breck Woods.

The inter-campus trolley, as it became known, was built in 1914 to replace the costly use of horse-teams in the delivery of coal and building materials from the main campus of the University of Minnesota to the "Farm School." The idea of were offended by the idea of a commonplace street car within the sacred bounds of our campus." However, there were enough passengers apparently able to muster up the humility required to ride the trolley that cars leaving both terminals every 15 minutes were kept busy from 7:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. And by 1941 the inter-campus car was estimated to be carrying an average of 2413 passengers daily, a good many of whom were still paying the same $.04 fare that was the going rate in 1916.

From near the front of Coffey Hall on the St. Paul Campus, the trolley followed and Vincent at the bottom of a forgotten flight of stairs whose highly polished iron banister suggests decades of trolley-stop antics.

In 1954 the intercampus streetcar still could be seen heading under the Cleveland Ave. bridge on its way to the St. Paul campus of the University of Minnesota.

But find a former rider of the inter-campus car and ask what he or she remembers best about it—chances are good you'll get a spontaneous one-word response: "Skipper." "Skipper" Spencer, conductor on the trolley for what must have been a long time—no one can quite remember just how long, apparently touched everyone whose ticket crossed his path with a steady and pervasive warmth. He remembered people's names and used them; he had a good listening ear. "He was just jolly and friendly and nice and if someone didn't have their ticket that day he would let them go free," recalls Josephine Delger, a University alumna who started using the trolley in 1932.

But the days of Skipper's hospitality came to an end with the trolley's final run on June 18, 1954. A movie-camera made a record of that last ride and the Minnesota Daily marked the occasion with a story accompanied by a photograph of one of the old cars being burned, "to symbolize their passing." The Gopher had long since reassessed its cool reception to the idea of a "commonplace street car within the sacred bounds of our campus," concluding that, "Contrary to the general belief of those who opposed it, it has not proved an eyesore, nor has its presence in any way disturbed the equanimity of our community."

If you get the chance this fall, take a half-hour to stroll through Breck Woods down the line of worn old railroad ties beneath the changing leaves. It, too, is a setting whose equanimity has been left largely undisturbed.

It took major work to build the roadbed for the intercampus trolley in 1914. This photo is taken facing west, with the Minneapolis skyline vaguely in sight in the background.

Park's past.

There are several winding paths which lead through the gooseberry and honeysuckle bushes among the oaks and the plentiful ash into the shade of some huge cottonwoods, whose massive trunks with their gnarled bark are each too big for a single pair of arms to hug. The terrain slopes dramatically from the top of an ancient mound of glacial till down several gullies to the eastern edge of the Mississippi River's outwash plain. Breck Woods is an undisturbed remnant of the same densely wooded rolling landscape which over 100 years ago drew the first families to this area.

At that time, except for the Minneapolis-St. Paul railroad line which ran where the tracks are today beneath the Raymond Avenue bridge, the only other mark of human activity in St. Anthony Park was a foot-trail used by the Dakota Indians of Lake Calhoun for their annual excursions to harvest wild rice at Forest Lake. This trail wandered northward, following the general route of Chelmsford using the trolley to provide passenger service between the two campuses was apparently a secondary consideration, but it proved to be a good one. For 40 years the inter-campus car carried University students and staff in large numbers between its two terminals.

Relying on horse teams, steam-shovels and a makeshift narrow-gauge railroad used to haul dirt, workers labored to build a steady grade for the trolley over the area's hilly terrain—the least passable section of which was through Breck Woods. Today a footpath west of Coffman Street and just south of the University of Minnesota golf course follows the old road-bed of the trolley into this pocket of urban wilderness. The trail enters a valley cut through the top of a hill and then traverses a plunging ravine on a land-bridge of dirt.

According to the 1916 Gopher yearbook, "The advent of a street car line connecting the two campuses was not enthusiastically welcomed by many, whose aesthetic senses its overhead wire east on Buford to what was later to become Gortner. Then its bumpy track swung northward to the southern edge of the University's agricultural fields where it turned again to begin its westward trek. The car crossed under Cleveland—where one former passenger remembers it always clanged its bell—and rumbled through Breck Woods to Eustis, then turned south to merge with the Como and Oak-Harriet street-car lines on Como Avenue. From here the trolley traveled down Como to 15th Street then turned left to follow 15th onto the Minneapolis campus and unloaded its passengers in front of Jones Hall.

For those not traveling the full distance, intermediate stops included one near University High School in Dinkytown—a school attended by many St. Anthony Park youth—and another at Eustis and Como. A third can be found at the edge of Breck Woods just north of Folwell

The railroad ties from the old trolley track are still evident in Breck Woods and make a perfect setting for an autumn stroll.

Area resident makes gardening a social service

Lee Engele's gardening pastime provides food for others and food for thought.

By Joel Schurke

Disappointment was evident in her voice. Lee Engele surveyed the frostbitten remains of her well-tended garden as she spoke proudly of how green it was just days before.

"You should have seen it last Saturday. I pulled out five grocery bags of tomatoes, cucumbers and zucchini," Engele said.

Engele has pulled a lot of produce from her garden plot in St. Anthony Park over the last six years. Most of the produce she gives to area food shelves and low income families in her neighborhood.

As a youth growing up in West St. Paul, Engele disdained the idea of living on a farm. Now 31, Engele has eight years of farming experience. She co-operated a truck farm that supplied organically-grown produce to Twin Cities food coops. It was an experience that became an addiction.

Returning to city life six years ago, Engele located in an apartment building with a parking lot but no garden plot. Opportunity happened to live next door. Engele introduced herself and received permission to till the long-since neglected garden plot in the neighbor's backyard. A couple of truckfuls of garbage later, Engele resurrected a garden plot.

"The first year I grew the garden I was unemployed. I literally lived off the food in the garden," Engele said. "My income was so low that I qualified for the food give aways at Merriam Park."

At Merriam Park and in the neighboring homes Engele witnessed a need that she took action to meet. With produce from her high-yield garden, Engele began regularly supplying low income neighbors. With yearly expansions of the garden Engele was able to supply Merriam Park Food Shelf and the Dorothy Day Center with fresh produce.

Roberta Reberts coordinates the Merriam Park Food Shelf. She considers Engele's donations to be "substantial" especially considering the size of the garden.

Reberts has witnessed an alarming increase in the use of the food shelf by single mothers and families. Reberts is concerned that many children are not receiving well-balanced diets. This year 133 families received food during the month of July compared to 90 families last year in July. Reberts said that the food shelf is in need of fresh food items like ingredients for casseroles and the makings for sandwiches and salads. Reberts observes a spectrum of people utilizing the food shelf, but, she said, most make ends barely touch on less than $800 a month. Merriam Park Food

Shelf has refrigeration and freezer storage and is in need of food donations.

The garden serves as a catalyst for community cooperation as well. Engele said area neighbors are very protective of the unfenced garden. Watermelon vines took claim of the sidewalk and soon plump, ripe watermelons appeared. These sun-baked beauties caught the covetous eye of a few passers-by. Neighbors were quick to call Engele and inform her of these would-be snatchers. "The neighbors respect it," Engele said of her garden. There haven't been any problems of produce pilfering and Engele attributes that to the area's sense of community.

Engele has become somewhat of a local culinary legend with her Auntie Lee's Homemade Pickles. She claims to have spent her last $5 when she was unemployed to buy the ingredients necessary for the magical pickles. She felt the neighbors kind of expected the pickles and she didn't want to let them down.

Engele hopes to intensify her efforts to help people through gardening. "Next year I want to help poor people plant gardens. If we could get people to donate plants and seeds I think it would work," Engele said. "If you're unemployed and don't have anything to do, tending a garden is perfect. I spend hours out here weeding and planting. It's so peaceful."

People matter to Harknesses

By Matt Larkin

After 31 years of working "seven days and six nights a week," as the state director of 4-H programs, you'd think Leonard Harkness and his wife Maxine would be ready for a rather sedentary retirement. With the last two of their five children married this past summer, the pair would be left alone to enjoy their golden years.

But a look at their calendar reveals activity. Leonard still has 4-H trustee meetings and Rotary meetings, is working on a history of Minnesota 4-H programs for the state historical society, is chair of a rural ministry committee for his church and still gets involved with the State Fair each year. Maxine has shopping to do for a "loaves and fishes" program, is chair of their church's social concerns committee and serves as

Leonard and Maxine Harkness review a lifetime of contact with people from many countries as they look over a scrapbook in which they save signatures of 4-H and other friends from all over the world.

Candidates speak at October meeting

What do you think the major issues are in our Senate district? If elected, what would you like to work on? What per cent of the state taxes paid in the metropolitan area are returned to it in money or services from the state? How do you feel about the cost of remodeling the Capitol approach area? How do you think costs in state government can be contained?

Bob Fletcher and John Marty, candidates for the state Senate from District 63, will speak at the October dinner meeting. Each will make an opening statement about his favorite issues. Written questions will then be accepted from the floor with both candidates having an opportunity to respond. To close, each will be asked to make a brief closing statement. Bring your questions!

Bob Fletcher

The October meeting of the St. Anthony Park Association will be held on Oct. 14 at the United Church of Christ on Chelmsford and Commonwealth. Doors will open at 5:50 p.m. and dinner, which will cost $4.25, will be served at 6 p.m. The program begins at 7 p.m. Child care is provided. Rebekah Mergenthal will be phoning members for reservations for the dinner. Please have the number of people attending ready when she calls. If you have additions or cancellations please call Bill and Mary Jane Addison at 646-8572. If you are unable to attend and do not cancel, you will be charged for the dinner. Nonmembers are welcome to attend and should contact the Addisons for reservations.

The meeting is being cosponsored by the St. Anthony Park Girl Scouts and the League of Women Voters.

registrar and treasurer of Red Robin Nursery School. Both also counted votes during the recent primaries.

Harkness was 32 when he became state director of 4-H—the youngest in the nation to hold that position. When he retired, 31 years later, he had held the position longer than anyone else in the country. At this year's State Fair, a quote of his was enlarged and placed in Harkness Hall: "There is no more important challenge on any agenda than to prepare our young people to accept responsibility for the world they will inherit. This is the challenge of Minnesota 4-H."

Leonard and Maxine continue to find challenges themselves. Besides all the projects they're involved in, they're leaving soon for a cultural tour of eastern Canada, the Fiji Islands and Australia. They're going with a group of past 4-Hers from three countries. Thirty-one years of "seven days and six nights a week" certainly hasn't slowed them down.

The late Paul Cashman, past Vice-President of student affairs at the University of Minnesota predicted this activity in a letter to Leonard at his retirement in 1981: "We know you will continue to do well because it is a life-long habit of yours," he wrote. The Harknesses remain active because as Leonard says, "I have a great concern for people. I care about people, their lives are of great interest to me."

That interest showed up early in his career. As a 4-H extension agent for Blue Earth county in the late 1940s, Leonard would be quizzed by Maxine on the way to club meetings until he learned the names of everyone who would be there. When he arrived he just had to match the names to the faces. He learned a lot of family histories that way as well.

After being appointed state director of 4-H in 1949, Harkness had a longer list of names to learn, so he found a new way to do it. At the State Fair each year, he would stand at the entrance to the 4-H building and, as Jim Lewis recalls, "Leonard met every single person that came into that building." Lewis, who now works for 4-H through the University of Minnesota extension office, first met Harkness as a twelve-year-old 4-Her at the State Fair. When he returned the next year, Harkness greeted him by name. "He knows the first and last name of every other person in the state," says Lewis.

On September 4, 1982, Maxine brought her husband back to the 4-H building. She told him it was to see the final performance of a theatre group with which she'd been working. When they arrived, Senator Dave Durenburger, State Fair president Logan Skow and Byron Schneider, the new state director, were also there. That was when Leonard discovered he was the only show that night. The building was named "Harkness Hall" in his honor.

The honor was given to him not simply for what he achieved, but for what he allowed other people to achieve. "I was an enabler," says Harkness. He saw 4-H as a means "...for youngsters to develop life skills, for learning how to learn, how to ask questions and get information." This includes anything from "preparing a meal to personal management," says Maxine. Calling government efforts to cut funds for 4-H and other programs "shortsighted" in this time of "latch-key" living, Harkness says, "There has never been a time when youngsters need these skills more."

Harkness saw his job as an opportunity to help youngsters develop these skills. One program he started, with funds from Folger's coffee, was a state-wide health education workshop which was held each summer at Itasca State Park. Teen leaders from all types of youth groups (not just 4-H) came so they could go back home and teach their peers. Another program, inspired by Sue Fisher of the 4-H office (she is now state director of 4-H in Florida), is a set of theatre workshops that Harkness claims is among the best of its kind in the country. Workshops on bicycle safety, entomology (study of insects), landscaping

55-Alive

A 55-Alive Mature Driving Refresher Course has been scheduled for Oct. 21-22, 10 a.m.-3 p.m., at the Falcon Heights City Hall, 2077 West Larpenteur. The course, which is sponsored by the American Association of Retired Persons is open to all persons 55 years of age or older. Upon completion of the eight hours of retraining, a certificate is issued which makes persons 65 or older eligible for a discount on their car insurance premiums. Cost is $7 per person. To register, call Falcon Heights City Hall, 644-5050.

Rumpelstiltskin

The folk tale, "Rumpelstiltskin", will be presented by storyteller, Sandy-Meuwissen, at the St. Anthony Park Branch Library, 2245 Como Ave., Sept. 30 at 4 p.m. The program is sponsored by the Friends of the St. Paul Library.

Writers

St. Anthony Park Writers Group is continuing its tradition of offering a writers' workshop for amateur and beginner writers. The workshop will move from its traditional first Thursday night time slot. The writers will now meet on the third Tuesday of each month. The first meeting is Oct. 21. See Bugle calendar monthly for time and place.

Bus for seniors

At last there is a senior shuttle bus for residents of Lauderdale and Falcon Heights. For at least 11 years the North Suburban Senior Council has recognized transportation as a need and has sought to meet the need. The North Suburban Kiwanis organization has donated a van to the council. Good Neighbor, in collaboration with the Fairview Senior Program, is sponsoring the transportation service by providing operating funds for the first year of service. In addition, major support comes from the Knights of Columbus of Roseville.

The van will seat 11 passengers and has one wheelchair tie-down, and extended roof and a hydraulic lift. Initially, the van will make daily runs to and from the Senior Center and provide group grocery trips.

The new van will be unveiled and celebrated Sept. 29 at 1 p.m. in front of the Fairview Community School Center, 1910 W. Co. Rd. B. Refreshments will be served in the Senior Center following the unveiling.

Special for kids

The Children's Museum at Bandana Square features a variety of activities for children during October on subjects ranging from dinosaurs to marionettes to singing to castles. Of course, there are also Halloween specials planned around that holiday. Movies are shown every Friday at 7 p.m. Call 644-5305 for information.

warrant (the park)."

If SSAP were to have its building closed, and its staff dissolved, it would remain what is called a "passive park." This would mean that the building's bathrooms would remain accessible, the tennis courts would stay open and the grass would be cut.

Another area resident, Don Martin, doesn't like the idea of a passive park. Martin has coached baseball at Langford Park and keeps a close tab on events at both locations.

"I think this time it (SSAP) will close," Martin said. "I just don't think there's enough overall perceived need for the park. But I don't even want it passive. I'd rather see them sell it."

But along with this rather negative view of the situation, Martin firmly believes that SSAP could stay open if a cooperative effort could be made with Langford Park.

"There are enough kids to have leagues in both places," Martin said. Using both ice rinks in the winter would ease the crowding at Langford's heavily used rink. To create such a situation would call for organization and a dynamic coordinator, he said.

Switching gears, recent developments at Langford might just prove to be SSAP's stroke of luck. After long planning sessions, a design for renovation of the Langford facility has finally been passed. Construction should begin this fall, leaving the facility largely unusable for its sports program.

The renovation will include enlarging the existing gymnasium and office space and will cost an estimated $585,472, according to St. Paul city architect John Wirka. The completion date is set for next July.

The renovation may seem expensive, but it's been a long time coming, said John Magnuson, chairperson of the Langford Park Building Committee. "Our community has one of the highest (park) usage rates in the area, but when you compare our facility with others, [Langford's facilities] are not very good. So, yes, there's a definite need for renovation."

Combine Langford's high usage rate with the virtual closing of the facility for renovation, and the equation justifying the need for SSAP is set.

So, in this year's battle to keep SSAP open, community activism, along with a set of lucky circumstances, could mean that the SSAP Recreation Facility will remain as is.

Dear Friends in the Park,

Over the years we have been very fortunate to have a special group of elected officials representing us in all levels of government. While we may not all agree on all of the issues, our representatives have been informative and responsive to our concerns. They have been persons of quality and integrity.

One of those has been Bob Fletcher. I have known Bob both as a council member and friend, and have watched him work with many of us in the community as well as others throughout the city. His talents as a policy maker are many; however, a few stand out.

COMMITMENT TO GOOD GOVERNMENT AND AN OPEN PROCESS

Bob's first priority is the integrity of the decision making process. He encourages citizen participation, utilizes it in his deliberations and works to make the process open and accountable. Bob is not a one-issue candidate. He believes that a representative should reflect the ideas and interests of his constituents in every respect. With this philosophy in mind, Bob operates in a very non-partisan fashion, working closely with neighborhood residents for the goals of the community rather than a few special-interest groups.

RESPONSIVENESS

Bob Fletcher works diligently to meet the needs of his constituents. Whether it be information or advocacy, Bob has been there to help our community. On issues such as the University busway, Langford Park improvements, assessments, neighborhood safety, development projects, traffic concerns, Energy Park, or just getting road barricades for our festival on a minute's notice, Bob has responded. But in addition to responding, Bob has earnestly listened and evaluated the information we have for him. Our ideas have impact.

EFFECTIVE LEADERSHIP

Bob knows how to bring people together to build partnerships, and compromise when necessary. He is a facilitator of communication and believes a true exchange of information will bring about consensus. On nearly every divisive issue before the city, Bob took the lead to bring people together. Whether affirmative action, Como roadways, city financing or budget cuts, Bob brought about an effective resolution. In fact, he authored and successfully passed nearly every piece of important compromise legislation before the council.

FORESIGHT

Mayor Latimer once said that every successful elected official must have a vision for the future. Like Latimer, Bob Fletcher has vision and foresight. Bob's vision is founded on his insight into people and their needs. He works daily with people from all lots in life. He knows what our society is, and what it needs to really move forward. His goal is simple—to improve the quality of life for all of us through good government—government which is responsive to our concerns.

Bob's life has been one of public service and commitment to community progress. His dedication to service will assure us of the quality representation that we've come to appreciate.

and vegetable growing were among the many programs started. A number of the vegetable growers from 4-H have since built commercial operations.

Harkness is most famous for the international programs he started. He co-founded (along with the leader of 4-H in Norway) the Minnesota-Norway 4-H exchange program, the only program of its kind in the nation. It allows state 4-Hers to travel to Norway to learn their culture and to act as hosts in alternate years. With the help of David Pace (who is still with the state 4-H office) and others, Harkness also developed an exchange program with Japan. Harkness has also brought large groups of youngsters into the state from New Zealand and Australia, among other places. The Harknesses, through their involvement in 4-H, have hosted overnight guests from 59 nations in their own home, and have had guests for dinner from several others, including the Soviet Union.

Harkness, who served on a World War II naval bomb patrol felt a personal need to develop the international programs. "I had an interest in building relationships with people. After the terrible experience of World War II, what better way to heal the wounds than to understand and care about each other."

It was because Maxine understood her husband's concern for people and his commitment to 4-H that she was able to put up with the long hours he worked. She was also rather busy herself. Along with their raising of five children, she co-founded the Falcon Heights 4-H club with next-door neighbor Eunice Hallinger, and directed it for twenty-five years. Out of the club grew one of the Harkness's most famous 4-H events: the annual pie social. Falcon Heights 4-Hers made three pies each (without help) for the event which one year attracted 343 people to Harkness's backyard. "It was a wonderful thing for the neighborhood and for drawing people together," she says. As wouldn't want to have missed being part of it."

Harkness also had a staff that was very much a part of the program. "A lot of the ideas for new programs came from people on the staff," he says. "I think we did a good job in selecting people to begin with, and we gave them the support and responsibility they needed to grow." Several from his staff have gone on to hold major positions in 4-H. Norman Mindrum and Robert Pinches now work for 4-H on the national level. Several other of

for the making of the pies; "The boys often outshone the girls," she says.

Maxine, who is quite a pie baker herself, also is noted for her ability to prepare a meal at a moment's notice. This she did whenever Leonard called at the last minute to tell her a few 4-H friends were coming home with him for dinner. "I was involved and I enjoyed being involved and I pulled my weight," she says. "It was a wonderful career in that it allowed me to benefit from the friendships from all people....I

his staff members now hold top positions in Minnesota and other states.

Harkness also had the support of a number of major donors who were thankful to be allowed to help the program. Harkness was always grateful for this. As Juanita Reed of the University 4-H staff says, "He would write a thank-you letter for a thank-you letter. He was the kind of person that was always really grateful for the support for the

The Terado Corporation celebrates its 45th year of operation this year. The company located just north of the Raymond Ave. bridge was started in 1941 by three brothers Ted, Ralph and Don Monson. The name is a statement of their familial solidarity. The first two letters of their first names form Terado. The trio of brothers, one an octogenarian, remain involved, in the company they started, as consultants.

Terado manufactures stand-by power systems that convert DC to AC current. It has a national sales force that services electronic equipment distributors as well as some direct industrial end users.

Reed also remembers his ability to support troubled youngsters: "If he saw misbehavior by a youngster at a state event, he would give direct counselling and make a disruptive experience a positive learning thing. He could do it so that they could part being friends."

Jim Lewis also remembers his concern for youngsters and all people, "Leonard is one of the most giving, generous and gracious people I know. He has a concern for people that infiltrates his life." Maxine, who saw herself in a "supportive" role to her husband says, "Leonard loves people and people know that and that is what 4-H is all about."

THE LITTLE BANK THAT'S BIG ENOUGH JUST KEEPS GETTING BETTER

St. Anthony Park State Bank is proud to announce that we will be moving to our new building located at 2265 Como Avenue (across from our current Main Bank Building) in November. Our Grand Opening Celebration will begin on Friday, November 28th and end on Sunday, December 7th with our traditional Holiday Open House. Details regarding registration for free prizes, free photographs of your family, other gifts and tours will be included in the November issue of the Park Bugle.

St. Anthony Park State Bank will occupy the entire first floor and the majority of the lower level in the new St. Anthony Park Bank Building. Located on the main floor will be Customer Service, Consumer, Commercial, and Real Estate Loans, Tellers and Park Insurance. The lower level will house our Accounting offices, Safe Deposit Boxes and a community room which will be available for use by community groups. An elevator provides easy access to all floors of the building. Off-street parking will be available immediately behind the building. In addition, we will be extending our lobby hours to better serve your banking needs.

As our new building reaches completion, we would like to take this opportunity to thank the St. Anthony Park community for your patience and support during our construction period. We are excited about our new building and look forward to seeing you at our Grand Opening Celebration!

Abuse—a family crime that concerns all of us

By Colette Snyder

Each year more than 2000 children in the U.S. die from child abuse. More than one million survive to adulthood, damaged physically and emotionally, often passing on the damage to their children.

Ramsey County in 1985 had 644 substantiated cases of child abuse.

There is agreement among professionals (police and social workers) that awareness of the problem and individuals' willingness to become involved in prevention are essential if the cycle of child abuse is to be broken.

A child protection worker for the county says, "Denial is common. People need to be more aware of [the problem of] abuse."

Ramsey County Child Abuse Coordinator, Mary Morehouse, recommends that parents educate their children about abuse from an early age to promote self-preservation. She adds, "We need to motivate people toward involvement and to support each other as neighbors. There should be agreement among neighbors about safety rules for children, and that, as neighbors, we will protect each others' children."

Children's Home Society of Minnesota (CHS) has four programs that work specifically to prevent child abuse. Neighbors can become involved in child abuse prevention by volunteering time to help these programs work.

Karla Williams of CHS emphasizes that there are many ways for volunteers to help, with or without direct client contact. "We need reception help at the front desk during evening meetings," she says. "It's too expensive to have a social worker answer the phones." Paperwork and babysitting during parent education sessions are jobs that need to be done. Williams stresses that whether a volunteer works two hours a week in the office or extends the commitment to foster parenting or crisis nursery home care, the help is needed and it does help prevent child abuse.

"In every child who is born, under no matter what circumstances, and of no matter what parents, the potentiality of the human race is born again; and in him, too, once more, and of each of us, our terrific responsibility towards human life; towards the utmost idea of goodness, of the horror of error..."

These words, of James Agee's, issue to each of us a call to action in the prevention of child abuse. It would be an error to ignore the call.

St. Anthony has uplifting event

The staff and students at St. Anthony Park Elementary held an all-school balloon launch in Langford Park on Sept. 9. Balloons are the symbol of the school's plan for increased effectiveness in the 1986-87 school year, inspiring students and staff to achieve wishes and goals and to realize individual potential. Balloons have been incorporated into many classroom activities, as well as providing a school decorating theme.

Another goal of the staff this year is to establish school spirit and school identity among the many new students. The all-school launch on the playground will promote feelings of unity and belonging to the school community for the entire student body.

Soccer begins at Murray Junior High

Soccer will be a new junior high sport this fall in the St. Paul schools. Both boys and girls will compete in the new league. At Murray Magnet Junior High, John Rein will coach the girls' team, and John Olson, the boys' team. Both teams will open the season against Washington on Sept. 26.

To make room for the new sport, girls' volleyball was moved to winter, and boys' cross-country was dropped. Junior high boys and girls who want to run on a cross-country team may join the squad at the senior high school in their attendance area.

Volunteers are needed at Murray both on a weekly basis and for a one-shot appearance. Tutors are wanted in all subjects, but particularly in math. In the study skills lab, volunteers may work one-on-one with students who are striving to improve their reading and comprehension. Others may share a hobby, a skill, slides from a trip, or knowledge gained through their occupation with a class. To become a part of the Murray Volunteer Program, call Suzie Tjernlund or Ann Bulger at the school, 645-9474.

Community First ... The United Way

The First Banks are committed to being leaders — leaders in financial services, leaders in customer service. And, we are committed to leadership in service to the community.

Community support is certainly a year-round priority, but it takes on special significance during United Way time. Last year the First Banks, through the corporation and through individual employees, contributed almost $2 million to the United Way.

Yet, financial commitment tells only part of the story. Equally significant are the thousands of hours of volunteer time and talent given by our employees.

Employee contributions show that "people helping people" is more than a slogan. Their contributions — your contributions — mean that United Way can continue to make our community a better place to live, to work and to play.

A new look at an old idea

Years ago insurance companies began offering a new and simple savings product: annuities. In exchange for a single lump-sum payment, people received guaranteed income for a specific period of time.

Today, as interest rates become more competitive, single-premium annuities are again finding favor as a savings tool. The benefits remain the same: performance, flexibility, tax-deferral and security.

The First Banks offer a single-premium deferred annuity through FBS Insurance. With it, you can decide whether you want to build a nest egg for retirement, give yourself steady supplement income or save for your child's education.

To help decide if annuities fit into your financial future, talk to your personal banker, who can discuss a variety of financial options. You can also call First FinancialLine, the telephone information service of the First Banks, at 370-3900, 8 a.m. to 8 p.m., Monday through Friday. Or you can contact an FBS Insurance annuities specialist at 343-1634.

A race to watch

The First Banks are a major sponsor of the Twin Cities Marathon, known as "the most beautiful Urban marathon in the country." Although the limit of 6,000 runners has been reached for the Sunday, Oct. 12 race, there is plenty of room for race watching.

The course travels from the starting line in downtown Minneapolis, through Kenwood Hills, along lakes Calhoun and Harriet, down Minnehaha Parkway to West River Road, over the Franklin Avenue bridge and east on Summit Avenue. The finish line is at the State Capitol.

Because the race serves as the United States Marathon Championships and the U.S. Trials for the 1987 World Championships in Rome, the Marathon has lots of additional interest and competition. More than 200,000 people are expected to turn out at points along the course. Maybe you'll be one of them.

Old Timers

The Old Timers group, composed of alumni from Baker School and St. Cecilia's School, is now ten years old. Over the years a handful of people have kept the group going. Now women and men will meet together in order to have a more successful group. People who attended those schools prior to 1936 are urged to join the group at monthly breakfast meetings the first Tuesday of each month at the Professor's restaurant in Har Mar mall at 9 a.m.

The group is also looking for the names of people who attended Baker School from 1884 through 1936. Call Bob

Paris in the Cities

Paris designer fashions from the past century are the focus of an exhibition which opens in the Goldstein Gallery on the University of Minnesota's St. Paul campus Oct. 19 and runs through Jan. 9. The show not only celebrates one hundred years of superb examples of Paris fashion but also marks the tenth anniversary of the Goldstein Gallery. The exhibition includes works by designers Charles Frederick Worth, Paul Poiret, "Coco" Chanel, Christian Dior, Christobal Balenciaga, Andre Courreges, Elsa Schiaparelli, Yves St. Laurent and many others.

The opening reception is Oct. 19, 2-5 p.m. Regular hours are 8:30 a.m.-4:30 p.m. Monday-Friday, Thursday evenings to 8:30 p.m. and 1:30-4:30 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. Call 624-7434 for more information.

Genetics and childbirth

Falcon Heights Learning Center and the Community Services Department of the University of Minnesota Hospital and Clinic are cosponsoring a session on genetic factors in childbirth Oct. 9, 7-9 p.m., at Fairview Community School Center. Cost is $3 per person. Speakers will be specialists in genetic counseling, maternal/fetal medicine and obstetrics/gynecology from the University of Minnesota.

Langford Park

Langford's Booster Club is holding its annual membership meeting Oct. 15 at 7:30 p.m. at Mannings on Como Ave. in Minneapolis. Winter sports registration is Oct. 7 and Oct. 8 from 6-9 p.m. at St. Anthony Park School. The halloween program will be held Oct. 31, 4 p.m., at St. Anthony Park School. This is a free event open to kids 6th grade and under.

Plump pumpkins

The St. Anthony Park School Association is sponsoring a pumpkin sale and benefit for the school library. It will be held at the school Oct. 23 from 7-9 p.m. and will include a bake sale and raffle with a drawing at 7:30 p.m. Everyone in the community is invited to this fun family night. Pumpkins will also be sold the next day, Friday afternoon, 4-7 p.m. and Saturday morning 9 a.m.-1 p.m. Call Ceece Stickles for more information at 645-1594.

Reading program succeeds

More than 435 children who love to read or be read to came to the St. Anthony Park Branch Library this summer to "Be a Library Kid." This was the theme of the summer reading program for all Metropolitan Public Libraries.

Artwork by Minnesota author and illustrator, Nancy Carlson, and a giant game board helped to inspire 236 children to read ten books in eight weeks. Neighborhood volunteers Michelle Christianson, Joan Ennis and Alyce Holmes assisted as 1,655 children and parents attended six free and excellent programs provided by Friends of the St. Paul Public Library and Metropolitan Library Service Agency. Ten lucky children won gift certificates to Micawber's Book Store given by the St. Anthony Park Library Association and 21 more won paperback books provided by the Friends.

French classes

Registration for fall French language classes is taking place now at Alliance Francaise of the Twin Cities, 821 Raymond Ave. There will be Saturday classes for children ages five through 14 and daytime and evening classes for adults from beginning through advanced levels. In addition special courses in French cinema and theater and business French classes will be offered. Call 644-5769 for information.

Obituary

Harry J. Peterson

Harry J. Peterson, a pioneer of the cooperative movement in Minnesota and a state leader of the Future Farmers of America, died Sept. 11. A St. Anthony Park resident, Peterson graduated from the University of Minnesota's College of Agriculture in 1934. He taught in high schools, served as assistant supervisor of agricultural education in the Minnesota State Department of Education and was the first executive secretary of the Minnesota FFA.

He was the founder of October Cooperative Month and organized the first Minnesota Cooperative Conference for Youth in 1955.

Those conferences have continued annually, serving over 9000 youth.

Peterson, who was 79, also worked for Midland Cooperatives and organized the Minnesota Association of Cooperatives as well as working at Twin City Co-ops Credit Union until his retirement.

He is survived by his wife, Eunice, a son and two daughters as well as other relatives.

All aboard!

Skipper Spencer greeted University students and staff for many years aboard the intercampus trolley which used to run through Breck Woods. He'd surely want readers to find out more about the trolley, and the woods, in the first of our historical features in honor of the St. Anthony Park centennial. See page 6 for more about Skipper.
