Children's Home Society has 100th birthday

By Alice Duggan

In 1889, the Children's Home Society of Minnesota (CHSM) celebrates its 100th anniversary. Its history begins around the history of St. Anthony Park and of Minnesota, of Child Welfare, of War and Peace. When you read the early publications of the Society, you lurch from the local Sunshine Society to the National League for Child Welfare, from the need for wood and potatoes to the need for better laws, from the list of stockings remedied to the list of war dead. Times change, fashions change, buildings go up or come down—new directions arrive and take change. But certain things remain constant through a century of service. Always there is a high regard for the worth and rights of children; always an effort to support and nurture families.

We can be grateful to Joseph Eisinger, philanthropist, for the five lots he gave to CHSM in 1900. That property, bordered by Commonwealth and Como Avenues, gave the Society a place to put down its roots. It was still fairly new (though active) and didn't have a home of its own, only rented and temporary space. The gift of land gave a boost to morale and fund-raising, and the new Jean Newlon Brown Receiving Home was finished in 1903. It was much admired—for its staleness, its high elevation, its unstructured view of the little green suburbs that was St. Anthony Park. It was quite the neighborhood.

The heart and soul behind all these bricks was a small group of dedicated people. Most notably the Rev. Edward Payson Savage, founder and first director of CHSM. He and his wife, Kate, poured out their lives for what they called "child saving." She did fund raising and he did that and everything else. He wrote and edited a journal, Home Finder. He lobbied the legislature for laws that would give legal status to the Society's work. He spoke in churches throughout the state, organizing a network of support. (A key element of this support: 300 volunteer boards, scattered from Duluth to Spring Valley, made it their business to identify neglected or homeless children and find them adoptive homes.) Unencumbered by forms, laws or procedures, because they didn't exist in his day, he gathered up abandoned children, piled them onto the train, and carried them back to St. Paul. In 1903 we read in Home Finder, "Our new home is now complete and handsomely furnished with almost everything it needs.... The ladies of St. Anthony Park, Mrs. Prof. Green, Mrs. Gov. McGill, Mrs. Polk, Mrs. Ligget and many others have most kindly aided in making many visitors at the home welcome.... We are much indebted to Mr. Green for his competent direction as to the grading and laying out of the lots." And that same year, "Acknowledgements: 32 glasses of jelly of the St. Anthony Park Women's Association, who recently visited the home in a body for a sewing bee." CHSM caused a kind of excitement and commitment throughout the state because it was a new idea for dependent children that seemed, as the Rev. Savage put it, "natural and beautiful." What was new about it? The determination that every child deserved a family. It was not enough to provide a sanctuary, in the form of an institution, for the neglected, for the abandoned. What was best for children was a family. If one family failed them, they should get a second chance. So the new building was going to be a different kind of Home, a non-institution. Workers would keep their eyes on the prize—a new home for each child—and send them off with new parents as soon as possible. Very early on, however, board members saw the possibility for another kind of service. They agreed to board children temporarily, in a way of supporting parents in stressful circumstances. Thus at any time in the history of receiving home, there were CHSM wards, waiting for new families; but there were also boarders—children waiting for the better times that would reunite them with their parents.

What was it like to be a child who stayed at the Home? If you arrived after 1910, you might have taken one of the first psychological tests. For the first time, the staff includ- ed a nurse and a doctor who examined you and kept records of your progress. There was still a cow in the barn out back, but now your milk was pasteurized and refrigerated in the big kitchen. The nursery was full to bursting, because the Society was boarding babies. (The new director wanted to support public health leaders by providing an alternative to "baby farms," which exploited babies by selling them for profit.) The babies' cereal had to cook all day, to get soft enough. Busy stirring the pot, changing the diapers and rocking the babies was the latest batch of young women assembled for the Baby Nurse Training Course, start- ed in 1915. It was a six-month training course, a monthly allowance of $8, a diploma and help finding a job. There was plenty of compa- ny for the older children, too. In 1918 some of the "new kids" were the children of soldiers, whose mothers worked in war industries and who needed child care.

You might have thought the highlight of the 20s was the installation of a new playground, with an absolutely marvelous merry-go-round (fondly remembered by cer- tain Park neighbors). You might have watched the construction of a new brick building, the Humphrey Memorial Building, on the south side of the old Home (since razed). It became the new home for all wards under the age of four, together with the Baby Nurses. You might have met the Society's first profession- al social worker, Florence E. Johnson, who arrived in 1927. She used new words like "development" and "self-expression.

If you came during the depression, you were one of many. The resident popula- tion peaked in 1933. The average length of stay stretched out—from six months to one year. But whatever worries the grown-ups had, they made life com- fortable, even home-like, for the children. There was the routine of weekdays at Gut- tersen School and Sunday at one of the neighborhood churches. Expeditions to the farm school, the fairgrounds, the dump. The new wood-working shop, installed in the basement "for the older boys." The dog, who posed for pictures with the children. And if ever they felt too no-

Carousel to stay at State Fair in '89

By Kathy Malchow

Our Fair Carousel, the St. Paul-based group, bought the State Fair's "world's largest merry- go-round" on Dec. 10, assuring the ride will stay in Minnesota. It was announced the carousel will remain at the fairgrounds in 1989 for one last State Fair run. Then a permanent home will be found.

Price of the sale, announced moments before an auction was to begin in New York, was $1.1 million—beating the all-time high price previously paid for a carousel by about $375,000. It was said the Bli- nstrups, the family who owned the ride, rejected a bid of $1.3 million from outside bidders because they wanted the carousel to remain in Min- nesota. (They were selling the attraction because of business manage- ment problems with the State Fair Board. In essence, the Blinstrups were told by the Fair they couldn't operate on the fairgrounds any longer because they wouldn't disclose long-term plans—which is part of the contract for all Fair rides.)

The $1.1 million loan, put up by First Bank Saint Paul, needs to be repaid within a year, or ownership of the merry-go-round goes back to the City of St. Paul, which could sell it this time next year if enough money isn't raised.

Any guesses as to how much it will cost to ride your favorite horse during the 1980 State Fair?

Budget planning for 1990-91 begins

The biennial cycle for preparation of the 1990-91 Capital Improvement Budgets begins early in January. Approximately $25 million is available annually for projects selected through a process designed to ensure that neighborhoods have significant voice in how the dollars are used.

Capital improvement projects fall into the following classes: streets and utilities, community facilities, and residential and community development.

Commercial and arterial streets will be considered, but residential streets are no longer eligible because of the sewar separation project currently underway which provides for sewers, street trees, and grading.

Community facilities cover improvements to recreation centers, libraries, fire stations, and city buildings. Residential and economic development is likely to include housing loan, rehabilitation funds, or commercial development.

For the first time, district councils submit preliminary nominations for projects to the City Budget Office. The projects submitted by both neighborhood and city departments are reviewed by representatives from each of the District Councils.

Groups, whether residents or city staff, appear before the task forces to describe the project and why it should be funded. A priority list is then forwarded to the Mayor, who makes recommendation to the city council.

It makes the final decisions.

Suggestions for CIP improvements in St. Anthony Park should be submitted to the Community Council office before Feb. 8.

St. Anthony Park Community Council will also choose representatives to sit on the three task forces. Any resident wishing to devote three hours a week (usually late afternoon) to task force work between April and June should contact the office, 292-7884.

Members of the Minnesota Knitters Guild made 100 pair of mittens and hats for the Morrie Park Holiday Bureau to be used for people in need. Local members who donated material and knitting time included Joan Hurley, Clemens, Judy Dahl, Elizabeth Tedesco, Kimball and Sandra Foster, Janine Kemmer and Catherine Daly from St. Anthony Park and Donna Severance from Lauderdale.

Monica Etter of Falcon Heights was one of seven women honored Dec. 8 at the ninth annual Leader Luncheon Outstanding Achievement Awards sponsored by the St. Paul YWCA. She received the leader award in the human services category as program coordinator for Parents Anonymous of Minnesota.

St. Anthony Park resident Kira Gregersen has won national recognition for her feat of winning four state titles in tennis. Her photo appeared in the feature "Faces in the Crowd" in the Nov. 28 issue of Sports Illustrated. She was the first person born in Minnesota to win four consecutive state titles when she defeated Katie Misson from Breck on Oct. 29 at the Nicollet Tennis Center.

Some people think the only game played on ice is hockey and the only way people can behave on the ice is in an aggressive, violent manner. Those people aren't familiar with the "gentlemanly" sport of curling.

Curling, like hockey, is played by two teams on ice, but the resemblance stops there. Curlers treat one another with courtesy and respect, often congratulating one another on good shots and taking care not to be distracting. It is also one of the only sports in which men and women can compete equally. This is just one of the reasons Jim Dexter, manager of the St. Paul Curling Club, loves the sport.

"It gets in your blood," says Dexter, who has been curling since he was 16. At that time he and his friends from the Murray hockey team, Barkley Braastad, Greg Page and Tryg Hansen, went to laugh at Jim's father and his funny sport, but ended up joining a junior league instead. He has been curling ever since.

It's also a great family sport. Dexter's wife, Debbie, and his two sons, Jeff and Mike, all curl. "We have curlers from ages 12 to 75 in the club. It's a sport you can compete in all your life," says Dexter.

The St. Paul Curling Club, with 700 members from all over the metropolitan area, is the largest in the nation. Leagues play every day of the week from Nov. to April and many bonspiels (tournaments) are held. This club, established in 1917, also has the distinction of having hosted the men's, ladies' and junior national championships. Dexter has managed the St. Paul Curling Club and the Arden Hills Club before that (now closed) since 1972.

"It's really the people that keep me here," says Dexter, and in some cases it's a Dex who keeps the people there. Everyone knows him, not just those of us from the Park. His humor and bear hugs add to the warmth and "hominess" of the club. Other curlers from St. Anthony Park are Jack Pearson, Nate Wessberg, Mark Arnold, David Christianson and me, and Sally Augustin of Olaf's Park Deli.

The game itself, which originated in Scotland, is one that takes a few minutes to learn and a lifetime to perfect. Each member of a four-person team throws (slides) two 42-pound rocks one at a time toward a bullseye some 125 feet down the ice. Teammates may help direct the rock by sweeping with brooms in front of it to melt the ice. A player's object is to complete the "end" (two rocks thrown for each team member) with his or her team's rocks closer to the center of the bullseye or "house." It's an addictive game of skill and finesse that can change dramatically by the position of a single rock.

So there are many draws for Jim Dexter and other curling enthusiasts-the game, the people, the sportsmanship. Come to laugh at this funny sport-you may find a lifetime of competition and companionship.

More than one way to give

Dear editor,

Although my name is not listed in the list of 500 contributors supporting the Bugle, perhaps I have contributed in another way, i.e., supporting the people who advertise in your paper.
Yes, I place my money in Parkbank, buy my gas at Park Service, my kerosene at Como-Raymond, my hardware at Park Hardware, sundries at Miller Drugs and insurance from a local State Farm agent.
I also buy groceries at Speedway (recent letter to editor) and they can bag my groceries any way, at a reduction economically feasible.

Your comments and suggestions are important to us. They will help the paper be what YOU want it to be.

Your responses will also be used to generate new advertising. Ad revenue provides much of the money needed to pay for producing the Bugle and getting it to your house each month.

Right now, take a few moments to complete the reader survey inserted in this issue. Mail it to us at Box 8126 Como Station, St. Paul, MN 55108 or put it in the dropbox behind our office in the Healy Building at 2301 Como Ave.

Thanks! We'll be glad you took the time and we think you'll be glad, too.

Thanks to Prof. Philip Tichenor and Diane Emerson Nelson for their help in survey preparation.

Bugle contributor

Michelle Christianson is glad to be back writing for the Bugle again, and we're glad to have her back. Alice Duggan is a St. Anthony Park writer who obviously loves her work. Warren Hansen will deny he's famous, but we think he should have his own sidewalk star. But who will shelve it? Any volunteers? Truman Olson proves that a friend will go anywhere for you as he scuttles about taking photos for us, often with little notice.

Thanks to the Association

Dear editor,
The story in the Dec. Bugle publicizing the holiday program at the United Church of Christ inadvertently failed to mention that the St. Anthony Park Association made that evening possible by asking the St. Anthony Park Committee to plan a holiday program for its Dec. meeting. The Association board members plan to catered dinner, cooked the dinner and gave the profits to the church. We thank both members of the church and as members of the community.

Stop the politics

Dear Editor,

I would like to publicly express my opposition to the use of the Black Worker Program to distribute political propaganda such as the TTOP THE HELPFUL PAPER.
The proposed helpert is a very complex issue and one on which many residents have seen little or no information. I feel an information fyer presenting both sides of the issue and urging concerned residents to attend the public meeting would have been appropriate. The flyer we were given to con-distribute presented only one side of the issue and urged people to vote no on the meeting to fight the helpert.

I support the Block Worker Program, a network of volunteer block workers and area Cordinators, as an information distribution network and the basis of the Neighborhood Crime Watch Program. However, if the District 12 Council continues to use the program for political purposes I would find it very difficult to continue this support.

Thanks! More $ needed

Last month we thanked over 500 people who have contributed to our fund drive because they see the Bugle as an important part of their community, included in the Bugle for contributions from more readers whose names were not able to list.

But we need to hear from you of the need to reach our $11,500 goal. Our only sources of income are ad revenue and your contributions.

You can contribute by mailing your check, payable to Park Press, Inc., to Park Bugle, Box 8126 Como Station, St. Paul, MN 55108. You can also drop it in our drop box (behind our office in the Healy Building at 2301 Como).

Walk of Fame

By Warren Hanson

Snowing. Snowing. Snowing. As I look out the window, the world is blanketed in white. The snow covers everything, making the world seem more peaceful.

Snow is a symbol of purity and beauty. It brings us closer to nature and reminds us of the simple pleasures in life. It also helps us remember that life is full of surprises and that sometimes we need to slow down and appreciate the little things.

This year, I have been thinking about the Walk of Fame in Hollywood. It’s a place where all the greats of the film industry are honored with stars on a sidewalk. It’s a place where people can go to see where their favorite actors and actresses have walked.

I’ve been thinking about how much I miss the feeling of the snow on my hands. How it feels to walk through the snow and feel the cold on my face. It’s a feeling that brings me joy and happiness.

I’m also thinking about the beauty of the snow. How it covers everything and makes the world look so peaceful. It’s a reminder that even in the darkest times, there is still beauty to be found.

So, let’s all take a moment to appreciate the beauty of snow. And let’s remember that life is full of surprises and that sometimes we need to slow down and appreciate the little things.

Young Brian Krinke (he'll probably be known around here as "young Brian Krinke" even when he's ninety) is getting good and famous for playing the Violin. He's even played it in St. Anthony Park. There's plenty of snow in the Soviet Union, but I'm just sure that Brian didn't have to worry about it.

Elmer Andersen, the former governor of Minneso-a, can often be seen walking his dog in the walk in St. Anthony Park. Alvin Rogness and Herman Preus, two leaders of Lutheranism, live here too. And Kira Gregersen, the state tennis champ, and E.W. McIirmid, the Sherlock Holmes expert, and Dudley Riggs, the renowned funny guy. Why, even the erstwhile Garrison Keillor used to live here, and has been known to come back to sign a book or two.

I think these famous citizens of our area deserve our recognition. Lots of them are famous in other parts of the country, but we, their neighbors, hardly give them a second look. I think it's time that the community honor these outstanding people the same way they do in Hollywood, with a St. Anthony Park Walk of Fame, a stretch of pavement dedicated to those among us whose fame makes us proud.

The Walk of Fame will be divided into squares, like a regular sidewalk is. But each square will have a big brass star sunk into it, with a picture in the middle representing what the person is famous for. For instance, Ralph Wayne's star will have a picture of a real good-looking cow in the middle, maybe with a big blue ribbon in the background. And Tim Harding's star will have a picture of a coat that has been slashed to ribbons.

Then we would have the mayor dedicate a day in honor of the first selected person. So that, for instance, on Ed Zolda's Day, we would all gather round, and the mayor would make a speech, and the Como High School band would play, and Ed would write his signature in the wet cement, so that his fame would be known throughout the ages, or until a new root busts up through it, whichever comes first.

So now that I have suggested this grand idea, I'm going to put my money where my mouth is by volunteering to be the first person selected. I'll be the one for the site for the St. Anthony Park Walk of Fame. And I will happily be the one to usher the idea through all the red tape. And I will not ignore these famous neighbors long enough, and I believe we owe it to them to make this monument a reality without any undue delay.

I am completely confident that, once all those people have their names immortalized in concrete and brass, they will want to be sure that people can see them. And I am willing to bet that, when snows, each of my famous neighbors will be out there bright and early to shovel off his or her own square.

And I'll never have to do it, ever again!

Commonwealth Ave. neighbors seek agreement on housing

By Kathy Malchow

A public hearing will be held at St. Paul City Hall on Thurs., Jan. 19 at 3:30 p.m. on the request for a Special Condition Use Permit that, if granted, would allow a vacant "cluster housing" development to be built at 2390-2399 Commonwealth Ave.

The hearing has been postponed several times since last fall at the request of the developer, Park II Development, in order to give them and the neighbors time to work out possible changes in the design plans.

Park II Development owners, Dick Schoen and Roger Vik, both long-time St. Anthony Park residents, own the property they want to develop and they live adjacent to it.

The two want to construct three double unit owner-occupied single family residences on the Commonwealth Ave. lots. The plan includes two garages per unit that would face Commonwealth Ave. The units would be in the "over $100,000" price range.

Park II Development applied for a Special Condition Use Permit for "cluster zoning" privileges within the current K3 (residential) zone. All the city's requirements for cluster zoning have been met, the St. Anthony Park Community Council has given its approval, but several neighbors are unhappy.

When the neighbors came before the Community Council's Housing Committee in September, they were concerned about the impact of six additional families living on the block-with the accompanying increased number of cars and traffic. They were concerned about the possibility of alibi landlord renouncing the property. They had questions about the visual impact the new homes would have in the neighborhood. Would they fit in aesthetically? Would they "blend" into the other houses? The neighbors had two key questions: Will they be able to get input in advance of the Community Council's Housing Committee meeting? If they felt the developers had false-ly stated that the neighbors approved, then it would be too late to begin construction, Park II Development asked for, and was granted, postponement of the hearing until Jan. 19.

Since the end of Oct., three of the Schoen and Vik once: two have met with Schoen for the second time. "Our main areas of concern are the roof lines-we want them to be lowered, the landscaping, and the exterior design-which we want to be consistent," said Wauna Lorentzen, one of these neighbors.

Schoen said that as a result of his meetings with the neighbors, the roof lines will be lowered. Many early plans called for heights about four feet higher than those of neighbors. The total height of each unit has been reduced, too, so that now there is more space between each building, he said.

"After our last meeting with Mr. Schoen, it was decided that he was going to prepare final construction plans and a scale model of the housing, including landscaping, for the neighbors to see before the January hearing," Lorentzen said.

In accordance with its requirements, the city will notify all neighbors within 350 ft. of this hearing before the Zoning Committee. Zoning then will make a recommendation to the Planning Commission, which makes the final decision.

Real Estate

WHEN NOT TO USE $125,000 EXEMPTION

Homeowners over age 55 may exclude from gross income any profits up to $125,000 realized on the sale of a principal residence. To qualify for the exclusion, you must be age 55 by the day the residence is sold, and you must have owned the property and used it as a personal residence for at least three of the preceding five years. This tax break can be used only once in a lifetime.

Does this mean that it ALWAYS makes sense to use this tax break if you sell a home for a good profit when you are 55 or older? Not necessarily. This exclusion was made primarily for a retiring couple to sell their old home and buy a small retirement home without having to pay significant capital gains taxes. If you are going to buy another home that will cost as much or more than your present one, it might make more sense to avail yourself of the rollover break, which allows you to defer all the profit from the sale and which can be used as many times as you desire.

If there is anything we can do to help you in the field of real estate, please call Edina Realty, 2780 Snelling Ave. N. Phone: 456-3760. We’re here to help!

Winds to play at Music in the Park concert

The St. Paul Chamber Orchestra Wind Quintet will make its only Twin Cities appearance this year as part of the Music in the Park series' tenth anniversary season on Sun., Jan. 29, at the St. Anthony Park United Church of Christ, 2129 Commonwealth. Music by Anton Reinholds, as well as performances of several new works for wind quintet, will be featured at the 4 p.m. concert to be performed by the principal wind players of the SPCO.

The Music in the Park series has earned a reputation with audiences and music critics alike for top-notch performances and innovative programming. Author and critic H.F. Himmelspacht has a knack for providing premieres of musical works of these concerts, and the program for Sun., Jan. 29, will include four.

In one of those unplanned but serendipitous happenings, Himmelspacht noticed a common thread uniting four of the programmed selections. Not only are they all prequises; they all have a connection with children.

Oberlin teacher and composer Michael Daughters' composition is titled "Mush" in honor of his first child, a daughter born in Nov. The work was commissioned by Music in the Park and funded by the 1989 Composers Commissioning Program of the Minnesota Composers Forum. His music, a mixture of rock, jazz and avant-garde sounds from the 20th century, is described by Musical America as "eclecticism at its best." Daughters will participate in a 3 p.m. pre-concert discussion of his compositions in the church assembly hall.

The public is invited to the event which is free.

A second premiere performance will be "Seven Dedications," a work composed for flutist Julia Bogorad and her husband, bassoonist Charles Ulleberg, by John Castaldo of Philadelphia. Each performance is dedicated to a child born in 1988.

In a 1987 concert of Music in the Park, pianist Paul Schoenfield played a work by the world premier of "Merry Christmas, 1941, for Hope Castagola," by Czech composer Bohuslav Martinu. Written for Julia Bogorad's mother, a little girl whose parents perished in a concentration camp in New York, the piece has been transcribed for wind quintet by Roger Ruggi and will have its premier in that form at the Jan. 29 concert.

The fourth premiere is a wind quintet by Robert J. Madenich of Minneapolis, the first movement of which is entitled, "Beliah Lamentations for March, 1988."

Members of the SPCO Wind Quintet—principal players who also perform frequently as soloists with the orchestras—Timothy Paradise, clarinet; Julia Bogorad, flute; Kathryn Greenbank, oboe; Charles Ulleberg, bassoon; and Herbert Winton, horn. All have appeared previously in the Music in the Park series.

Tickets for the concert are $8, available at The Bibliot Shop (646-5651) and Minnenesota Bookstore (646-5886) in St. Anthony Park or at The Bibliot Shop on Grand Ave. at Lexington (222-0231) in St. Paul. Student rush tickets at concert time are $4. For further information call 644-lated, there were the Pearson children, all seven of them, ready to jump the fence and join them on the playground. Visiting social workers said that the house didn't look like an institution and—the acid test—didn't smell like one either.

During World War II, the population of boarders swelled. Again, they were working mothers, absent fathers, families under stress. You might have heard the grown-ups grumble because they couldn't hire a resident cook for love or money (war jobs paid well and made steep competition). Neighborhood women tried to fill the gap, volunteering their time. Home Finder said, "How would you like the job of mending 25,000 pairs of stockings?" Well, that is what some or all of our friends on Rose Hill (now Lauderdale) have done in the past 10 years. They meet every two weeks and at their last meeting they mended 100 pairs of stockings. These good friends were first brought together by Mrs. C. M. Colby who lives at 1741 Carl St.

You collected scrap metal for the war effort, but mostly you were busy with your friends. You might have invited Donna over to play and stay for supper. Maybe you would be a cookout on the outdoor fireplace built of bricks from the old barn. If you came during World War II, you were one of the very last children to stay at the Jean Brown Reception Home. Times were about to change.

In our Feb. issue you'll be able to read more about the history of our century-old neighborhood. This month a book of the Children's Home Society's history, "One Life at a Time" by Kenneth L. Green, will be available. Come to the CHSM reception desk with a check for $10.50 plus $13.78 (which includes shipping, handling and tax) payable to and mailed to CHSM Centennial Book, 2230 Como Ave., St. Paul, 55108.

Special thanks to Mary Ann Nord and Barbara Crandall of CHSM who provided materials and photographs, and to Kenneth L. Green for the use of the manuscript.
