Oct. 7 will be a day for community fun

Bridge party

We've been driving on it for a couple of months but the Raymond Avenue Bridge will not be "officially" open until the ribbon is cut by Mayor George Latimer at 11 a.m. on Sat., Oct. 7.

Before that magic moment, there will be croquet on the lawn of Green Grass Park from 9-11 a.m. The City Public Works Department and the City Council will meet in tournament there and others will be able to play as well.

All morning, there will be activities of all sorts, for all ages, at South St. Anthony Recreation Center—a moon walk; the WLOL Boom Box; games for the younger set; checkers, cribbage and chess for those who prefer activities a bit more sedentary. Officer McGruff will make an appearance and Como Zoo animals will be on display. There will be free balloons, popcorn and cotton candy, and commemorative T-shirts for sale.

After this panorama of activities in South St. Anthony from 9 a.m.-1 p.m., action will move to Langford Park Recreation Center from 1-6 p.m. Here participants will find free Schoeps ice cream, the KS95 balloon (along with Jim Burnett), the Bacchus puppets, Ronald McDonald, and big band music by the Scotsmen.

The New Neighbors Committee of the St. Anthony Park Association invites anyone who has moved into the neighborhood within the past year to register at their booth and join them for cookies and punch. They will be located at South St. Anthony Rec Center in the morning and Langford Park in the afternoon.

Chili, hot chocolate, and brownies will be served from 3:30-5:30 p.m. at Langford. Profits will help send a group of 72 students from Murray Junior High to the Environmental Learning Center near the town of Finland in north-eastern Minnesota. Formerly located near Isabella, the new Wolf Ridge Center will be the site of environmental, multi-cultural and human relations activities for these students during the last week of November.

By the end of the day the bridge will surely be officially open since people will be walking and driving over it to attend the varied activities. In addition, some will ride over it in the horse-drawn wagon originating at the Oktoberfest at the Como business area.

Oktoberfest

The second annual Oktoberfest will feature all sorts of lively fall fun Sat., Oct. 7 at the corner of Como & Carter, planned by the St. Anthony Park Merchants and Professionals Association.

Entertainment will be by the Sass Band (which includes Bob Vanelli, formerly of 4 Seasons Cheese Shop). They will play Back-to-the-'50s, rock-and-roll, and you-name-it. There will be street dancing, square dancing by the Roseville Squares, plus the return of the Clan Tartan who performed Gaelic dances and did folkart on the library lawn last year.

Carriage rides will be provided for city dignitaries going to and from the Raymond Avenue bridge ribbon cutting, as well as free rides for others along Como Ave. to the bridge and circling back to the Como/Carter area.

The Learning Square will offer free face painting and balloons. Watch for the informal style show using local models, sponsored by The Bibelot and the Villa Sportswear.

Pine Tree Orchards will provide apples and apple products as well as an apple pressing demonstration at Sherman's Bakery.

Restaurants in the area will have special Oktoberfest menus and Speedy Market is providing a tasting sampler. Free popcorn and candy floss will be provided by O'Donnell's Cleaners.

"Class of the Brass" to open Music in the Park

By Florence Chambers

An official proclamation by Mayor George Latimer declares Sept. 15-Oct. 15 to be Arts Month in the City of St. Paul. The opening concert of the Music in the Park Series on Sun., Oct. 8 is St. Anthony Park's contribution to the month's artistic events. Performers at the 4 p.m. recital in St. Anthony Park United Church of Christ, 2129 Commonwealth Ave., are the members of the New York-based Saturday Brass Quintet: Terry Szor and Scott McIntosh, trumpets; Lawrence DiBello, horn; Richard Kessler, trombone and Kyle Turner, tuba, each of them a graduate of a top-ranked conservatory of music.

A recognized leader in Arts-in-Education, SBQ is currently in residence at the Manhattan School of Music. Performing a repertoire from medieval suites to contemporary works, the Saturday Brass Quintet has given over 500 performances to enthusiastic reviews: "talented...virtuosic...young and immensely gifted...unusually brilliant...the class of the brass." Concerts during the 1988-89 and 1989-90 seasons include Houston Friends of Music, University of California at Los Angeles, Merkin Concert Hall and Carnegie Hall in New York City, and two 50-concert tours of the United States and Canada. The quintet regularly performs on various radio programs nationwide and following their concert here will record with Bill McLaughlin for a future St. Paul Sunday Morning broadcast.

The varied program Saturday Brass Quintet has scheduled for Music in the Park will include three 16th century Venetian Canzoni; a Bach Prelude and Fugue and Paul Hindemith's "Morning Music," as well as two Minnesota premieres of works commissioned by and for the Saturday Brass Quintet. One of the latter is "Magnum Mysterium" by Pulitzer Prize-winning composer John Harbison. The other composition is

Election report

Voters went to the polls for the St. Paul city primary on Sept. 12 (well, at least some voters went) to select candidates for the Nov. 7 general election. In Ward 4, which includes St. Anthony Park, 31 percent of registered voters cast ballots, slightly more than the 25 percent who voted in St. Paul as a whole.

Ward 4 city council candidates will be Paula Maccabee and Kiki Sonnen. St. Paul School Board contenders for three open seats will be Gregory A. Filice, William "Corkey" Finney, Joseph "Jeff" Levy, Becky Montgomery, Mary Jane Rachner, and Eleanor E. Weber. Candidates for St. Paul mayor are Robert Fletcher and James Scheibel.

On Tues., Oct. 10, the St. Anthony Park Association meeting features a double debate. Scheibel and Fletcher will face off, as will Sonnen and Maccabee. The League of Women Voters will moderate the debate. In addition, Alice Hausman and Joy Albrecht, candidates for the District 63B House seat will be present.

The Saint Paul Area Chamber of Commerce and its community leadership program, Leadership Saint Paul, will hold a debate between City Council candidates Maccabee and Sonnen at noon on Wed., Oct. 11 at Midland Hills, 2001

Fulham St., Roseville. The event will be co-sponsored by the Midway Civic & Commerce Association.

A similar debate between St. Paul School Board candidates will be held on Fri., Oct. 13, at 7:30 a.m., at the Saint Paul Area Chamber offices at 600 NCL Tower, 445 Minnesota St., downtown St. Paul.

The St. Anthony Park Community Council, along with Como Park, Midway Coalition, Merriam Park, Lexington-Hamline and Snelling-Hamline will sponsor a mayoral and city council candidate forum at Como Park Senior High School, 740 Rose Ave. W., on Thurs., Oct. 12, 7-9 p.m. Moderator will be Joanne Englund, president of the League of Women Voters of St. Paul. The event will be televised live by Continental Cablevision, Channel 10. For more information, call 644-3889 or 292-7884.

Candidates for Minnesota House of Representatives District 63B (an area bounded roughly by Larpenetour, the western St. Paul city limits, Marshall Ave., Lexington Pkwy., and Hoyt) will be Joy Albrecht (IR) and Alice Hausman (DFL).

Residents of St. Paul can register at the polls or call the St. Paul Election Bureau (298-4181) by Oct. 17 to request a registration form prior to the election. Students who need to register should realize that registering before the Oct. 17 deadline allows them to register without official identification. Registering at the polls does require such identification and means that students who choose to use their college address are declaring that address as their legal one.

In Falcon Heights, the election will choose people for two open seats on the Falcon Heights City Council. Candidates are Paul Ciernia, Phil Chenoweth (both incumbents), and Sue Gehrz.

In Lauderdale, incumbent Willard Anderson and Lee J. Peterson are running for mayor and three people have filed for two city council positions. They are Jeffrey E. Dains, Kari Johnson and Cindy Wheeler.

Council actions at a glance

Actions in September:

- Authorized the preparation of a Neighborhood Partnership Program pre-application to target the Energy Park Drive/Raymond Avenue intersection and to form a committee to plan the project and decide whether a formal application should be made.
- Voted to recommend to Public Works that 4-way stop signs be placed at the intersection of Keston and Doswell as requested by the neighbors.
- Approved the formation of a city-wide District Council Forum in which the St. Anthony Park Community Council would participate strongly and aggressively to work on issues of common concern.
- Approved a major variance for Johnson Brothers, 2341 University Avenue, to allow unloading and loading in a public right-of-way.

The St. Anthony Park (District 12) Community Council is a group of 21 citizens elected to serve the District 12 area of St. Paul, including residents of St. Anthony Park, and representatives of commerce and industry. It is one of 17 citizen participation councils in the city.

The council meets the Wednesday after the first Thursday of every month. All meetings are open to the public. Check for location.

Free weatherization kit offered with energy audit

Maybe you were too busy. Perhaps you lost the energy audit request card that NSP sent you. You had one done during the energy crisis of the '70s, but have moved since then and haven't had your new house audited. Or maybe you always intended to do it but somehow just never got around to it.

Whatever your reason, home energy audits are still the best first step in cutting your energy bills and increasing your comfort. This fall the St. Anthony Park Community Council, in cooperation with the Neighborhood Energy Consortium and NSP, is encouraging area residents to sign up for an energy audit by giving away a free weatherization kit to the first 50 households to call in a request. The kit includes a caulking gun and one tube of caulking, a package of weatherstripping, and a pair of window pulley draft seals. Retail value of the kit is about $12.

Your home energy audit will give you information on how you can increase your comfort by doing a few simple things like caulking and weatherstripping. Your auditor will show you how and where to apply these materials for maximum effectiveness. You will receive cost and savings estimates for major weatherization of your attic, walls, and basement.

The safety and efficiency of your heating plant is another important aspect of a home energy audit. Every year people become sick or die as a result of failed heating systems. Your auditor will test your furnace or boiler and advise you of its efficiency and condition. You will also learn what can be done to make your heating system more efficient, and what the cost and savings of a new system would be.

Who is eligible for this energy audit/weatherization kit offer? Any home owner or renter of a one- to four-unit dwelling in the St. Anthony Park neighborhood. The $10 audit fee will be billed to the account owner of the property by NSP.

Since the federal government no longer requires utilities to provide these audits to their customers, they may not be available forever. Now is a great time to request your home energy audit and free weatherization kit. Just call the St. Anthony Park Community Council at 292-7884.

No go for "basketweave" stop signs

"Basketweave" stop signs in the area west of Como received no support from neighbors who attended the Aug. 23 meeting of the Housing Committee. Robb Lageson spoke for the neighbors and indicated that the "basketweave" approach recommended by the Department of Public Works would make traffic problems worse on Doswell if Keston were to have stop signs. Lageson said the proposal would result in "fast traffic" on Doswell and requested that DPW place four-way stop signs at the intersection.

Karl Johnson, Traffic Engineer, stated the policy of the department is to create a four-way stop when 250 cars per hour are counted. The recent count on Keston was 568 cars per day; on Doswell E of Keston 800 per day, on Doswell W of Keston 300 per day. DPW views Keston as the more heavily used through street. Johnson stated that stop signs would not address the issue of speed.

The neighbors who attended the meeting indicated that the policy used by DPW does not address the concerns for the safety of the many small children in the area.

Essentially, the decision by the Community Council to support the four-way stop means that the area will see no changes this season and the uncontrolled intersections will remain.

Compost site opens

The St. Anthony Park Community Council compost site will open the last weekend of September and the first three weekends of October. Residents of St. Anthony Park may bring leaves and grass clippings (no brush) to the site located on Robbins between Bayless and Manvel. It will be open 10 a.m.-4 p.m. Sept. 30 and Oct. 1, Oct. 7 & 8, Oct. 14 & 15, and Oct. 21 & 22. There is no charge for dumping or for taking compost.

Gardens win award

The St. Anthony Park Community Gardens won a Governor's Recognition Award on Sun., Sept. 10, at the second annual Minnesota Green Celebrate Gardening Day. The event, sponsored by the Minnesota State Horticultural Society, was held at the College of St. Thomas. Garden Chairperson, Lori Shuster, accepted the award.

One of 15 presented in the state, the award was made for "outstanding contribution in helping to revitalize the community environment and sharing in the ideas of the Minnesota Green Program."

This year 64 families share their gardening at the site located on Robbins. The gardeners held their annual Harvest Dinner on Sept. 26 at the South St. Anthony Park Rec Center.

Neighborhood Partnership proposal planned

The St. Anthony Park Community Council will prepare a Neighborhood Partnership proposal to upgrade the area of Energy Park Drive and Raymond Avenue now that the Raymond Avenue bridge is nearing completion.

A planning committee consisting of residents and business people will meet prior to the submission of the pre-application due October 2 to design the project elements, decide a dollar amount to be requested, and identify how the public dollars will be matched by neighborhood contributions.

Initial discussions have identified several elements that may be included in the project - street lighting and landscaping, creation of green space on a parcel of land resulting from the realignment of Energy Park Drive, residential rehabilitation in the Everett Court residential area, and a small business assisstance loan fund to encourage the development of office and retail space on the northeast and southwest corners of the intersection.

The Council has supported the development of Park Crossing, a retail center, on the northwest corner and a 16-unit housing development on the southeast corner. Wellington Management is the designated developer for both of these projects.

The NPP design committee will include Bill Anderson, Mel Boynton, Phil Broussard, Quentin Elliott, Leslie Garrett, Sandra Jacobs, David Liset, and Alice Magnuson. There is still room for one or two more interested volunteers. Call the St. Anthony Park Community Council office, 292-7884, if you are interested in the future development of this vital intersection.

LRT won't happen soon, but it is probably coming

By Kathy Malchow

About 30 people attended a public forum in Falcon Heights in Sept. to get an update on plans for Light Rail Transit (LRT). Discussion centered on the proposed Northwest and Midway Corridors - the two nearest Falcon Heights and St. Anthony Park.

Although six corridors are recommended, the Ramsey County Railroad Authority (RCRRA) shies away from recommending a specific alignment within each corridor. In the Midway Corridor, possible alignments are I-94, University Ave., and Burlington Northern right-of-way/Pierce Butler Route. A combination of these is also being studied.

Several questions were raised at the forum, especially about University Ave. Would LRT on University Ave. be a plus or minus for businesses? Would it merely replace the buses? How many stations would there be and where would they be? What would the stations look like? These and many more queries are just starting to be addressed in a 14-month study, which will result in naming a single preferred alignment in the Midway Corridor. This corridor has been identified as having top priority in the Twin Cities' LRT plan with an estimated ridership of 33,000-47,000 per day.

The second priority corridor is the Northwest, which is roughly aligned with Snelling Ave. headed toward Arden Hills. Projected ridership there is estimated at 16,000 per day. Four possible alignments were pointed out at the forum by Kathy DeSpiegelaere, RCRRA's director of LRT planning. A Snelling Ave. track is one plan (this would serve Rosedale and Har Mar). Fairview Ave., 35-W, and a possible alignment running through the State Fairgrounds and the University's agricultural fields are also being considered. DeSpiegelaere said discussions are going on with University officials, who "haven't ruled out going through the ag fields."

Funding for the estimated $800 million project was also discussed. Questions were raised about how the strictly urban LRT could be promoted to outstate Legislators. Funding could also come through a motor vehicle tax, a fuel tax, or a payroll tax.

This forum was one of a series held by the RCRRA to publicize its draft plan on LRT corridors in Ramsey County. The plan is now being circulated to the public; it will be finalized in November.

De Spiegelaere said three years from now is the earliest any sort of construction would start, "if everything goes right."

The Saturday Brass Quintet opens Music in the Park's concert series on Sunday, October 8.

Music from 1

"Urban Dances" by 33-year-old Richard Denielpour, whose work has been described as "music of large sweep and romantic expression" which "speaks to the heart as well as to the mind."

A "surprise" addition to the program will commemorate the grand opening of the new Raymond Avenue Bridge—to be celebrated at a gala St. Anthony Park neighborhood party the day before the concert. In honor of the grand old landmark, now elegant and new, the Saturday Brass Quintet will play "Landmark Fanfare" by Minnesota composer Stephen Paulus.

Season tickets for the Series, at $37 (regular subscription) and $35 (senior, student, MPR members), are available at The Bibelot Shop (646-5651) and Micawber's Bookstore (646-5506). Single tickets for the Saturday Brass Quintet are $9 (student rush at concert time, $5). Group rates are available. For information, call 644-4234.

POST CONCERT BUFFET SUPPER AT THE MUFFULETTA

The Music in the Park Series Board of Directors invites audience members to join them, along with members of the Saturday Brass Quintet, for a buffet supper following the opening concert. Cost: $10 per person. A check received by Oct. 3 included with ticket orders will ensure reservations. Send orders to Music in the Park Series, 1333 Chelmsford St., St. Paul, MN 55108, or call 644-4234.

Friends!

10% of the cost of bringing you the Bugle comes directly from you. Your contributions make the difference between a paper that's barely adequate and the award-winning paper in your hands right now.

Our goal this year is $12,000. This is the money needed to bring you photos that are better, stories that are better, and most of all, buy the extra space needed to bring you as much news as possible. In the publishing business, money means space—which means that your contributions buy more room on these pages to fill with stories, events, calendars, columns, photos and more.

Please help make the difference that makes the Bugle so special. Thanks for your support.

The return of the community school

Things change in schools—not just the nature of material covered in some classes, not just the instructional methods, not just the variety in the student body. Names change, organizational styles change.

This issue announces the death of Gyda Guttersen Plette. Guttersen School, for many years the elementary school in the area, was named for her father. Before it had her father's name it was called Murray School. But the name "Murray" was transferred to the new school in 1925. Residents of St. Anthony Park rejoiced at having another community school.

Murray is still a community school but in 1989 "community" has different a definition and different possibilities. The school now receives students from 28 elementary schools. Just as television and FAX machines challenge and expand our definition of the size of the world, the variety of students who compose Murray's student body, kids from all parts of the city and from many parts of the world, forces us to expand our definition of community.

This fall, Murray is taking conscious steps to become more community-based. Now it will not be only the science-math specialty of the school which attracts students. Now the school will not be known only for its excellent program for helping students at risk. Now Murray will be on the cutting-edge of community-based education.

School-based management, which will be beginning at Murray this month, has the potential for improving Murray (already good by any standard) by placing the responsibility for what goes on there in the hands of the people who know best what to do—the staff, parents, community and students. Decisions which have been made at a district level will now be made at a local level. In school-based management, the district sets the educational goals—the what of education—but the individual school (Murray in this case) decides the how.

What a grand possibility for teaching decision-making by consensus. How heartening to have our neighborhood school staff and parents recognizing and accepting their own accountability. How refreshing to see a model of decentralization in action, when so much of the world seems daily to be becoming more centralized.

We wish Murray's school-based management council well. We trust the parents will elect serious and responsible representatives on Oct. 16. We know the Murray staff is ready and eager to make the system work. It's clear that Murray would not be in its present role without the intense interest of a few community leaders and the perseverance of Principal John McManus.

We're glad to have this community school in our midst. We're glad it's on its way to becoming even more of a community school. The people who moved the Murray name from the grade school on Como 60 years ago would approve, we're sure.

Who will ride light rail transit?

Hardly anyone I know gets in a car in the morning, goes to one destination, stays there all day, and then comes directly home. Most of my friends and acquaintances flit from place to place all day and all evening in their cars. And I can think of barely a handful who have downtown Minneapolis or St. Paul as their roost for the day. People I know go from Stillwater to St. Anthony Park, from north Minneapolis to Golden Valley, from north Minneapolis to Roseville, or from St. Anthony Park to Highland Park, for example. LRT in the Midway Corridor (the top priority route) or in any of the other proposed corridors would be of no use to any of these folks. Are we so different from the "normal" population of the Twin Cities? Or are workday habits changing?

I think the latter is true. Most of us have days scheduled tightly with different appointments here and there so that riding on LRT wouldn't be a feasible choice, unless it came to our door every few minutes and dropped us off exactly where we wanted to go. Which is another way of saying we are spoiled by the instant availability of our cars to take us around at the drop of a hat.

Serious thinking needs to be done by those planning LRT to determine where riders need to go and whether those not now riding buses would ride the rails. The currently planned corridors radiate from the two downtowns, which may no longer be where most workers gravitate.

Many of us just wouldn't wait for LRT. We leave at the last possible minute to drive the kids to karate class or to take the paper to be printed in Shakopee. Maybe LRT is someone's way of telling us we need to slow down? Most people I know aren't about to do it.

When I was a kid I ate Cheerios for breakfast. Period. No other breakfast cereal would pass my lips. The motivation for this exclusivity was the Lone Ranger. I watched the Lone Ranger on TV every day without fail. The program was sponsored by Cheerios, and it had been since time immemorial. I can remember sitting in front of our upright floor model radio in the living room of our little house in 1953, before we had a TV, and listening to the Lone Ranger, whose mighty "Hiyo Silver!" was even then sponsored by Cheerios.

The Cheerios boxes had cut-out masks of the Lone Ranger and Tonto and Butch Cavendish on the backs. I must have collected several dozen of each in my youth. I was loyal. I was part of the team. I imagined that the Lone Ranger probably ate Cheerios from a box with MY picture on the back, so much a part of the team was I.

Sure, it was just a trick to get me to buy Cheerios. But I didn't care. I loved it. It was a trick that made sense. Cheerios and the Lone Ranger, the Lone Ranger and Cheerios, they belonged together.

Not so these days. A casual stroll through the aisles of Speedy Market will tell you that our nation's big food producers have now stooped to cheap sensationalism to try to get us to buy their grub. Even Cheerios is not above such despicable trickery. A recent Cheerios box had a picture of a BMX bike on the front, leading one to believe that if one were to buy the cereal, one would get a bike. Oh, it might require saving a few box tops, like about twenty-one hundred box tops, but so what.

Well, here's so what. The offer was not for a neat bike. The offer was for a CHANCE to get a neat bike. Now that's a big difference, and a sneaky one, too. Back when I was a kid, at least I was assured that I would actually GET a cut-out mask with every box of Cheerios I got. Granted, a cardboard mask of a TV character, hacked out of the box with round-edge scissors and tied to my face with string was no BMX bike. But at least I knew I would get it. The chance of a kid winning a bike, as stated by law right there on the box in teeny-tiny print, is one in a double-jillion. So every kid who whines loud enough in the aisles at Speedy Market to get his mom to buy Cheerios thinks that he or she is going to be the big winner, the one in a double-jillion. The kid mails in the entry form and waits for the mail every day for the next eighteen months and finally concedes defeat. So the bottom line is that every box of Cheerios comes with a bad case of disappointment free inside.

And what does a BMX bike have to do with Cheerios anyway? Nothing. The bike is just bait.

What becomes clearly evident is that the giant food companies have lost faith in their products. They apparently don't believe that it is enough anymore to be able to say, "Buy our cereal because it is a good cereal." Apparently "Eat Cheerios and be content with your breakfast" is just not catchy enough to make it as an advertising slogan anymore. Now it's "Buy Cheerios and you may win the fantasy item of your particular demographic group!" We don't buy groceries anymore, we buy lottery tickets. And with each and every lottery ticket we buy, we get a free bonus — breakfast cereal!

Buy these sandwich bags and you may win a brand new Jeep Cherokee! Try our bathroom tissue and you and your family might just possibly (but we doubt it) win a trip to Walt Disney World! Buy this instant oatmeal and qualify to be the one person on the entire planet to win a ride in the Fuji blimp!

The Fuji blimp? What does that have to do with oatmeal?

Well, I'm no fool (contrary to what you might hear). I know when to climb on board. I can play the game. After all, I'm selling something here too, make no mistake. I'm selling newspaper articles, good ones, funny ones. High quality product. But I realize that it is no longer sufficient to just say, "Read this story, I think you might like it." I can't have titles anymore that sound like, "My Enjoyable Day at the Library." I've got to get with the trend. So here goes.

Happy birthday, Children's Home Society

There were lots of kids (over 1,000, in fact) at Langford Park on Sept. 9 for the hundredth birthday blowout of Children's Home Society of Minnesota.

Lt. Governor Marlene Johnson observed, "Children's Home Society of Minnesota has recognized for the past century what some people are just starting to understand: that our future depends on our children."

Be informed before you decide St. Paul's future!

MAJOR DEBATE:

The Oct. 10 meeting of the St. Anthony Park Association features a double debate. Come and hear these candidates debate the issues they stand for, have an opportunity to ask questions (idea: bring written questions with you), and actually meet those individuals running for public office. Decide for yourself, based on "full information," just who your choice will be.

Jim Scheibel and Bob Fletcher face off as the mayoral candidates in this fall's election. Having won the primary from a large field of candidates, these two will offer their ideas on the issues facing the city of St. Paul.

Kiki Sonnen and Paula Maccabee are the candidates for the Ward 4 city council position. Obtain information on their respective stands on the issues, find out about their qualifications, and hear their ideas for solutions to problems in the 4th Ward.

The League of Women Voters will be the moderator for this debate.

In addition to four debaters, Alice Hausman and Joy Albrecht, candidates for District 63B State Representative, will be present. Have an opportunity to meet them as well. These are sure to be rousing debates. A good political time will be had by all.

This is how it will work:
5:30 sign in for dinner
6:00 dinner
6:50 brief business meeting
7:00 mayoral debate

7:45 break
7:50 council debate

REMEMBER:

- turn in membership forms
- FREE babysitting during dinner and meeting
- advise Mary Ann Bernard and Phil Frickey (new neighbor co-chairs) of any new folks in your area.

A new way to govern schools?

School-based management comes to the Park

By Mary Mergenthal

"Lots of us love the theory, but trying to put it into practice is no simple matter," said Dr. Hope Lea, principal of St. Anthony Park Elementary School. The theory about which she speaks is that of school-based management, an idea that would make people in the area of a school responsible for managing and determining direction of a community school.

"When I first read about it, I said, 'Wow! This looks great,' but then when we started looking at it in terms of practicality it no longer looked so possible." In a school the size of St. Anthony Park, Dr. Lea asserts she'd need a business manager just to survive.

There are many restrictions on the school district budget from various labor contracts and commitments to unified purchasing which would not disappear. That would mean that the amount of discretionary money for individual schools would not be as large as some might imagine. Dr. Lea emphasizes that observers must recognize that it simply is more economical to buy supplies and books for the entire system and that by acting on a system-wide basis, more expert help can be retained.

St. Paul Superintendent Bennett has been trying to phase in some parts of school-based management, Dr. Lea says. But it's important to realize, she continued, that the theory would not bring about some sort of panacea largely because 85-90% of the district's budget is tied up with personnel, most of whom are protected by seniority agreements. A district committee is currently looking at the idea to see what would really be feasible, what would be helpful and what would, in fact, be harmful to the education of St. Paul's children.

But the hopes for school-based management are considerably different at St. Anthony Park's other school, Murray Junior High. There Principal John McManus sees school-based management as a way to involve the community and parents in schools, as democracy in process. Murray started the process in 1984 when Ann Bulger and Penny Challey and others asked that Murray be considered as a pilot school for the approach.

"The trust level has to be high," McManus says. "The superintendent has to be in favor of it and be willing to appoint the task forces necessary to examine the concept."

McManus went before the St. Paul School Board a year ago to urge approval. The Teacher Federation claimed that there would not be sufficient teacher input and so the board held back for awhile. Then came a movement for more teacher governance.

Last November the school board agreed to designate six pilot schools by the spring of 1989. Murray was one of them. The proposal insisted that 75 percent of the complete staff would have to approve the two-year project in each site; allowed $6000 for training of faculty, community and parents at Murray; and set enough limits to assure that the hiring of teachers, choice of textbooks and building maintenance could be part of the approach as long as there was no infringement on present teacher contracts.

In a spring interview, McManus was hopeful but still could not say for sure whether all systems would be go for Murray to begin school-based management this fall. Now all is in place. Parents vote for their five representatives on the school-based management council at a special Oct. 16 meeting to be held at the school at 7 p.m. as part of the fall open house. Parents should have received a self-nomination form in the school newsletter. At the open house, candidates will be introduced and voting will take place.

More than the required 75 percent of teachers, teacher aides, educational assistants, cooks and custodians have already given their approval. Staff members of the School-based Decision Making Council will be John Bland, science teacher; Ann Bulger, volunteer coordinator; Pat Cherrier, social studies instructor and building union representative; David Hagman, special education; Millie Hanson, custodian; and Linda Wolf, health teacher.

The council will also include two administrators and two ex-officio student positions.

The council will begin by reviewing the constitution, determining necessary training, conducting a needs assessment, and making budgeting decisions.

Looking ahead, on a day-to-day basis 7th and 8th graders may not notice any immediate difference in what's expected and what happens. But before long, advocates of the approach are convinced that parent participation in decision making will benefit the programs and the implementation of those programs at Murray.

Recycle plastic at Goodwill

The Goodwill-Easter Seal donation center at Hwy. 280 & Como Ave. in St. Anthony Park is now accepting plastic containers for recycling.

Plastic detergent bottles, milk jugs, pop bottles, anti-freeze containers and oil containers may be dropped off there (or at any of ten other locations in other parts of the Twin Cities area). The containers must be rinsed. They may be dropped off between 10 a.m. and 6 p.m. seven days a week.

Park people visit Uruguay

By Michelle Christianson

Many times people feel that as individuals they are insignificant and can have no effect on international relations. But for Kiki Gore, this summer provided an opportunity to add a building block to world peace by living in and learning about the people of Uruguay.

Gore, who has taught the Spanish language for 35 years, brought six students (including her son Paul) to Montevideo, Uruguay, for one month. The trip was sponsored by the Partners of the Americas program, an outgrowth of the Alliance for Progress established by President Kennedy in 1961. This 25-year-old organization has paired cities, states or counties in the U.S. with partner locations in South American countries in order to exchange technology, agriculture, medicine, sports, artistic expressions, but most of all understanding between the two continents.

To promote this understanding, students from Uruguay have come to Minnesota in the winter (during their summer vacation) for the last three years while Twin Cities' students lived with Uruguayan families during our summer. This summer Gore acted as part-chaperone, part-ambassador while arranging speaking engagements, tutoring sessions, and side trips for the students.

The young people all lived with families who cared for them as one of their own children. This allowed the Americans to truly experience Uruguayan daily life. In addition, they each interviewed 20 South American students about the country so that those students could practice their English (which also provided insights into differing views and opinions for the North Americans). The Minnesotans spoke with students in all kinds of schools - public, private, group homes, orphanages - and found that they were more alike than different from their Uruguayan counterparts.

One difference they did note was that everyone in Uruguay was much more interested and involved in politics. Gore theorizes that this is because they are a new democracy and unsure of the stability of their system, whereas we have become somewhat complacent because of the strength and dependability of our political system.

The most valuable part of the trip for Gore was to see the way the Uruguayan families connected with the American kids - the "instant bonding" that took place. She quotes one of the parents: "We used to think that we were a family of four, but now we know that we are a family of five."

"These people made a commitment to accept a stranger as a family member," says Gore. What better way to sum up a solution to world problems than to accept people from other nations as our kin.

(The organization Partnership for the Americas has a local chapter and Gore encourages others to get involved.)

Paul Gore of St. Anthony Park (center) enjoyed his month-long visit with Uruguayan families this summer. He went on the trip with his mother, Kiki, as part of the Partners of the Americas program.

Dear Block Nurse,

Who would have thought that from a scratch on my foot a large sore would develop that doesn't want to heal. It now involves my entire foot and lower leg a whole year later. I have to go back into the hospital because it is infected again and I'm scheduled to see another specialist because my physician is concerned about the possibility of amputation. I wish I would have known one year ago what I now know.

Many foot problems can be prevented. The best way to help your feet is to protect them. The ability of your feet to stay healthy and wound-free is influenced by decreased blood circulation and loss of sensation or feeling, as well as by changes that affect the way you walk.

The bony structure of your feet can change as you age, especially if you have arthritis. The size of your feet can change if you experience swelling of your feet due to a variety of reasons. The comfortable shoe size worn for many years may become uncomfortable causing red pressure marks, blisters and open sores.

People with poor circulation in their extremities or those who have diabetes have an increased risk of developing foot problems. These two conditions can cause obstructions in arteries that reduce blood flow to the legs and feet. The diabetic individual may have sensation changes due to nerve damage known as neuropathy, creating decreased sensitivity to pain and pressure in the legs and feet. Elderly people may experience sensation changes in their lower legs and feet due to poor circulation, which places them at risk for foot problems.

Here are some guidelines that can make a difference and prevent foot problems: (1) Inspect your feet and legs every day; (2) Keep legs and feet clean, dry and moisturized; (3) Dress your feet properly in comfortable, well-made shoes; (4) Protect feet from injury by dressing them properly and not exposing them to temperature extremes; (5) Increase circulation by regular walking or exercising daily; (6) Call for help when you can't inspect your own feet properly, or if signs of redness, puffiness, pain, pus-like drainage, red streaking, fever or chills are noted.

For information about the Block Nurse Program, call 642-9052. Questions to this column may be sent to BNP, 2267 Hillside, St. Paul, MN 55108.

UNUSUAL NEW SCIENCE COMPUTER SYSTEM INSTALLED AT MURRAY
Murray Junior High science teacher, John Bland, left, gets final pointers from Raffy Freudenberger and Nedav Kedem before they return to Israel. Murray has just installed a state-of-the-art science teaching system using some 30 computer terminals. The system was designed by the Israelis and is in use in only one other place in the United States—Rochester, N.Y. Students answer questions at individual terminals about elements of science chosen by their teacher. At the same time, a laser terminal allows them to see full-color video photography on a large screen of the scientific element they are studying.

School News

Falcon Heights Elementary

Plans are well under way for the new school playground at 1393 W. Garden Ave. The first phase of construction will begin in October on a tower structure with climbing wall and cargo net. All this is possible because of contributions and fundraisers that in six months have brought in $24,000 for the project. Financial contributions have come from Roseville VFW, Falcon Heights Lauderdale Lions, North Suburban Kiwanis Club, Rosetown Post American Legion, Roseville Rotary Club, the City of Falcon Heights, School District 623 and the North Suburban Youth Association.

One thousand dollars was raised at the school's "Pennies from Heaven" event in the spring, when students were asked to bring pennies to cover the school's gymnasium floor. At another school fundraiser, coin week, $1,300 was collected. Recycling cans, which continued through the summer, netted $2,500. The monetary goal for completing all phases of the project is $40,000. Roseville Area School district contributed $5,000, earmarked for the handicapped accessible portion of the playground.

Kirsten Eckberg is chairperson of the playground committee. She is the parent of a student at the school and a teacher in the district.

Murray Junior High

Cathy Wick, math teacher, was selected by the Woodrow Eilson Institute on High School Mathematics to participate in "Curriculum for Algebra I" at Princeton University in July. The four-week institute helped 49 math teachers across the country develop new curriculum for use in their math courses and prepared them to introduce new concepts in algebra.

Last summer, Wick was selected to attend math history courses at Oxford University in Cambridge, England. She used the math history in her math classes at Murray to help students understand certain concepts and the development of math and science. "I had the students work on math history projects as another aspect of math class," she said. "Math isn't just learning about numbers."

She was nominated for a Presidential Award for excellence in math and science teaching by parents, students and other teachers at Murray as well.

"She's certainly an excellent teacher," said John McManus, Murray's principal. "She's an authority on cooperative learning, then taught it to the other teachers here. The students think very highly of her abilities."

Central High School

Central has a new principal, Nadya Parker, formerly an assistant principal for three years at the school. Ms. Parker is a native of Panama but has been in the U. S. for twenty-five years. She is a graduate of St. John's University, New York City, and also attended Pace College in White Plains, N.Y., and CUNY (City University of New York). She heard good things about the Minnesota school system during her college years and wanted to come here, she said. "I have always been impressed with the progressive education in Minnesota. And I feel this is the best place in the U.S. to raise a family." She has taught in the New York City public schools and at Washington Junior High, Hazel Park, and Humboldt High in St. Paul. Her background is teaching French and Spanish.

Parker said she is excited about Central's range of programs, citing Quest and International Baccalaureate as two of the school's specialties.

Central's homecoming will be celebrated on Wed., Oct. 18 with a football game against Como High School and a dance, beginning at 7 p.m. There will be no classes on Oct. 19 & 20 because of state teachers' meetings.

St. Anthony Park Elementary

Over 600 children now attend St. Anthony Park Elementary—that's up from last year's numbers. Two new teachers have joined the faculty: Becky Lime, a special education teacher, and Deborah Feinwecks, speech therapist.

During the week of Oct. 9-13, 180 fifth and sixth graders will make the annual trek to the Environmental Learning Center. This is the second year for the new center called Wolf Ridge, near Finland, Minn. on the north shore. It costs each child $130 for the week-long learning experience. In order to raise money, the children are selling Happenings books for $21 ($7 of which goes to the ELC fund). Anyone wishing to buy one of these coupon books or give a direct contribution for an ELC trip may contact the school at 293-8735.

Como Senior High

Como has a new principal, too. Joan Sorenson is well-known for her interest in community involvement, a priority which staff and parents at Como know will serve the school well. She's previously demonstrated that talent at Washington Junior High, the Open School, and many other St. Paul schools. She's already meeting with parent advisory groups from Murray and Washington Junior High Schools, feeder schools for Como.

Como senior, May Kao Yang, gained fame as well as experience last year when she spent her junior year in Germany. She was one of five Minnesota students, out of 1000 applicants, to be chosen for the Congress-Bundestag program which offers a one-year fully paid scholarship to students in the U.S. as well as the Federal Republic of Germany to experience a cross-cultural exchange. Since the Congress-Bundestag Program is funded jointly by the American Congress and the German Bundestag (one of Germany's ruling houses), the opportunity to learn about the German government was possible.

May Kao Yang is the only Hmong student in this country who has ever won the competition. She is a first-generation American who was born in Laos. She feels that her Congress-Bundestag was an experience of a lifetime. She now feels that she recognizes how little the world knows of its neighbors. She has concluded that people from different countries only really know each other when they experience each other's cultures.

Park residents involved in drafting historic county document

Ray Faricy, chairperson of the Ramsey County Charter Commission, is shown with commission members from St. Anthony Park—Ann Copeland and Beverly McKinnell—as they review the draft of the first county constitution (home rule charter) ever written in Minnesota.

For the past two years, a unique group of Ramsey County residents has been writing a constitution-like document that could change the way county government is run in Ramsey County. This historic document is a Home Rule Charter, and it is unique because it is the first county charter ever written in the State of Minnesota. After hundreds of hours volunteered by Charter Commission members, a draft of the Ramsey County Charter is ready for public review and comment. The commission members are seeking community input to the drafting process and will hold a series of neighborhood public meetings during October.

The main reason for having a home rule charter is to provide greater local decision-making authority. Currently, much of the authority to conduct the business of the county comes from the state legislature; adoption of a county charter would allow more of these local decisions to be made by the local county board. The charter will also provide for much more citizen input into the decisions made by the county board.

The October public meetings will provide an opportunity for input from the citizens of Ramsey County on the issues the Charter raises. Comments and suggestions from these meetings and any written comments received by the Charter Commission by Nov. 6, 1989, will be used in preparing the final draft of the charter. Ramsey County residents will then have an opportunity to vote on adopting the Charter in the 1990 November general election.

Members of the Ramsey County Charter Commission were selected in a two-step process. First, names of potential members were submitted by Ramsey County legislators, then 17 members were selected to serve on the commission by the judges in Ramsey County. Ray Faricy of St. Paul chairs the commission; other members are Robert Beutel, Dana Brandt, Ann Copeland, Steve Dress, Dean Fenner, Beverley Hawkins, Tom Kelley, Milto Knoll, William Langlois, Lou McKenna, Beverly McKinnell, James Schmitz, Emily Seesel, Virginia Sykes, and Mark Vaught.

Copies of the charter will be available to Ramsey County residents prior to the 1990 election, but a draft of this unique document can be obtained now by calling the Ramsey County Charter Commission office at 298-4111. Three public meetings in the Bugle area will be held. Residents of Falcon Heights may attend a meeting with their county commissioner, John Finley, Wed., Oct. 4, 7:30 p.m., at the North End Multiservice Center. Lauderdale's meeting with Don Salverda is Thurs., Oct. 5, 7:30 p.m., at the Roseville City Hall. Energy Park and St. Anthony Park residents should meet with Diane Ahrens at the Merriam Park Community Center at 7:30 p.m., Thurs., Oct. 19.

St. Matthew's Episcopal Church begins to celebrate 100 years

To commemorate its first hundred years, St. Matthew's Episcopal Church, 2136 Carter, is holding a special All Saints Day celebration on Nov. 5. This event, a Choral Eucharist and Bishop's Reception, is the first in a series of festive occasions to highlight the parish's centennial year.

The All Saints Day celebration will be at 10 a.m. at the church. Bishop Anderson is to be a special guest, but former rectors and parishioners from all across the country will also be there. All Saints Day will kick off the year-long celebration. These events will follow:

- January 28, 1990: St. Matthew's traditional annual meeting preceded by a historical church service and followed by a 1890's style banquet. Parishioners may come in period costumes.
- February 27: Shrove Tuesday melodrama created and executed by Robert Moulton of the University of Minnesota Theater Department.
- April 6: Choir concert and world premiere of a choral work commissioned to celebrate the centennial year.

- May 13: Mother's Day ice cream social and May pole.
 - June 3: Open House Tea, croquet on the lawn.
- Centennial calendars (Sept. 1989-June 1990) with historical photos and dates are now available. A history of St. Matthew's will be available to parishioners and community members on Nov. 5.

Share-A-Home

The Share-A-Home program of Lutheran Social Service is designed to help older adults remain in their homes when living alone has become difficult, or the need for companionship arises. Until June 30, 1990, any resident of Falcon Heights or Lauderdale may receive services without paying standard program fees. Program support from a Ramsey County Community Development Block Grant has enabled Share-A-Home to provide this arrangement.

Share-A-Home carefully matches older homeowners with young live-ins who are willing to provide help with chores and be available for companionship and security, in exchange for lower cost housing. Call 774-9507 for more information.

Where's the beef?

The members of Peace Lutheran Church, 1744 Walnut at Lone in Lauderdale, will once again be serving the wider community with their annual beef dinner on Sat., Oct. 28. Serving begins at 5 p.m. and continues until 7 p.m. with adult tickets at $5.50, youth 5-10 at $2.75, and children under 5 free. A bake table and afghan door prize will also be provided.

William Blake, poet

On Sun. morning, Oct. 15 at 9:30 a.m., the Rev. Dr. Patrick Green, minister of St. Anthony Park United Church of Christ, will preach at a special multimedia service on William Blake, Christian visionary. The sermon will be illustrated with color photographic slides. Music based on the poetry of William Blake will be featured in the service, including a work by the distinguished contemporary American songwriter, Ned Rorem, "Little Lamb, Who Made Thee?"

Blake has often been called the first poet in the Romantic Movement in literature, which flourished from about 1789 until the early 1830s.

All visitors will be welcomed at the service. Call the church for further schedule details at 646-7173.

It's fall at the Farm

The annual harvest festival at Gibbs Farm will be held Sun., Oct. 1. There will be crafts, food, music and dancing. Admission for adults is $2.50. Children 2-18 are admitted for $2.

Apple day is the next Sunday, Oct. 8. Drink hot apple cider and learn about foods and dolls made from apples.

Quilts and samplers will be featured on Sun., Oct. 15; wood stove cooking on Sun., Oct. 22; and traditional Halloween carving of pumpkins—and turnips!—on Sun., Oct. 29. On Friday night, Oct. 27, a special event will feature folktales and ghost stories from 6:30-9 p.m. Reservations are required. Call 696-8629.

Gibbs Farm Museum is a national historic site at the corner of Cleveland and Larpenteur in Falcon Heights. Regular admission prices (except for the Harvest Festival) are $2.50 adult, $2 seniors, $1 children 2-18.

South St. Anthony Rec Center

Area youth may wish to join these activities, which started in September but will continue through October.

Arts & Crafts, Tuesdays, 4:15-5:15 p.m., ages 6-11.

Touch Football, Wednesdays, 6:30-7:30 p.m., ages 13-17.

Nerf Soccer, Thursdays, 4:15-5:15 p.m., ages 6-8.

The annual Halloween Program will be held on Tues., Oct. 31 at 4:30 p.m. Children in grades 6 and under will enjoy the activities which may include: a costume parade, candy corn guessing, candy scramble, and treats for all who attend.

A field trip to the Science Museum & Omni Theater is planned for Wed., Nov. 8—tour the museum from 1-2:30, then see the Omni show at 3 p.m. Parents and their elementary school age children are invited to register (no school that day). Please register by Oct. 30, as space is limited.

New Leader-in-Charge for the center is Steve Shapira. For further information on any of the items listed, call South St. Anthony, 890 Cromwell, 298-5770, M-Th, 4-9 p.m.

Knowing, Learning & Thinking

A non-credit course called "Knowing, Learning & Thinking" will be offered through the U of M's Continuing Education series, The Compleat Scholar, at the St. Anthony Park Library. It will be offered on Mondays from 3-5 p.m. at a cost of $64 ($54 for those 62 and over). Instructor is S. Jay Samuels, professor in the Department of Educational Psychology. The class will examine broad issues of how we know, learn, think, create, and remember information. Related topics, such as learning and memory enhancement, the nature/nurture issue in intelligence, barriers to learning and memory and how to overcome them, and self-motivation will also be explored. Registration forms are available in the library, or call 624-8880. There is a late fee after Sept. 28.

Attic treasures

St. Matthew's Episcopal Church, 2136 Carter Ave., will hold an attic sale on Fri. & Sat., Oct. 13 & 14, from 10 a.m.-3 p.m. Among the items for sale are several pieces of old furniture and many kitchen and household wares. Proceeds from the sale will benefit the Children's Learning Program at St. Matthew's.

Nursery School saluted

A centennial celebration at St. Anthony Park United Methodist Church in honor of its nursery school is set for Sun., Oct. 29. All those who attended the nursery school in years past are invited. A special welcome is extended to all past teachers. Worship Service is at 10:45 a.m. with a coffee/juice fellowship time in the church's Fellowship Hall after worship.

Louise Burgess, wife of Dr. Burgess, and Donna Woolfrey were the church's first nursery school teachers in 1958. Since those first years, 21 teachers have contributed to the education of young children. Robin Bartlett Lindquist taught for thirteen years. She was the first teacher to introduce early American Indian culture to the preschoolers. She also introduced a large variety of art media and began a school art show every year. This tradition is still carried on with a spring art show at ParkBank. Colleen Zepeda and Kathy Behrens are the current nursery school teachers.

Country Festival

Sat., Oct. 21 is Country Festival day at St. Anthony Park United Methodist Church. A chili luncheon will be served from 11:30 a.m.-1 p.m. (no reservations needed) while chicken dinner will be served at 4:30 p.m. and 6 p.m. (call the church office at 646-4859 for reservations). Delicious, attractive and useful items will be found in the country kitchen, indoor garage sale, Leisure Center booth, crafts, antiques and collectibles, and children's booth. Marion Hartwick is this year's planning committee chairperson.

Fall Festival

1989 marks the 50th anniversary of Corpus Christi parish. A celebration of community will take place at the Fall Festival on Sun., Oct. 1, from noon until 5 p.m. at Corpus Christi School, Fairview & County Road B.

A spaghetti dinner, featuring Lido's spaghetti sauce, will be served. Other events will include a white elephant sale, bake sale, craft booth, plant sale, cake walk, fish pond, toy walk, Bingo, face painting, and a haunted house. $300 cash will be awarded to the winner of the drawing. Other prizes are a 35mm. Minolta camera, two 10-speed bicycles, and two $100 gift certificates from Cub Foods.

Proceeds from the festival will go to the scholarship fund to help defray tuition for parish children attending St. Rose School. When Corpus Christi School was closed at the end of last year, plans were made for a joint venture between Corpus Christi and St. Rose of Lima.

Library events

The 1989 summer reading program has come and gone quickly at St. Anthony Park Library. A total of 563 children were registered. 340 read 10 or more books and received a special button. 73 of these children won paperback book prizes, which were funded by the Friends of the St. Paul Public Library. Micawber's Bookstore awarded gift certificates to ten of the many children who finished the giant board game. These were donated by the St. Anthony Park Library Association. All the winners were selected by drawings after the last day of the program.

The library buzzed all summer long with children getting registered, having their reading records stamped, playing the board game, and attending the weekly programs. All of this would not have been possible without the help of volunteers Kathy Behrens, Arlene West, Lisa Griffin, Janet Lintin and Katy Friggle-Norton.

Toddler Storytimes for two-year-olds and parents will be offered by the St. Anthony Park Library, 2245 Como Ave., on Fridays at 10:30 a.m. This series of programs will run from Oct. 20 through Nov. 24 and features books, puppets, fingerplays, music, flannel boards, crafts and films. Please register by calling 292-6635 or stopping by the library.

The Norm Barnhart Magic Show, featuring mysteries and magic, will be at the library on Fri., Oct. 20 at 4 p.m. Norm often calls on children to participate in his magical tricks and surprises. This program is free and is sponsored by the Friends of the St. Paul Public Library.

Concert for kids

The Music in the Park Series will present a first-rate musical concert, tailored especially for youngsters from 5-12 years of age (parents, too) on Fri., Nov. 3 at 7:30 p.m. in the St. Anthony Park Library, Como & Carter.

Flute Force, one of the leading professional flute quartets in America, will perform. The maraschino cherry on top of this musical treat is: it's FREE. But since seating is limited, tickets are required. They may be obtained at the library, St. Anthony Park Elementary School, and at Micawber's Bookstore.

Music to be performed will range from Telemann & Rimsky-Korsakov to Scott Joplin and Gershwin. Flute Force member Gretchen Pusch is a "native" of St. Anthony Park, having graduated from Murray High School. Besides hearing some marvelous music, children will get to know the various members of the flute family. Flute Force will allow time for questions and answers at the end of the performance. A social hour will follow the concert.

Business News

Energy Park has gained 78 employees, as the Minnesota Wire & Cable Co. moves into the building formerly occupied by the Glass Service Co. on Energy Park Drive near municipal stadium. The St. Paul Port Authority sold the building to Minnesota Wire & Cable in August. The 78 employees previously worked in Minneapolis in leased office space. The company manufactures wire and cable for medical equipment, microphones and computers. It also employs 30 people in Eau Claire, Wis.

Watch for lots of Christmas advertising from Bandana Square. The St. Paul Port Authority will spend $100,000 on newspaper, magazine and radio ads and window displays to promote the shopping mall during the holiday gift-giving season.

Condor Corporation, the company that wants to operate a heliport at the Dart property on the outskirts of St. Anthony Park, has filed an appeal of the city's ruling against the heliport. The appeal will be heard in federal court, but probably not until the spring of 1990, according to the court. Officials from Condor did not return phone calls regarding the status of the building at University & Cleveland.

"Old gardeners never die, they just spade away"

By Warren Gore

Women and men have been gardening since before recorded time, certainly since Genesis, chapter 2, verse 8 and thereafter. Fable and the scriptures tell us of the literally fabulous Gardens of Babylon, probably built by King Nebuchadnezzar, although paleontologists can't find the exact location or figure out how they were watered.

But in the summer of 1989 in Minnesota, both gardens and gardeners are thriving, blooming, and "busting out all over." Given an unused corner of the backyard, a nearby vacant lot, a bare boulevard, a useless hillside, or a long unmarked stretch of plain crabgrass, plantain, and creeping Charlie, the urge to horticulture runs deep and strong in many a human breast. Garden practitioners at St. Anthony Park Community Gardens, Gibbs Farm, and Lindig Street Farmer's Retreat actually constitute several special approaches to St. Anthony Park's and Falcon Heights' outlets for the healing art.

The first, at St. Anthony Park Community Gardens and Gibbs Farm plots, are mostly relatively small, 20 x 15 or 20 x 20 feet, with water and fertilizer close at hand. Some who toil there garden "the usual way." Others use variations on the "French Intensive" method, which tends toward plantings closer together, both within each single row and also between rows. Part of the French Intensive system may use raised beds, interplantings of natural plant repellents, black plastic mulch to control weed growth and also to control water evaporation, and possibly a greater dependency on chemical fertilizers, insecticides, and herbicides. As in all gardening, there are many, many individual approaches and variations within any given system or method that the neighborhood farmer uses.

What was referred to as the Lindig Street Farmer's Retreat is one that I know best (because that's where I garden), and comes somewhat closer to traditional "backyard gardening," but there is, if you'll pardon the pun, a back-ground detail. 20 to 30 years ago, the City of Falcon Heights established plans to run Lindig Street clean through to Roselawn. It bought up the backyard right-of-way lots from the homeowners who fronted Tatum and Fairview. City plans changed. Lindig ultimately proceeded only about two and a half blocks north of Larpenteur, ending with a cul-de-sac. So Tatum and Fairview homeowners bought the land back.

About that time, a very energetic Tatum Street occupant who happened to be a Minnesota ex-farm boy, a state extension agent, and also the state director of 4-H youth programs, Leonard Harkness, began to promote a plan by the National Garden Clubs of America: beautify and conserve our precious soil resources with new flower and vegetable gardens. With his usual forceful enthusiasm and persuasive powers, he got many if not most of the homeowners to either start new backyard gardens of their own, or rent to those land-hungry have-nots who live adjacent to this new semi-wilderness. Before long there were 50 to 75 avid gardeners plowing, rototilling, planning, planting, cultivating, weeding, watering, and harvesting beautiful flowers and toothsome veggies.

And they were a various, curious lot: Old Doc Campbell (now deceased), who always used an earth thermometer to secure best seed germination and who was a strong proponent of tuberoses; Gene Wright, former St. Anthony Park resident and professor of rhetoric on the St. Paul Campus; Gust Hard, university horticulture professor and currently garden editor for the St. Paul Pioneer Press Dispatch; Kurt Norenberg, Office of Special Programs on the St. Paul Campus; Dr. Clarke Chambers, illustrious history professor at the U, as well as wife Florence and daughter Sarah; Ralph Wayne, distinguished animal nutritionist at the U, and wife Verna; Professor Wes Ten-nyson, educational psychologist and counsellor in Student Personnel Psychology; Christy Christenson, retired Minnesota State Seed Analyst for the Department of Agriculture, but not a retired gardener at all; Irene MacGregor, mother of Malcolm and grandmother to Kelly and Julie, who doesn't "garden as much anymore"; and, of course the irrepressible Leonard Harkness with his two or three gardens and his Yellow Rose of Texas, wife Maxine.

All of these and, as they say in the ads, "...many, many more," till the gardens; exchange slips, cuttings, and seedlings; share seeds and equipment; give away flowers, produce, and recipes; chat about tips and techniques, successes and failures; all with good humor and a bit of grouching if God and the weather forecaster didn't deliver some promised rainfall on time or gave too much when they wanted to be planting.

They bring bounteous enthusiasm, raw energy, and mountains of hope each March and April, planting indoors and out in the rhythm of the seasons, resolving "to stay ahead of the weeds this year," and reveling in the cardinals and crows who share the sun-dappled countryside along with the owls, pheasants, and pesky raccoons.

True, some of us have to wear sunblock and straw hats and rowdy red bandanas and long-sleeved shirts even on the hottest of summer days, lest the marauding basal cells take over. True, the Deet-filled "Off" and "Jungle Juice" only partly protect one from the dive-bombing squadrons of mosquitoes, gnats, and biting flies. True, most of us prefer to be organic gardeners in toto, until a particularly virulent attack of Colorado potato bugs or bean beetles decimates our precious plants, and then, somewhat surreptitiously, we will may succumb to one judicious dose of rotenone or Sevin.

The rewards — ah, myriad they are: Leonard Harkness planting both peas and potatoes early enough so that he and his family can enjoy them on the 4th of July (every year he has and does). The true taste of tomatoes that are vine-ripened — the yellow pear and red cherry and the bulbous Romas that you wipe a smidgen of dirt off and eat as you pick, along with a sprout of broccoli for contrast. Succulent small zucchini, young bunching onions, radishes, and sweet carrots, and beets. You brush up against fronds of aromatic basil and fronds of feathery dill, curly double parsley, and pungent oregano newly-picked. The wondrous special sweetness of Silver Queen corn, or good old Golden Bantam or Shoepeg or bi-colored Honey & Cream or Illin Super Sweet—any of them picked only 20 minutes before you plunge them into boiling water or wax-paper wrap them for the microwave oven. The marvellous natural fall sweetness of Waltham butternut squash, or buttercup, or acorn, banana, and old-fashioned warty-textured Black Hubbard or its first-cousin, grey. Tender lettuces of 6-8 different varieties (that present-day Peter Rabbits love to maraud)—these mixed with savoyed spinach and your own beautifully-globed sweet bell or pimento peppers, and perhaps an occasional jalapeno or mildly-hot cherry pepper. These, and half a hundred more, are specific reasons why we choose to sweat and toil so earnestly, so diligently. If we were forced by someone else to work so hard, we would profoundly rebel.

But, driven by that nameless, mysterious, perhaps primeval urge to slash the earth, implant our new seeds, nurture the young, and somewhat virtuously enjoy the fruits of our labors and our fantasies—and perhaps even brag a bit—we pursue our headlong Garden Drive, perpetual lemmings to the archetypal call of gardens, and garden catalogues.

Labor Saver.

Manually producing business forms can be a headache. You have to design, redesign, paste up, revise, and print each one. And then, every time your information changes, you have to labor through the whole process again. It's a waste of time, money, and energy.

Now there's another way. Use an Apple Desktop Publishing system. Combined with the forms-publishing software of your choice, it lets you quickly and easily produce professional-looking forms that will communicate more effectively and improve your company's image—at a fraction of the cost of conventional forms.

The reason for all this speed and simplicity is the powerful, easy-to-use computer that's at the heart of every Apple Desktop Publishing system—the Apple® Macintosh® computer. The Macintosh lets you see exactly what your forms will look like—including both text and graphics—right on the screen. So you can experiment with different designs until you come up with the one you want.

Then, you can print your forms using an Apple LaserWriter® printer—eliminating the need for expensive pasteups and outside printing. You can even use your designs as electronic forms, exchanging data with databases and spreadsheets—which eliminates the need for printing and the need to manually reenter data on the forms.

Come in today to find out how you can re-form your business—and cut out a lot of hard labor—tomorrow.

Milton Square Merchants welcome 15-min. parking zone

Responding to recent requests from the St. Anthony Park Merchants and Professionals Association and Milton Investment Company, the City of Saint Paul Public Works Department has installed signs marking a 15-minute parking zone on Carter Ave. immediately west of its intersection with Como Ave. The parking zone was requested to make it easier for the public to make quick visits to O'Donnell Cleaners, Pam Sherman Bakery, Sal's Deli, Micawber's Bookstore, the Country Peddler, the Carter Avenue Frame Shop and the other merchants at Milton Square and nearby properties. Mary Ann Milton, president of Milton Investment Company, hopes that the 15-minute zone will cut down on double parking and improve traffic safety in the area. The remainder of the block in front of Milton Square remains two-hour parking.

The suggestion for a 15-minute parking zone was one of the parking recommendations approved by the St. Anthony Park Merchants and Professionals Association at its Aug. 2 meeting. The request was submitted to the city within days of the meeting and promptly approved by its Traffic Control Unit. Promising installation as soon as the State Fair had run its course, the Public Works Department installed the signs on Sept. 13. Bonnie Brandt, manager of Pam Sherman Bakery at Milton Square, praised the Merchants Association and Milton Square for taking the lead in obtaining the 15-minute zone and the city for its quick response. "This is an excellent idea and its time is overdue. We are very pleased and expect that this will be a great convenience to our customers."

Jerry Thole, President
First Bank Midway

First Banks strive to meet seniors' needs.

What do you want to do with your money? Your answer today probably varies greatly from what it was 10 years ago—and from what it will be a decade from now. As we move through life, it's important to reevaluate our financial priorities periodically. Ask, "What do I expect from my bank? Am I getting the convenience and service I need?"

At First Banks we've designed a full range of products and services with your banking needs in mind. From special checking and savings privileges to experts on maximizing retirement income, our commitment to you is strong.

For example, if you can't get to our bank, our direct deposit, telephone transfer and 24-hour automated teller machine services offer you extended banking conveniences. Your accounts are linked to about 20,000 automated teller machines nationwide.

Throughout the metropolitan area, we also have bankers who work specifically with 55-plus customers.

Senior checking services

Two of our checking accounts—Senior Checking and Senior Relationship Checking—are specially designed for seniors. Both offer free checking, free check printing and no minimum balance requirement. Senior Relationship Checking additionally offers interest based on current money market rates, a $15 discount on your safe deposit rental and free travelers checks. To qualify, seniors must have $10,000 in First Banks accounts such as CDs, annuities, savings, mortgages and trusts.

Your checks, too, can be printed with winter and summer addresses at no extra charge. First Banks monthly statements can combine most of your accounts with us for convenience and easy readability. We feature direct deposit of Social Security checks and many pension checks as well.

Convenient savings too

Regular Savings offers seniors no minimum balance restrictions and no monthly fee assessment. Exchanging funds can be as simple as a phone call or visit to a 24-hour automated teller machine.

Our First Bank and First Banks elsewhere help seniors in many other ways too: annuities, CDs and mutual funds to maximize retirement income; estate planning to preserve estate value and provide for your heirs. Whatever your needs, our array of products and services can meet them.

Call or stop in to discuss how our senior-specific services can work for you. And stop by our booth and take advantage of our seminars at Senior Options Expo, September 29 and 30 at the St. Paul Civic Center, jointly sponsored by First Bank System.

Sobering choices

By Tara Christopherson

The acknowledged granddaddy of recovery groups, Alcoholics Anonymous, turned 50 this year. Women for Sobriety, founded in 1975 by Jean Kirkpatrick, a recovering alcoholic from Pennsylvania, is a youngster by comparison. There is evidence of a generation gap.

Defining alcoholism as a disease is a relatively new concept. Traditionally, willpower was the frequent, if unsuccessful, prescription. AA's twelve steps to sobriety helped change our perception of an approach to recovery from addiction. For 1.6 million members the program emphasizes spiritual as well as physiological recovery through reliance on a "higher power" and lifetime attendance at weekly AA meetings.

Not all recovering alcoholics are comfortable with this approach. Some take issue with what they deem an overly rigid approach, some with the giving up of responsibility for drinking, some with the male orientation of AA's tenets.

"It's written for men," Natalie Ayers of St. Paul said in a recent interview with the Pioneer Press Dispatch. "The alcoholic is referred to as 'he' and it's 'God as you understand him. Women have a different problem. They drink emotionally and want to talk emotionally.'"

The Twin Cities got its first chapter of Women for Sobriety in 1978 when Ayers decided AA just didn't work for her. The WFS program, with an estimated national membership of 5,000, uses 13 statements of positive self-esteem that emphasize spiritual, emotional and physiological recovery. The philosophy of the program nurtures a positive self-image. Weekly meetings of 6 to 10 women encourage members to talk, to take charge of their own growth and to learn to cope with life's problems on their own.

In a 1986 interview with the Pioneer Press Dispatch, WFS founder Kirkpatrick said, "I give AA its due. What I resist is the belief that AA is for everybody. I'm saying there is no single way to recover. There might be a combination of methods."

In our neighborhood that combination or choice is very possible. Recovering alcoholics can join Women for Sobriety Mondays, 5:30 p.m., at the St. Anthony Park Library. Call 224-0328 for more information. Or if Alcoholics Anonymous is more your style, the group meets Mondays, 8 p.m., at the St. Anthony Park Lutheran Church (645-2329 or 770-2646) and Tuesdays, 7:30 p.m., at 1407 Cleveland (646-0127 or 645-2329).

Tara Christopherson lives in St. Anthony Park. She was exec. art director of MSP Publications (Mpls/St. Paul magazine) for 5 years. She now is a freelancer and teaches design at the College of St. Thomas.

She enjoys writing for the Bugle, "because it gives me license to ask all the questions I've always been asking since I came to this neighborhood."

We can't lie. A recent study showed that more people feel newspaper is the most believable medium.

Not television.
Not radio.
Not magazines.

But why?

It's probably because we know that a newspaper lays it all out in black & white.

Right in front of you. The places, the people, and the prices. The offers, the promises and the claims.

It's all there to read, think about, and keep. And that goes for the advertisements, too.

When people turn to their paper, they turn there with interest. Which means that's where your advertising message needs to be.

With all the choices available, it's difficult deciding how best to advertise your business.

But everything becomes a little simpler when you remember one rule.

YOU
GOTTA BE IN THE PAPER.

Obituaries

Thor Aamodt

Thorfine (Thor) L. Aamodt, 89, retired state entomologist and founder of Aamodt Apple Farm near Stillwater, died on Sept. 2, 1989, at Panama City, Florida. A former resident of St. Anthony Park, Mr. Aamodt lived on Knapp St. for over 20 years.

Born and raised on the East Side of St. Paul, Thor Aamodt graduated from the Minnesota School of Agriculture on the St. Paul Campus in 1921 and from the university in 1929.

In 1945, at the governor's request, he completed a study that resulted in the formation of the division of plant industry, combining all of the state's pest control activities. He became director of that division in 1958.

In 1948, he purchased 80 acres near Stillwater and began Aamodt Apple Farm, which is now run by his son, Thomas, and two of his grandsons. Thor Aamodt was president of the Minnesota State Horticultural Society in 1936-37 and was presented the Golden Apple Award in 1969 from the Minnesota Apple Growers Association.

Mr. Aamodt was preceded in death by his wife, Lucille. He is survived by his son, Thomas, of Stillwater; his daughter, Barbara Jones, of Florida; 9 grandchildren; and 12 great grandchildren.

Minnie Bohman

Minnie E. Bohman, longtime resident of Lauderdale, died at age 85 on Sept. 1, 1989. She was active in her large vegetable garden until just before her death, which was the result of a stroke. She often gave fresh vegetables to her neighbors and even to her doctor.

At Mrs. Bohman's funeral, it was noted that no one ever heard her say an unkind word about another person.

Mrs. Bohman was preceded in death by her husband, Thure, and her sister, Martha. She is survived by her sister-in-law, Pearl Mueller, and several nieces and nephews.

Frances Braun

Frances E. Braun died at age 81 on Aug. 22, 1989. She had been a resident of the Seal Hi Rise since it was built 15 years ago. She and her husband, Ignatius, farmed outside of Wheaton, Minn., for 35 years, then moved into Wheaton after their retirement. Mrs. Braun had been a cook in the Wheaton hospital and school for many years.

In 1974, the Brauns moved to the Seal Hi Rise in South St. Anthony Park to be near their son, Paul, a longtime resident of the neighborhood. Three years ago, her husband had a stroke, resulting in his moving to the Wilder Health Care Center. She followed him there a few months ago.

Frances Braun is survived by her husband; her son, Paul; her daughters, Ramona Pedersen, Shirley Gilberg, and Lois Bomersine; 15 grandchildren, and 5 great-grandchildren.

Richard Howard

A former Lauderdale resident, Richard C. Howard, died at age 60 on Sept. 11, 1989. A graduate of Murray High School in 1946, Howard worked for several years as an administrator at Ramsey Hospital. He had lived with his family on the East Side of St. Paul.

Richard Howard is survived by his wife, Beatrice; his sons, Daniel and Thomas; and his daughter, Deborah.

Len Osterman

Len Osterman of Falcon Heights died on Sept. 4, 1989, at age 68. He had been semi-retired in recent years and was a veteran of World War II. He had lived for many years on California Ave.

Mr. Osterman is survived by his wife, Gloria; daughter, Judy Peters; son Kent Osterman; four grandchildren, all of St. Paul; and sister, Eleanor Mueller of Indiana.

Genevieve Peterman

Genevieve Peterman of Falcon Heights died on Sept. 15, 1989, at the age of 73 years. Born in Glenwood, Minn., she graduated from high school there in 1934. She attended a year of teachers' training and taught school for five years.

In 1940, she married Charles Peterman. They farmed on her parents' farm near Glenwood and later bought their own near Villard. There they raised their four children. In 1965, the Petermans sold the farm and moved to Falcon Heights when Charles began working at Bethel College. Gen Peterman became a cook for the Roseville School District and later was head cook at Falcon Heights Elementary School. She was well-known for her homemade breads and rolls.

Mrs. Peterman was an active member of Immanuel Community Church, which later became Grace Church of Roseville. She taught Sunday School and was president of the Women's Missionary Stewardship.

She is survived by her husband, Charles; two sons, David of New London and Edgar of Anoka; two daughters, Joanne Peterson of Milaca and Mary Jean Carlson of Roseville; and 13 grandchildren.

Gyda Gutttersen Plette

Gyda Gutttersen Plette, former St. Anthony Park resident, died on Aug. 19, 1989, at South Pasadena, Florida, at the age of 93. Mrs. Plette was born in Butternut Valley, Minn., and grew up in St. Anthony Park in the large house on the corner of Doswell & Chelmsford, before two smaller lots were carved out of the original plot. Her father, Gilbert Gutttersen, was a prominent local businessman for whom the elementary school on Como Ave. was named. The old Murray Grade School was renamed Gutttersen School in 1925, when the Murray name was transferred to the new school on Grantham & Buford. Gutttersen School was replaced by St. Anthony Park Elementary in 1955.

Gyda Plette was a graduate of Valparaiso University of Indiana and was an elementary school teacher in St. Paul until her retirement in 1956. Her husband, Lloyd Plette, was a music teacher. Their home was on Hendon Ave.

After living in St. Anthony Park for over 50 years, Mrs. Plette retired in the St. Petersburg, Florida, area. She wrote a column for the local paper there until just before her death, caused by a heart attack.

She is survived by a son, David Plette, of Kentucky; a daughter, Audrey Keppel, of Minneapolis; 4 grandchildren; and 5 great-grandchildren.

Jennie Priebe

Jennie Priebe, age 93, a resident of Falcon Heights, died on Sept. 11, 1989. She was the widow of an old railroad man, according to neighbors, who also spoke of Mrs. Priebe as a "nice older lady."

She is survived by her daughter, Violet Hockemeyer, of Alexandria, Minn.; four grandchildren, and four great-grandchildren.

Leon Snyder

A professor of genetics at the University of Minnesota, Leon A. Snyder died on Aug. 24, 1989, at the age of 69, after a long illness.

Professor Snyder was born in Oakland, Calif., and received his doctorate from the University of California at Berkeley.

In 1954, he joined the University of Minnesota faculty in the department of agronomy and plant genetics. In 1981-82, he worked as a Rockefeller Foundation fellow at the University of Edinburgh in Scotland. In 1965, he moved to the dept. of genetics and cell biology at the U of M. He taught basic genetics and did research on genetics of both plants and animals. Mr. Snyder published many articles and co-authored two genetics textbooks.

Mr. Snyder lived with his family in their Raymond Ave. home for over 30 years. He is survived by his wife, Margaret; a son, Mark, of St. Paul; a daughter, Patricia Gray, of Bangkok, Thailand; and three brothers, Charles, Gilbert, and Milton all of Calif.
