

Falcon Heights fire may net $100,000 damage

By Mary Mergenthal

The Falcon Heights Community Park building near the corner of Cleveland and Roselawn suffered extensive internal damage in a fire Sun., Sept. 11. Falcon Heights firefighters got the call about the fire about 2:30 a.m. By Monday morning official determination of arson had been made.

The total extent of loss has still not been determined though current estimates range between $60,000 and $100,000, the amount depending largely on the amount of damaged sustained by the concrete foundation.

The fire is still under investigation and the Minnesota Arson Reward Project (645-8882) has offered up to a $1,000 reward for information leading to apprehension and arrest of individuals responsible for the fire.

Carol Kreigler, Falcon Heights recreation director, says, "It's really frustrating when we'd been making a concentrated effort to make improvements. We've had lots of enthusiastic and interested people helping make those improvements. It's hard to fathom that this has happened to us."

Area residents to be relocated

By Kathy Malchow

A proposed expansion of Twin City Testing, the rapidly growing environmental testing company at 662 Cromwell Ave., would force at least 30 St. Anthony Park residents to relocate.

Twin City Testing has been a fixture at its current address for several decades, but it's only within the past few years, because of general concern with environmental issues, that it has grown immensely. The company has asked the city of St. Paul to be allowed to expand its present building and construct an additional 100,000 square feet of office space and testing labs extending two blocks north. It hopes to hire at least 300 new employees in the next few years. Thus, the St. Paul Port Authority (chief planner and developer for the Westgate project), is asking the city for permission to expand Westgate's tax increment district to include the two blocks needed by Twin City Testing. If approved, four apartments buildings with a total of 21 units, seven homes and four small businesses will be razed.

The residents are sure the project will be approved, yet many don't want to move. Roberta Reberts, a renter in the neighborhood for 14 years, says she and her neighbors like the area because it's affordable, safe, convenient and quiet on evenings and weekends. "Many of us have lived here for years. We object to having to move, but we're not going to fight it tooth and nail. We've seen this coming for a while.

"Twin City Testing is dangling those 300 new jobs like a carrot in front of the city. From what we've heard, most of the jobs opening up would not be available to us because they would require a technical specialty—something most of us don't have. But the thing that bothers us the most is that we haven't had any official communication from the city yet."

The residents were invited to attend the St. Anthony Park Community Council committee meeting earlier this month at which Chuck Towle from the Port Authority outlined Twin City Testing's plans. He told the residents about relocation benefits they could expect and explained that, if approved by the city, scheduling of this project would not require that they move until next spring.

Several residents asked questions but seemed satisfied with the answers. No one voiced objections. The Community Council approved the proposed expansion, pending more input from the affected residents and businesses.

Even though the residents get relocation benefits, where would they move? That's a question that gets tougher to answer because so many comparable low to moderate income areas are going the way of the wrecking ball to make way for "improvements." St. Paul doesn't have a law that would require unit for unit replacement of housing in these situations. The City Council and Planning Commission, however, are looking at an ordinance that would establish permanent replacement housing guidelines.

Councilmember Kiki Sonnen wants to make the Twin City Testing situation a replacement housing test case. She has asked the Planning Department and the Port Authority to develop a plan to replace each lost rental unit with new ones near the old ones—in either St. Anthony Park or Desnoyer Park. She has asked for the new units to be similar to the old ones in size and rent, and that they be built within three years. "It's going to be a challenge to build replacement housing for this Twin City Testing project," she said at a recent Midway Civic & Commerce Association meeting.

No information is available yet about exactly where such housing would be built. Preliminary responses to her request are expected by Oct. 1. Expansion of the tax increment district and approval of Twin City Testing's expansion will eventually have to be approved by the city council, which will look at potential problems (such as parking) that would accompany several hundred new employees within a three block area.

In the meantime, renters and owners are in limbo. "Many of us are wondering what we should do now with our apartments," Reberts bemoaned. "Should we fix things that need fixing or just let them go until we know for sure what's going on?"

Music in the Park begins 10th year

By Kathy Malchow

The audience will cheer for "sweet music viola" on Sun., Oct. 16 at 4 p.m. in St. Anthony Park's United Church of Christ.

That's the time Cynthia Phelps, principal violist for the Minnesota Orchestra, will deliver the first pitch of the season opener for Music in the Park.

This first of five concerts begins the tenth season for the widely-respected chamber music series, founded and directed (for all ten of those years) by St. Anthony Park resident musician Julie Himmelstrup. She is especially pleased to announce that this year two of the performances are presented in cooperation with The Schubert Club as part of its 1988-89 Debut Series.

"I first got the idea for doing a concert series in St. Anthony Park thirty years ago when, as a student at the University, I became acquainted with the United Church of Christ," Himmelstrup recalls. "I thought, 'What a wonderful place for a chamber music concert!'" The idea didn't become reality until 1979 when COMPAS sponsored her as one of three resident artists in St. Anthony Park. Shortly thereafter the St. Anthony Park Arts Forum was born. With a budget of $5,000 then, Himmelstrup managed to hire the entire St. Paul Chamber Orchestra for one of the first concerts, and the series was off and running.

About a year ago Music in the Park left the Arts Forum to step out on its own with its own board of directors and series advisors. The budget, too, has grown to about $30,000. ("We're funded 1/3 by ticket sales, 1/3 by individual donations and 1/3 by corporations and foundations," Himmelstrup says.)

One of the series' missions of providing an intimate setting to please both audience and performer is certainly fulfilled in the "living room-like" arrangement at the United Church of Christ. "Chamber music is meant to be played in a small hall," explains Himmelstrup. "We try to provide a setting that's not intimidating. I feel the same way about this United Church of Christ as I feel about St. Anthony Park. There's such a congenial spirit about both. I can't conceive of doing this in any other neighborhood. The people here have been so supportive from the beginning—they're so interested in education and quality of life."

Another mission is to present new, especially American, music. Himmelstrup has her hand in programming every concert, most of which include premieres of works. This year the series has again received a grant from the Composer's Commissioning Program for composer Michael

Senior Chore Service

Fall is here and winter will soon be upon us! Do you anticipate needing help with housecleaning, yardwork or snow shoveling? If you are a senior citizen (age 60 or over) and live in the St. Anthony Park area, the Neighborhood Senior Chore Service can help you. We will match you with workers in your neighborhood who can provide these services to you.

Seniors pay only what they can afford and no senior will be denied services because of inability to pay. If you would like more information call Joan Norris at the St. Anthony Park Community Council office. Our NEW phone number is 292-7884. You may also fill out the coupon provided on this page and return to us for a quick and easy application form.

It's really not too soon to be thinking of these winter chores, so take a few minutes and be ready when the snow flies! This program is made possible in part through a grant and with the cooperative effort of the Metropolitan Council, Ramsey Action Programs, Inc. and the Minnesota Board on Aging.

Getting parks ready for spring

Neighbors will plant flowers and trees in local parks this fall in order to bring color and shade to our community next spring.

Several planning meetings, sponsored by the St. Anthony Park Community Council, were held with neighbors to finalize planting and first year maintenance details. It was exciting to see the number of gardening fans in the community who are concerned about how St. Anthony Park looks. We hope these projects are only a few in a continuing series that will bring even more beauty to our neighborhoods.

The flowers to be planted were carefully selected for drought tolerance and include prairie wildflowers known for their long-lasting blooms.

The City of St. Paul's Partner Mini-Grants of $500 were the catalyst for these projects. The grant applications are as follows:

1. Bill Anderson applied for the first grant for College Park by Raymond and Carter. He wants to plant assorted spring bulbs, prairie wildflowers and ferns under shade and pine trees. With Bill's encouragement, the other grant applications were made.

2. John Thomas and Delores Krinke designed a triangle within a triangle for the Sidney Triangle Park by Raymond and Bayless Place. They plan to reduce watering hours devoted to the old annual bed and expand plantings by developing permanent landscaping to include evergreens, flowering shrubs and a flowering tree.

3. Jack Sheldon is spearheading efforts to rejuvenate John Alden Park (also known as Triangle Park) by Brewster and Gibbs. Neighbors will plant trees, flowers and bushes to begin replacing the forest of thirty trees lost to Dutch Elm disease.

4. Howard Mielke initiated plans to bring a touch of spring to several local parks. His plan calls for planting bushels of daffodils and narcissus along walking paths and where they can be seen from the roads. Neighbors of Commonwealth Park (a block southwest of Como) will be implementing the plan. The Community Council is still looking for neighbors of Branson Park (by Hendon) to plant flowers there.

Howard's plan calls for "naturalizing" the flowers to minimize maintenance. This means that they will be planted in with the grass. The first few weeks in the spring the plants will not be mowed, which will enable them to store energy for the next year. After that, they will be mowed as usual.

Thanks are due to the many people who have worked to improve local parks in past years, including Mary Bacon, Phyllis Carlson, Sherm Eagles, Delores Krinke and Bernice Flowers Strane.

Contact the St. Anthony Park Community Council office at 292-7884 if you would like to help plant the flowers.

Council actions at a glance

Actions taken by the Community Council at its September 14 meeting included:

- Approved vacations of streets in Westgate for the purpose of platting.
- Communicated to area churches the need for food at the Merriam Park Community Center's Food Shelf which serves the St. Anthony Park area.

- Approved zoning amendments covering community residential facilities and support for District 14's efforts to get legislative clarification on definitions of types of group homes.

- Supported the site plan at 2389-2399 Commonwealth to construct a six-unit cluster development of paired single family residences.

New Block Club organizer welcomed

Residents of St. Anthony Park will recognize a new face as the Community Council and the St. Anthony Park Association strive to enhance the quality of life in the neighborhood through organized Block Clubs.

Eugenia Durham, St. Anthony Park resident and a relative newcomer to the community, has been hired as Block Club Organizer to continue the effort to establish Block Clubs in the neighborhood. Ms. Durham has extensive experience working with volunteers through involvement with Girl Scouts, establishment of a nature center and administration of Christian education activities in Atlanta, Georgia.

She has been involved in community issues since moving to St. Anthony Park and recently commented, "I am most appreciative of the values and attitudes expressed by my fellow residents."

Music in the Park from 1

Doherty. "We've received one of these grants every year we've been eligible," she says—which is every other year.

Himmelstrup cites the importance of the interested, committed board of directors that Music in the Park has to rely on. Two goals they're working on for the future are more involvement for young people (last year's rug concert was a start) and presenting more jazz performers.

Cynthia Phelps' concert on Oct. 16 is no exception to the goal of providing a forum for new composers. In addition to playing works by Bach, Beethoven, Brahms and Hindemith, she will premiere a work written for her by 'Twin Cities' composer Stephen Paulus. It's a piece based on a Chinese poem.

This is Phelps' second year as principal violist for the Minnesota Orchestra. It's also her second recital at Music in the Park. She's from California, having played in the Los Angeles Philharmonic and San Diego Symphony, where she was also principal violist. She has won numerous awards, including the recent Pro Musicus Foundation Award, and has performed in debut recital concerts around the globe. She played the same program she will perform in this Music in the Park concert on Sept. 1 in Cardiff, Wales with the Welsh National Symphony. The Oct. 16 event in St. Anthony Park is considered a preview of her New York Tully Hall debut on Oct. 24.

Phelps will be accompanied by Warren Jones—the first time the two have collaborated, and the first time Jones has performed at Music in the Park. He is an accomplished pianist and assistant conductor who plays regularly for such stars as Kathleen Battle, Marilyn Horne and Judith Blegen. He has played on national television for Luciano Pavarotti.

Tickets for the Oct. 16 event, at $10, are available at The Bibelot Shop and Micawber's Bookstore. Muffuletta in the Park will host a party after the concert for the performers. Tickets for that event are $10 also. Call 644-4234 for more information.

On the program for the remaining four concerts of Music in the Park this season are: Nov. 13, 7 p.m.: Leslie Shank (violin), John Sharp (cello), Jon Kimura Parker (piano); Jan. 29, 4 p.m.: St. Paul Chamber Orchestra Wind

Cynthia Phelps

Quintet; Mar. 5, 4 p.m.: Stephanie Chase (violin), William Black (piano); April 30, 7:30 p.m.: Anthony Ross (cello), Evelyne Brancart (piano). The last two concerts are presented in cooperation with The Schubert Club. Price of admission for each of the remaining four concerts is $8. Season tickets are $37 ($35 for seniors, students and MPR members). All performances will be at the St. Anthony Park United Church of Christ, 2129 Commonwealth Ave.

Video Verité

By Warren Hanson

I exercise every morning. Oh, but I'm not one to don a jogging suit and a Walkman and parade my pudgy body around the neighborhood for all to see. No, I exercise in the privacy of my own home. After all, why should I put up with twittering birds and snickering neighbors when I can get the same benefit by pushing and pouncing on a few hundred dollars worth of exercise equipment and staring at the TV screen.

My channel of choice during my morning regimen is MTV, the rock video station. Yes, I know that I'm supposed to be a mature, responsible adult who outgrew that rock'n'roll stuff long ago. But seeing all of those rock musicians in those tight spandex pants is great incentive to ride the exercise bike a few more grueling minutes.

Even though I watch it every morning, I really don't approve of what I see on MTV. Oh, it's not the violence or the lewdness or the loudness that bother me so much. And even though I get tired of watching the same few videos over and over again, that's not the major problem either. It's the fact that nothing they show on MTV is real. It has nothing whatsoever to do with real life.

Tell me, when you walk down Como Avenue, like from the bank, past the hardware store to the post office, do colored squares in the sidewalk light up under your feet? Does a swirling sea of steam lap at your legs wherever you go? Do beautiful girls in skimpy costumes dance suggestive dances in your presence? It sure doesn't happen to me. Not very often, anyway.

The video part of music videos seldom has even the remotest connection with the audio part anyway. Typically the words of the songs talk about falling in love, but what we see is the singer hanging upside down while purple dogs play pinocchio in a space ship. Why can't they show real people doing real things? Are they afraid we won't get it?

If the MTV people ever come and ask me for my suggestions about what they should show on their station, I'm all ready for them. "Why not, I'd say, 'Why not show a real guy—me, for instance—doing real things to music. You could play any music you want, and I am confident that you could find a real-life situation to go along with it.' I'm pretty sure they'd go for it, but just in case they wanted some examples, I'm ready for them.

FIRST VIDEO. You see me getting ready to go to my high school class reunion. I go up into the attic and dig out the clothes I wore when I was 16 years old. And I try to get them on, but they don't quite fit like I think they used to. (Clothes really shrink in the attic.) I wiggle and squirm and try to squeeze into them anyway, uttering words that are fortunately drowned out by the music. Then you see my family standing in the doorway snickering at me, and you see me get mad at them and tell them to go away and mind their own business. And the song that's playing in the background is "Twist & Shout."

VIDEO TWO. I'm cooking burgers out on the grill, but no matter where I stand, the smoke from the grill blows right in my face. The song: "Smoke Gets In Your Eyes."

VIDEO THREE. In the first scene it's fall and I'm standing on my front porch in the morning wondering why the newspaper is so late. Then I realize that we went off daylight savings time during the night and I forgot to change the clocks and I could have slept another hour. In the second scene it's spring and I'm scurrying around trying to get dressed and yelling at the kids to hurry and get ready for church or we'll be late because we went on daylight savings time during the night and I forgot to change the clocks and we're an hour behind schedule. The song: "The Times They Are A-Changing."

VIDEO FOUR. I'm back at the grill. This time there is a whole house full of relatives, with their noses pressed to the window glass, watching as I try to keep the coals going to cook supper during a torrential downpour. The song: "Fire and Rain."

VIDEO FIVE. My wife and I are all dressed up. The camera shows a close-up of expensive theater tickets lying on the table. The babysitter is standing awkwardly in the background as I sit on the edge of my daughter's bed, reading a thermometer and shaking my head. The music is from "Saturday Night Fever."

VIDEO SIX. I'm back at the grill. Still in the rain. The song is "Raindrops Keep Falling On My Head."

VIDEO SEVEN. The camera finds me at Minneapolis-St. Paul International Airport. I approach the counter to check in, only to be told that my flight has been delayed. We see the clock on the wall. The camera sees me waiting endlessly in the uncomfortable chairs in the gate area. We again see the clock on the wall. The camera finds me coming out of the men's room, checking my watch, and getting a cup of terrible coffee from a vending machine. Once more we see the clock on the wall. The song is "By the Time I Get to Phoenix." The airline is Northwest.

VIDEO EIGHT. I am on vacation with my family. We are driving across country. My son picks up a can of grape pop that has been rolling around in the back of the station wagon for nine hours in 100° heat. He pops the top and it explodes all over the inside of the car. The song that accompanies this vision of bedlam is "Purple Rain."

As you can plainly see, there is no shortage of real-life situations that can be set to popular music to make videos. "What A Day For A Daydream" would show me in church, not listening to the sermon. "Born To Run" would show my family trying to get to basketball practice, ballet class, book club and a school board meeting all at the same time. "I Did It My Way" would show me standing proudly next to some home-handyman project I have just completed while my family looks on aghast. You get the idea. The possibilities are endless.

I suppose there's an outside chance that the MTV people will never even ask for my advice. But if they do, I'll tell them what I just told you. They are sure to be convinced that the video verite, the television of truth, is a much better way to go. And if they are not convinced, I have one ace in the hole, one video concept that is sure to melt the heart of the stoniest music business mogul.

VIDEO NINE. I am still dressed up for the theater, but my tie is now loose. I have taken the babysitter home, and I walk into my daughter's darkened bedroom. Her fever is down a bit and she has finally dropped off into much-needed sleep. As I touch her cheek and brush the hair out of her eyes, the song begins...

"I've got sunshine on a cloudy day.
And when it's cold outside,
I've got the month of May.
Well, I guess you'd say
What can make me feel this way?
My girl..."

Now that's a real-life video that I'd never get tired of watching.

At Peace in Lauderdale, they've got a beef (dinner)

On Sat., Oct. 29 the doors of Peace Lutheran Church at the corner of Walnut and Ione will be open to the community from 5-7 p.m. for the annual beef dinner. The price of tickets for the family style meal—$5 for adults, $2.50 for children 5-10, preschoolers free—has not changed for a number of years but it has skyrocketed from the 35¢ asked in the fall of 1933 when the "Ladies Aid of the First Evangelical Lutheran Church of Rose Hill" began the tradition of offering the meal to the community.

Though worship services for the congregation had begun in Nov. 1932 in a home at 1707 Eustis, the church was not officially organized until March of '35. Thus, the Aid's dinner has been a part of Rose Hill's fall calendar of events even before the congregation (renamed Peace Lutheran in 1955) existed. The beef dinner, however, has long since become an all-congregation and even an all-community effort. This year's production will be no different.

Elsa Bronkala, widow of Lauderdale's first mayor (William Bronkala 1949-51, 1954-69) once again is making one of her gorgeous afghans to be given away as a door prize. She will also supply the cole slaw dressing made from her secret recipe. Her neighbor Bertha Stettner, the "plant lady of Carl Street," will be cutting the homemade apple and pumpkin pies served for dessert. Councilwoman Nora Gille will be hostess, helping guests find seating as it becomes available. Evelyn Hirt, whose husband Matthias was one of the first Trustees when the congregation was established, does all the calling of the membership for donations of pies, pickles, coffee and butter.

In the kitchen, high schooler Michael Casey has learned the mashed-potato whipping trade from Jim Isaacson who employs many Lauderdale young adults in his Road Runner firm. Doris Isaacson some years ago took over the "Mrs. Olson's coffee" making task from Olive Jean Olson.

Olive's husband's poor health keeps her at home a few doors away though she still manages to do all the phoning to arrange the meals served after church funerals.

Luther Northwestern Seminary students, assigned to the parish as part of their Contextual Education, are likely to be taught aspects of servanthood, taking their turn as dishwashers. Former mayor Bob Wisen (1970-79) once again will head up the kitchen crew, purchasing and cooking the beef to perfection.

Some members of the parish are becoming more attuned to meatless meals with soups and whole-grained breads but the beef dinner tradition at Peace is believed to offer community-building values that would be hard to replace.

City Clerk LaVanche Peterson rounds up the workers for the dining room, table-setters, waiters and coffee servers. New Lauderdale mayor Willard Anderson can be counted on to keep coffee cups filled. The pastor carries a pot—of coffee—too, but is apt to be sitting and catching up on news with former church and community members who return year after year to the dinner.

At the Bake Sale table, ably staffed by Alice Mattheu and her crew, lucky and early shoppers can purchase baked goods for home consumption (though some of the brownies have been known not to make it out of the church basement).

There will be good smells and foods to be enjoyed up on the hill the 29th of October. Best of all, though, will be the taste of small-town life right here in the midst of the Metro area. For yet another year, at Peace in Lauderdale they've got a beef dinner!

Have buyers, need sellers. Lowest fees in area.

What's brewing in St. Anthony Park?

By John Paulson

The air hints of a bread-like aroma. A metallic clank is heard as a barrel is carted in and set down. High up on a polished white-and-metal platform, a worker checks a bubbling brew contained in one of two huge 50-year-old copper kettles. In another room, two workers hose down the floor amidst tall white tanks.

In the midst of this stands Mark Stutrud. This is his dream, his fantasy come true—a brewery to call his own.

Summit Brewing Company was born just two years ago this summer in St. Anthony Park, delivering its first batch of Summit Extra Pale Ale in September, 1986. Since then business has grown to where the brewery puts out about 125 barrels—over 500 cases—of ale a week. That's small hops to a large brewer like Stroh's or Heileman, but the size may be the main reason for the company's existence.

A true beer lover from his college days, Stutrud became interested in the notion that a small brewery might have a place among the giants here in the United States. He had friends who were home brewers, and in 1980, he himself began pursuing the art. His growing interest led him to pick up some of the industry journals to get tips and techniques. "That's where I started reading about some of these fledgling companies—these tiny breweries that had started up around the country, primarily on the West Coast." The fantasy was beginning to take shape.

Stutrud looked to Germany for inspiration. There, master brewers still carry on the centuries-old tradition of having a brewery in nearly every town, each with its own distinctive beer and beer character.

In contrast, by 1980, six breweries produced 94 percent of all the beer consumed in the United States. The loss of breweries during Prohibition, along with new technologies and economic factors all contributed to that phenomenon. What it meant for the beer drinker was that mass-marketing techniques were producing beers that were very similar to each other, striving to offend as few people as possible and thus tending toward the bland side, according to Stutrud.

The small American breweries, like the small boutique wineries, were an effort to rebel, in a way, against mass marketing and make a product that was truly distinctive. Stutrud soon found himself joining the rebellion.

It didn't hurt, either, that at the time, Stutrud was 30 years old and in the mood for a change. He and his wife Margaret had been trained as social workers, receiving their degrees at the University of North Dakota in Grand Forks.

After spending seven years in hospitals working mostly with adolescents, Mark found himself wondering about his next step. "I had a choice of sticking with the hospital, going into private practice, going back to graduate school or doing something crazy."

The last option won out. Stutrud admits, "I just happened to be a kind of hard-headed stubborn Norwegian that doesn't give up on ideas too quickly, so this fantasy that I had started taking on some reality."

He and Margaret attended a hands-on seminar on brewing that promptly erased any romantic notions they might have had about owning a brewery. "Starting a small brewery and running it is very intense," he says, "and very physically demanding, and it's something that really can be overwhelming in terms of affecting everything in your life."

But that knowledge did not deter the Stutruds. At the end of 1983, Margaret agreed to take over as major breadwinner, and Mark left his position at St. Mary's Hospital in Minneapolis to begin pursuing his dream.

To learn about the art of brewing, Stutrud sought the help of two master brewers: Fred Thomasser, a former Brewery to 10

"Choices" theme of Oct. SAPA meeting

St. Anthony Park Association's Oct. 11 meeting has been developed to help residents make decisions in two important areas. First, in the State House of Representatives race and, second, in nursing care.

The two candidates for the House of Representatives, incumbent Ann Wynia and challenger Kim Reckinger, will each appear and make a brief statement.

Following the candidates' appearance, nursing care in St. Anthony Park will be examined. It's inevitable that some day we will all have to study the types of nursing care available, either for ourselves or for our families. And that isn't a simple decision.

Susan Downey, Director of Community Relations for Commonwealth Health Care, and Kathy Schiller, Director of Social Services for the Linnea Home, will be on hand to discuss the options available in long-term and short-term care. In addition to an update on the changes the organizations have made in the past year, Susan and Kathy will discuss the differences in the organizations and what needs to be considered when making a nursing care decision.

There will also be a 10-minute video presentation on the Commonwealth Health Care Center.

The meeting will be held at the United Church of Christ, Commonwealth and Chelmsford. Dinner will be served at 5:50 p.m. and the program will commence at 7 p.m. Babysitting will be available. Dinner is $5 and half price for children under 12. Reserve your space for this important meeting by calling Jan Meyer at 647-9104.

ALWAYS! READ THE FINE PRINT.

After executing a revocable trust our clients address the question: Which assets should be transferred to the trust? The answer is complicated by the variety of the client's assets, their physical and mental health, choice of trustee and their need to avoid probate. As a general rule, the more assets that are transferred to the trust the easier it is for the trustee and the greater the savings for the client's estate at the time of incapacity or death. Many people put only a minimum of their assets into their trusts initially. Where possible these people should name the trustee as beneficiary upon death, and as an added precaution, should also execute a Power of Attorney enabling someone else to transfer assets to the trust prior to their death.

School News

Murray Junior High

Murray Junior High has a few changes on its staff this year. Steve Johnson, a new counselor, is replacing Marvin Rull. Bill Nye is taking the place of Melinda Morris in 3R. There is also a new teacher in the Autistic Program replacing Lynn Gorgos. Her name is Laurie Morris.

There are 454 students attending Murray. That is down 20 eighth graders from last year, but the seventh graders are what was expected. The seventh graders this year come from 18 different elementary schools.

The new English-Computer program is taught by Pat Knalson. This year's seventh graders are the first group to participate in the computer writing class. The reason for this class is to teach students how to write better and give them a better start in writing for the secondary schools. The students in this class will be learning the basic keyboard and how to use a word processor. They will be working with paragraphs and many other things including having successful writers come and talk to the classes. They will be doing fun things, too, such as writing holiday stories. Mr. McManus worked hard this summer to get this program together.

Several events will be taking place. On Sept. 29 school pictures will be taken. On Oct 3 & 6 there will be S.R.A.

testing. Oct. 10 will be the Open House for parents. On Oct. 14 there will be a district wide workshop for parents and on Oct. 20-21 there will be no school because of state teachers' meetings. Looking ahead, parent conferences will be held on Nov. 9-10 and 16-17.

Como Park High School

As a whole, most of Como's population from St. Anthony Park is quite interested in the idea of academic excellence. Besides taking mostly advanced classes, some students are considering a new alternative. They are exploring the post-secondary option. Four area seniors, Robby Mann, Vince Copa, Susan McKinnel and Jenny Warnken, are doing just that. They each take some classes at Como, and then off to the University's Minneapolis campus they go.

Jenny got a jump start this summer by taking language theory and The Civil Rights Movement of the 1960's. She earned a total of 4 credits for these courses. Jenny stays in school for choir, English and humanities and then heads off to Introduction to Sociology and fifth quarter Spanish at the University.

Susan took fifth quarter French this summer and earned 4 credits. This semester she's taking sixth quarter French and next semester will probably add Shakespeare. She comes to Como for English and Humanities.

Vince and Rob attend a physics class at the University in the morning and then return to yearbook, English, humanities and calculus. Later Vince returns to the University for a night class on the International System.

Vince also earned four credits this summer when he was enrolled in Physics as Metaphor and Randomness at the University.

When this year is finished, Vince will have earned about 29 credits, Rob's will total 5, Jenny will have approximately 22 and Susan will have compiled 25. Congratulations and good luck to these fine St. Anthony Park students.

Congratulations, too, to Andy Karvonen and Eric Sjowall on their nominations for Homecoming royalty at Como.

—Jenny Mayer

Teachers honored for 25 years in the St. Paul School system included Blanche Burroughs from St. Anthony Park, Phyllis Baltes from Murray Junior High and Jim Ashworth who lives in St. Anthony Park and teaches at Como Senior High.

Central High School

On Sept. 6, Central's first day of school began with a Welcome Back celebration! Red and black helium balloons were tied to the outside stairway railings and a large "Welcome Back" sign was hung above the front doors, starting a great year. By the first day of school most freshmen and newcomers were familiar with the building after an orientation to Central on the 2nd. On Sept. 14 a freshman pep fest was given by the Student Council Management Team to make students aware of opportunities available at Central in academics, athletics and other areas.

Mr. Kanavati, an assistant principal at Central, is currently searching for funds to erect a large electric, computer operated sign outside Central. This sign would be very beneficial to the school and community by informing everyone of Central's activities. Feel free to contact the school if you'd like to donate to our sign fund.

Some dates of upcoming events at Central are Central's Homecoming Week Oct. 10-14. There will be a Central alumni social at 5:30 p.m. Oct. 14 for all Central alumni of years past. They are then welcome to say for the 7 p.m. homecoming football game vs. Highland High School at Central's stadium. Complimentary tickets for alumni to the 9 p.m. homecoming dance also on the 14th can be obtained through Central's Student Council. Please contact Central High School for any questions regarding our school or alumni events at: 275 N. Lexington Parkway, St. Paul, MN 55104.

Falcon Heights Elementary School

Recycling is coming to Falcon Heights, hopefully involving all students. Paper products will be recycled in classrooms and other areas of the school as well as steel and aluminum cans.

In order to kick off this effort, the PTA sponsored the CLIMB Theater's production of "Trash" for grades 3-6 on Sept. 28 and their production of "The Golden Touch" the same day for younger students.

Cans will be taken to a recycling center and redeemed for cash. This money will then be given to the Student Council for its use.

Brewery from 7

Schmidt employee whom Stutrud drew out of retirement at the age of 69 and Charlie McElevey, a beermeister raised in Minnesota, educated in Munich and at that time working for Redhook Brewery in Seattle, one of the most successful small breweries in the country.

Stutrud also took classes in Chicago to learn some of the academic and business aspects says Stutrud, "that some of these tiny breweries that started up and failed, [did so] because they didn't attend to it as a business."

By fall of 1984 he had located the present building on University and Hampden and had an option to buy. It was time to go looking for investors.

One of those investors turned out to be the City of St. Paul, through its Department of Planning and Economic Development, which gave Stutrud $50,000 in the form of a low-interest loan. "This was the first time the City of St. Paul had been so directly involved in the start-up of a small business." The Summit loan, says Stutrud, turned out to be a prototype of sorts for a seed-capital fund to stimulate business in the city.

By Christmas of 1985, Stutrud had the half-million dollars he needed to start brewing, and after remodeling the building and product testing, the first batch of Summit Extra Pale Ale was delivered for sale on September 25, 1986.

Summit is technically a "micro-brewery." Stutrud prefers the term "craft brewery," which he says sounds less technical and carries the image of the small craft breweries that "quietly brew the best beers in Europe."

They have been doing it for years; by comparison, according to Stutrud, the oldest continuously-operating brewery of Summit's size is only eight years old. That made for some interesting times when the plant first opened up. For instance, initially, Minnesota officials charged with inspecting such facilities found that there were no codes to go by. According to Summit production manager Denny Grodahl, "it had been so long since a brewery had opened in Minnesota, that all the old codes had disappeared."

Now a toddler at the age of two, Summit has grown, but it still turns out only 6,500 barrels of brew a year. Leinenkugels, by comparison, brews about 10,000 barrels, and the larger breweries, jokes Stutrud, "spill more beer in a month than we produce in a year."

But the difference is more than size. Summit brews ale, which is a type of beer, as are the various lagers to which we may be more accustomed. "There are more different types of beer than wine," Stutrud explains. Summit itself produces four types of ale, two of which are produced seasonally.

Ale is produced in about half the time required for a lager, due to higher temperatures and a different strain of yeast. The recipe is simple: barley malt (three different kinds), hops, water and yeast. Major brewers, on the other hand, will use corn, rice and/or other "adjuncts" to add lightness and stability to their beers. Stutrud also uses a natural process to carbonate the ale. What results is a beer with a little more body and a distinctive, fruitier taste.

Producing it is hard work and the conditions are not always the best. On hot days like those of this summer, Stutrud says the heat generated by the boiling wort, can make the place almost unbearable. The plant closed down for a couple of days in August when the temperature went up to 105. The noise levels can be intense, too. "When we're bottling," says Stutrud, "we sometimes just take the phones off the hook, because we can't hear them, anyway."

Stutrud is still experimenting with the product. Recently he brought out a variety called "Summit Sparkling Ale," a lighter-bodied variety with a little more carbonation, sold only during the summer, "between Syttende Mai and Labor Day."

Marketing has been a challenge for the upstart Summit. "We're a deviant," explains Stutrud. "The beer tastes, not only different than domestic, but a lot more like imported beer." That's intentional, he says, but "when you come in and you say, 'We're Summit Brewing Company of St. Paul; we're small, we're distinctive; we're not for everybody, it's much easier to lose a sale than to gain one.'"

But the ale does have its market, typically people with some higher education, according to Stutrud, who are somewhat sophisticated in their tastes, and possess a certain amount of knowledge of beer and the brewing process.

It can be found in a variety of establishments, however, from Johnny's Bar, across the street from the brewery, to Ruperts in St. Louis Park. It's also served in St. Cloud and Duluth. And with the installation of a bottling line, Summit is now delivering over 500 cases per week for off sale.

Stutrud is enthusiastic about how the business has grown in the first two years—"even more than we'd imagined...this summer has been fantastic." And he's noticeably pleased that what started out as a fantasy is now satisfying beer lovers all over the Twin Cities.

Peace pole comes to the Park

Worshippers at St. Matthew's Episcopal Church dedicated their new peace pole Sept. 11.

By Truman Olson

"May Peace Prevail on Earth" is the message in four languages on a peace pole in front of St. Matthew's Episcopal Church in St. Anthony Park. It is one of the latest in a worldwide project of more than 70,000 peace poles in 70 countries. The peace poles are four-sided obelisk-shaped columns with message plates on all four sides in any language one wants. "We picked English, Arabic, Chinese and Russian," said Rev. Grant Abbott, "English to get the message across and Arabic, Chinese and Russian because they reflect the origins of some members of our congregation and they say something about the neighborhood."

The peace pole project was founded 33 years ago in Japan by the late Masahisi Goi who composed the message and prayer, "May Peace Prevail on Earth," with the belief that this statement could, in time, become the unifying force of our planet as the ultimate wish of mankind.

"Grant first saw a peace pole at the University Lutheran and Episcopal Center near Dinkytown. He brought the idea to the vestry," said Jerry Jenkins, senior warden of St. Matthew's, "and we thought it was a really neat idea so we got it."

While installing the pole, church members Bill Hanna and Paul Savage observed, "This is just the kind of message we want to send to the community."

"Many people in this congregation and community have different ideas about how to achieve world peace," said Abbott. "The message and prayer on the peace pole transcends the differences of national boundaries, race, religion and ideologies. It expresses the universal wish for peace."

Real Estate

By Carol Weber

REALTOR

SELLING A FIXER-UPPER

When a seller decides to market his home as a "Handyman Special," some hard decisions will have to be made.

The first decision will probably be the choice between fixing the house up or selling it "as-is." Before that decision can be made, the seller needs to know how much the house is worth in its present condition. The question of fixing it up may be academic. If remodeling was the seller's strong point, the house would not be a "Fixer-Upper" in the first place.

The first step is to get a market evaluation as to just how much the property is worth in today's market. The lower end of the market usually has the highest demand. An estimate can then be made of the cost required to upgrade the house to a higher standard for a higher selling price.

Another consideration is the type of financing a seller will use. FHA, VA, and conventional all have minimum standards for the condition of the house when approving loans. A qualified real estate person can offer guidance as to what those conditions may be, only an appraisal will determine exact "work orders."

With this information in hand, the decision can be made—based on financing facts—whether it would be more cost effective to improve it or sell "as-is" for less money and leave the work for a willing buyer.

If there is anything we can do to help you in the field of real estate, please call Edina Realty, 2780 Snelling Ave. No. Phone: 636-3760. We're here to help!

Needed: Neighbors to help neighbors

Would you like a part-time job helping others right here in the neighborhood? Or are you looking for a volunteer role that provides a vital service to area residents? Such opportunities are presently available through the St. Anthony Park Block Nurse Program which is seeking to employ additional block companions and through the Meals on Wheels program which needs additional volunteers to deliver meals. Both roles are critically important to members of the community who, with such help, can continue to live in their own homes.

Presently, 20 people participate as Meals on Wheels drivers for this community. Once a month, over the noon hour, a volunteer delivers meals to 10 households within the neighborhood. The meals are picked up at Merriam Park Community Center, just south of University Ave. and east of Cleveland, and delivered here in St. Anthony Park, assuring good nutrition to persons who are unable to prepare their own food.

"For a small investment of time, you do a lot of good for others," says Judy Probst, Meals on Wheels coordinator. Interested persons should call Judy at 644-0492.

If employment in the neighborhood is your interest, then you may want to inquire about becoming a block companion within the St. Anthony Park Block Nurse Program. These positions are paid, part-time and have flexible hours. Block Companions are a very important part of the Block Nurse team. They perform personal care, delegated nursing functions and homemaking activities for elderly persons living in St. Anthony Park. Block Companions must themselves live in the neighborhood and must hold a Home Health Aide/Homemaker certification or its equivalent. Financial assistance in obtaining certification is available if needed. Interested persons should call Eileen Stock, Block Nurse Program director, 644-7552.

In considering their programs' need for additional assistance, both Probst and Stock agree that for a caring community to be sustained, the commitment of both volunteers and professionals is equally important.

Park Block Nurse Program

Wheels coordinator

She was born and raised in St. Anthony Park and was a lifetime member of St. Matthew's Episcopal Church where she served as church secretary and was chairperson of the pastoral care committee, a group of volunteers who help other church members in need.

She began working at the Children's Home Society in 1976 as a post-adoption worker and later became a foster care worker. She also worked as a search director, matching adopted children with their natural parents. She and her husband also cared for 32 foster children over a six or seven-year period.

He was a graduate of the University of Minnesota and had worked as an architect all of his life, work which he dearly loved. In that capacity he had designed buildings all over the country. His last project was the Augustana Towers in Minneapolis.

One of his greatest joys was that he and his wife had built a retirement home on the North Shore together. He had just begun the retirement process when he died.
