Midway heliport still possible

By Phil Holt

For the past three years, Condor Corporation, a Mendota Heights-based company, has been involved in a dispute over a proposed heliport in St. Paul's Midway area. The heliport planned for the corner of University and Cleveland Avenues drew controversy in 1987 when the city of St. Paul put a one-year moratorium on heliport permits to have time to study the zoning laws involved. Condor was allowed to file for a special use permit during that time.

In 1988, the city council unanimously rejected Condor's permit request. Condor then filed suit based on three issues, including pre-emption, due process and a state zoning issue.

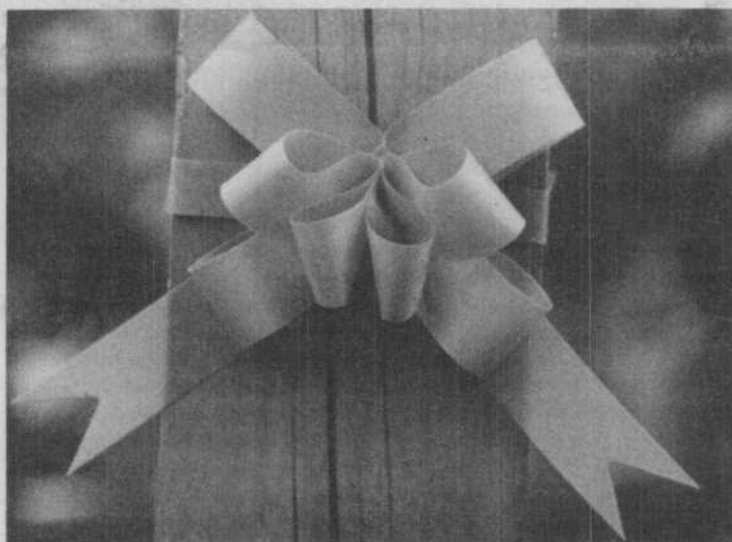

U.S. District Judge Paul Magnuson rejected Condor's three arguments in August of 1989. In August of 1990, U.S. District Court of Appeals Judge Donald Lay overturned Magnuson's zoning issue finding and ruled that Condor met the zoning code, saying there was no danger to "public health, safety, and welfare."

Recently, City Attorney Jane McPeak told the Bugle the city's petition for rehearing was denied. Assistant City Attorney Jerry Segal said he had no idea why the petition was denied. "The focus of the city's request for a rehearing was whether the city allowed Condor to repeal the moratorium. Segal would not comment on the possibility of the issue being appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court.

In addition, Life Link III, a helicopter company that services area hospitals such as University and United, has withdrawn interest in using the facility. Rod Crane, President and CEO of Life Link III, says his company is looking toward the future. It plans "to build a permanent facility at the airport in accordance with city council guidelines." Crane says a referendum was passed by the City Council to stop heliport development. He stressed that his company is sensitive to the concerns of the neighborhood and did not want Lauderdale mayor, Willard Anderson, (left) and Falcon Heights mayor, Tom Baldwin, met at the city line to tie the first ribbon of Red Ribbon Week, Oct. 20-26. The ribbons, tied to doors of houses, apartments and businesses, marked the support of the two cities for a local anti-drug abuse program. The campaign is co-sponsored by the Mayors' Commission Against Drugs (which includes Roseville and Little Canada as well) and District 623 Parent Communication Network.

Merchants address crime; hire security coordinator

By Kathy Malchow

Criminals, keep out! St. Anthony Park Merchants and Professionals are taking steps to thwart potential crime problems in the neighborhood's business area.

For starters, Dale Wilson has been hired as St. Anthony Park's Security Coordinator, a position made possible by a city $9,000 Crime Prevention Grant awarded to the Merchants & Professionals Association. Julian Zweber, an attorney and member of the association's security committee, did much of the work required to get the grant.

Zweber says it was difficult to convince city decision makers that money for crime prevention is needed in St. Anthony Park. "Oh, you just don't have crime there," was a comment he heard.

But over the years problems with burglaries and thefts in the St. Anthony Park business district made the merchants aware that they needed to address the problem as a group.

The one-year Crime Prevention Grant was awarded in September. Zweber says of 22 proposals submitted to the city, this grant was the only one awarded to a business district, and its procedures and results will be used as a prototype for security programs in other St. Paul business areas. St. Anthony Park Merchants and Professionals must match the $9,000 within a year. Half of that match may be fulfilled by keeping track of volunteer labor assigned by the association.

Most of the $9,000 awarded to the merchants will pay for the services of Dale Wilson, who will be working 10-15 hours a week until next June.

His is not a "patrol" job, however. It's an administrative position intended to set up a crime watch network among the association.

Crime incident reporting for September

The bi-weekly crime statistics received from the St. Paul Police Dept. show a slight decline in the number of crime incidents for the month of September.

However, there was a sizable increase in the number of burglaries:

Residential:

1 in August

6 in September

Commercial:

4 in August,

7 in September

As you put on your storms and tightly close your windows, remember to securely lock them so that both the cold and the burglars will remain outside.

The largest number of incidents continues to be thefts. A sizable number of these thefts are related to auto accessories or items stolen from within the auto.

Protect yourself and your valuables: LOCK UP!

Watch for fund-raising letter

The Community Council will mail its annual fund-raising letter during the first week of November. We need to raise $5000 to support Council-sponsored programs that have no other source of revenue, such as Meals-on-Wheels volunteer coordination, Bookstart, Public Space Design, community gardens.

Citizen Participation funds from the City provide support for the Council's office and staff and is based on a formula that provides extra revenues to districts with large populations and a factor for the level of poverty. Our district is one of the smallest in St. Paul and receives less than $4,000 over the base amount of $30,000 allowed each planning district. The budget crunch affects our activities at a time when more and more city departments look to the neighborhoods to work on redevelopment, housing maintenance, and quality of life issues.

We depend on financial support from the neighborhood—your gift is tax deductible—to help us continue the programs that the neighborhood has initiated. With your assistance we will continue our efforts to maintain a viable, livable neighborhood and advocate for the community.

West Midway-South St. Anthony Park redevelopment plan amended

This month the St. Paul City Council, sitting as the HRA board, amended the redevelopment plan for the West Midway-South St. Anthony Park area. The amended redevelopment plan will allow arts organizations in our area to seek loans. The purpose of the program is to help arts organizations with stabilization and growth efforts, support the city's arts community and promote artistic development in target areas to contribute to the revitalization and redevelopment of St. Paul.

Attracting and retaining arts and culture is an important economic development tool when applied to redevelopment plans for an area. Already the grant and loan fund has been instrumental in providing financial support for the Northern Clay Center, 2375 University Ave.

Music in the Park gets award

Music in the Park was named Outstanding Neighborhood Program at the 1990 Neighborhood Forum held at University of St. Thomas in September. The music series, currently in its 11th season, has brought chamber music performances of the highest quality to St. Anthony Park.

Running through Death Valley for dogs in Minnesota

By Ingrid Marklund

The homeless puppies in the shelter at Ramsey County Humane Society wag their tails as Ron Sadowsky talks to them. Probably just because they find him a friendly guy.

The puppies don't know they have another good reason to like him: This summer he ran 152 miles through the country's hottest desert to raise money for them.

The run through Death Valley gave Sadowsky a lot of blisters on his feet, an unforgettable experience and $21,000 for the Humane Society of Ramsey County, where he is a member of the Board of Directors.

The highest temperature measured during Sadowsky's four days in the inhospitable valley was 121 degrees—in the air, that is. The ground got even hotter. It was so baking hot he had to change his shoes once an hour! His five extra pairs were kept in a refrigerator in the recreation vehicle that was driving behind him. It was driving behind, not continuously following by his side, simply because the motor couldn't run all the time. Death Valley is too hot for a motor.

Shouldn't it be too hot for a human being, too?

"Yes, it was," Sadowsky laughs. "But I don't like to run when it's cool."

He can joke about it now, after the experience. But he wasn't laughing all the time when he was running through places with names like Stovepipe Wells and Furnace Creek.

Ron Sadowsky is a 43-year-old gym teacher in the St. Paul Schools and a real estate agent. Still he has time for his passions: running and animals.

"I always loved animals," he says. "And as they can't speak for themselves, they need us to speak for them."

Running came later into his life. Ten years ago he felt really out of shape and decided to do something about it. He started running, and since then it seems to have been impossible to stop him. He has run 15 marathons, and an average summer week's exercise means 80 to 100 miles.

When he is not running the streets of St. Paul, Sadowsky likes to spend time with his two dogs and four cats. They all came to him from the Humane Society shelter, but now there isn't room for more pets in his home. Since there are 9,000 animals who need new homes every year in Ramsey County alone, he decided to do something special for all those he just couldn't bring home.

So he became the 89th person who ever attempted to run across Death Valley—and the 12th who actually made it. But on his third day in the valley he almost gave in. The heat felt like a hair dryer constantly blowing. He was sweating enormously all the time, but had no sweat on his skin because it vaporized instantly.

These puppies at the Humane Society in Como Park may not know they're thanking Ron Sadowsky for his help, but he feels thanked just the same.

"On the third day I had heat exhaustion. I felt extremely dizzy and nauseous." Sadowsky had to lie down with ice on his body for some hours to cool down.

"I could have given in then. But my friend Kurt Grebner, who drove with me, kept me going. And I would never have done it if I hadn't known my commitment to the Humane Society.

So, lying sick in a hot, rocky desert without any shade made Sadowsky feel some doubt about going on. But before that he had run for several hours with blisters on his feet.

"Yes, I had blisters from the second day," he remembers. "Blisters hurt of course, but I had a deal with myself to cope with that kind of pain. That's one of the things you learn as a marathon runner; you have to overcome pain to run a marathon."

Sounds easy when Sadowsky explains it, but there aren't many who would voluntarily run in 120 degrees with blisters on their feet.

Isn't there a better way to raise $21,000?

"Perhaps there is," says Sadowsky, "only I haven't found out about it yet. In fact, this is the most the Humane Society ever made on one single fund-raising event."

But he also admits that commitment for the animals wasn't the only reason to run Death Valley. He did it for himself, too, to meet what he calls "the ultimate physical challenge." Now that it is done, he will never do it again. The rest of his life as a runner will mean more relaxing runs, like regular marathons.

But the Ramsey County Humane Society is planning a new fundraising run next summer, 155 miles from Duluth to the Society's shelter in Como Park.

This time it will be easier in at least two ways: Minnesota is a nicer place than Death Valley, and the mileage is going to be shared between 155 runners. So next summer Ron Sadowsky will have only one, cool mile to run for his animal friends.

We welcome Ingrid Marklund to the Bugle staff. She's a Swedish journalist who recently moved to St. Anthony Park.

At last! A smooth street

Congratulations to Lauderdale. Eustis Street finally has a new surface. Thanks are due to several people...

...to Mayor Willard Anderson. Resurfacing Eustis has been a major priority of his administration. He'd be quick to say that thanks should also go...

...to Lee Peterson of Lauderdale who did many hours of legwork on the city's behalf to get the task accomplished,

...to State Senator John Marty and State Representative Mary Jo McGuire who wrote the Highway Commissioner requesting state aid for the project,

...to NSP who did a conscientious job in relocating power poles,

...to Lauderdale residents for their patience during the long wait and finally the long construction period.

It would have been grand if the City could have gotten gasoline tax money to do construction of a completely new street with proper curbs and storm sewers. Though this improvement was a maintenance project and not a rebuild job, the surface will make residents and visitors happy and more safe. On top of that, Lauderdale residents will not experience any new taxes or assessments.

In case you're asking what's in store for Eustis south of Larpenteur to the city line, a complete reconstruction of this section is planned. Let's hope the county will move quickly and do it soon, perhaps first thing next spring. Then we'll be thanking Ramsey County, too.

YES, THANKS TO YOUR SUPPORT!

Our communities have always supported the Park Bugle ... as avid readers, as editorial contributors, as concerned critics, and as customers of our advertisers. Once a year, we also ask our communities for support in the form of financial contributions. Last year, over 500 individuals, families and businesses made contributions to the Park Bugle.

As you can see above, it costs 59¢ to bring a copy of the Bugle to each of our 13,000 readers each month. We depend on only two sources to pay those costs: advertising revenue and your financial contributions. This year, we need to raise $13,000 to meet our financial requirements. STUFF "R" US

By Warren Hanson

Last week I needed a light bulb. So I walked over to the hardware store, walked through the front door, up the center aisle to the light bulbs, picked one up, and turned around to head for the cash register. But there, standing in my way, was Stew McIntosh, the owner of the hardware store, with his feet spread wide and his arms crossed, looking at the light bulb and shaking his head. I felt like I'd been caught shoplifting.

"You don't want that one," he said with authority.

Now wouldn't you think that any fool would be able to pick out a light bulb? Well, apparently you and I are both wrong, because Stew plucked the light bulb out of my hand and put it back on the shelf. Then he said, "Follow me," and he took off for the basement of the store.

I've been coming into Stew's store for years. He knows me. He knows that I usually don't have any idea what I'm doing when it comes to hardware and home repair and stuff like that. He has had to bail me out of numerous home handyman projects gone awry. But to imply that I don't even have enough sense to buy a light bulb ... well!

"You work at home, doncha?" he asked, as he led me into the dim recesses of the basement store room. I nodded sheepishly as he started rummaging around in a box on a bottom shelf. He pulled out a light bulb that looked ... well ... pretty much just like the one I had had in my hand upstairs. "You want this one," he announced.

Well, I was pretty steamed at Stew for implying that I am an idiot, so I responded to his choice by saying, "Okay, Stew."

Stew knows me. He knows where I live and what I do and where I do it and what special stuff I need for doing what I do where I do it. And he knew that I needed that special light bulb, even though I didn't know it. And now that I have been using that light bulb for a week, I realize he was right. And you know what else? It was cheaper than the light bulb I had picked up in the first place!

Day before yesterday, I needed copier paper. I decided to go to that new office supply store out on Fairview Avenue, the big one called Office Supplies "R" Us. The store is gigantic, with huge quantities of every office supply item in the known universe — paper clips by the gross, gallon jugs of correction fluid, metric tons of ballpoint pens, post-it notes stacked from floor to ceiling. The place is overwhelming, like an airplane hangar jammed full of stuff. I knew there was no way I would be able to find copier paper without some kind of navigational assistance, so I walked up to a counter to ask for directions. The young girl at the counter was holding the phone receiver between her shoulder and her ear, obviously chatting with a girlfriend, while holding her fingers splayed in order that her nail polish might dry.

"Excuse me," I said, not wanting to rudely interrupt the girl's obviously important conversation.

"You are KIDDING!" she squealed into the phone without acknowledging my presence.

"Um, excuse me?" I repeated, leaning down and over in an attempt to put my face in her line of sight.

It apparently worked, because the girl rolled her eyes and said disgustedly into the phone, "Just a sec, Ginny." Then looking at me with ice in her eyes, she said, "I'm on break!"

"I just want to know where I can find copier paper," I said, plaintively.

The girl said disgustedly, "Aisle 74," then turned back to her conversation and her nail polish, obviously done with me.

I looked around to find a clue as to the whereabouts of Aisle 74. Above me, hanging by chains from the exposed steel gridwork of the ceiling high above, was a sign. An arrow pointing left indicated "Aisles 1-58," and an arrow pointing right indicated "Aisles 59-∞." I went right.

By the time I finally got to Aisle 74, I was wishing I had packed a lunch. I turned into the corridor of gray metal shelving, piled so high with merchandise on either side that the stacks disappeared in cloud cover at about 3,500 feet. My footsteps echoed as I walked the length of the aisle, until I finally came to the copier paper section. There I found, to my dismay, that there were about 487 types of copier paper. But I only needed one kind, the kind I would call "Regular." I didn't see anything labeled "Regular." In fact, I couldn't understand any of the labels I saw. They were all written in UPC code, understandable only by machines.

I tried for a long time to find what I needed. It seemed that I had been in this store for days when I finally conceded to myself that I would have to ask for help. Down at the far end of the aisle I could barely make out a pimple-faced boy in a green vest, standing on a ladder, examining inventory and talking into a walkie talkie. I hollered down the canyon to him. "Excuse me. Could you help me please? I'm trying to find copier paper."

The boy, still speaking into the walkie talkie, gave a shove against the gray shelving, and both he and his ladder came rolling down the aisle at dangerous speed. He reached out his hand and grabbed a steel shelf strut just in time to bring himself and his vertical vehicle to a skidding halt before running me down.

"Synchronous or asynchronous copier?" he asked mechanically. "Short grain or long grain? One- or two-sided copying? Analog, digital, laser, electrolytic, peristaltic, bituminous, or V-lag?"

I went back to my office, fished all the discarded copies out of the trash, and ironed them. Using the other sides should work just fine.

There are a whole bunch of new stores like that, all right next to each other in a new shopping development. Toys "R" Us, Kids "R" Us, Pet Food "R" Us, Large Sizes "R" Us, Assorted Health & Beauty Aids, Home Accessories and 24-Packs of Diet Coke "R" Us. There's even a book store, the biggest book store in the state. Of course, as a purveyor of fine literature, like The Lavender Soliloquy, this store has eschewed the ungrammatical name shared by its mall-mates. This fine book store is called Books "R" We.

I have been in each of these stores once — and only once. Never again. They don't care about me. They don't know that I work at home, have two kids, love my wife and write for the Bugle. But Stew knows all that.

When I buy something at one of the Stuff "R" Us stores, my money ends up being used for fuel for some corporate jet somewhere in New Jersey. When I buy a light bulb at Park Hardware, my money ends up helping to send young Andy McIntosh to soccer camp.

At the risk of sounding like a promotional brochure put out by the St. Anthony Park Chamber of Commerce, I hafta say that I'm gonna spend my dough right here in the neighborhood whenever I can. We have something pretty darn unique here, you know. How many places in this country any more can you walk into several businesses in a row and actually find the owner working there?

Stew McIntosh owns the hardware store and he knows every nut and bolt and paper towel dispenser in the place because he picked them out himself. Roxy Freese bustles around the Bibelot Shop, among the little treasures that she has selected. When I walk into her store, she greets me by name. Most of the time all I buy is a card, which is just fine with Roxy. She doesn't have cards packed in quantities of 1,000 and stacked floor-to-ceiling on gray metal shelving. She has a few of most things, just one of others. And everything in the store, including Roxy herself, is very personal.

When you get something framed at Carter Avenue Frame Shop, chances are good that Tim Smith, who owns the place, cut the mats and tapped the frame together with his own hands. When you buy gas at Park Service, you'll find Nick Mayer there, working every day in the business that has been a part of his life since he was a kid. There's an old photo on the wall to prove it. And when you get a prescription filled at Miller Drug, that guy with the crew cut and mellow baritone voice behind the counter is Bob Bulger, the owner. (If you are only there for a candy bar, the young lady who gives you your change is very likely one of Bob's daughters.)

Now I know what you're thinking. But I'm not running for office. I was not paid by the local merchants to write this. I have absolutely nothing to gain by saying what I'm saying. I just feel darn lucky to have these places in the neighborhood. TV commercials try to make us believe that the retail world is still full of friendly shopkeepers like Mr. Whipple and Mr. Hooper and Mrs. Olson. But most of the places where we shop any more are not owned by Mr. anybody. They are owned by something called TriMonCo or OmniCorp or TakeOvers "R" Us ... or, more likely, Notsoshabi.

So I don't know about you, but I'm gonna keep as much of my business as possible right here in the neighborhood. I'll keep my money in the neighborhood bank, buy neighborhood gas, eat neighborhood deli sandwiches, send neighborhood get-well cards and take neighborhood aspirin. And when Christmas comes, you can bet that, if you get a gift from me, it will have been bought right here in St. Anthony Park. But I hope you don't shake the package too hard. Those light bulbs are fragile, you know.

"WE'RE IN THE PARK"

Beautiful singing in Como Park

By Michelle Christianson

When Bruce Larsen was in France after the Second World War, he began a quest for French sacred music in the bombed-out cathedrals and tiny music stores through the areas he was stationed. His dedication is evident in the vast body of printed music that lines the walls of Holy Childhood Church's Schola Cantorum classroom. Larsen is the group's founding music director. Much of his collection of music is unavailable elsewhere in the United States.

The Schola Cantorum ("school of music" in Latin) was founded by Father John Buchanan in 1947 for the purpose of worshipping God with the highest possible quality of musical performance. Forty boys and girls from Holy Childhood school are joined by older students and adults when they sing Masses and anthems each Sunday from mid-October through June. On major feast days of the church year, the singers are joined by musicians from the Minnesota Orchestra, the St. Paul Chamber Orchestra or from other professional groups in the area.

Because Larsen is semi-retired, the singers have been trained by Stephen Schmall since 1985. He has each class of 5th-8th graders for 45 minutes a day, Tuesdays through Fridays. In addition, there is rehearsals with the rest of the musicians on Thursday evenings. The students learn sacred works of the same level of difficulty and quality as those performed by the great choir schools of Europe. Works include all musical periods and most great composers with emphasis on Romantic and early 20th century French composers.

Obviously, such a rigorous program needs a well-trained and dedicated director. Schmall began as a singer in the Schola Cantorum himself. After graduation from Murray High School and the University of Minnesota, he sang with the Minnesota Opera company for six years and has performed with other regional music groups such as the St. Paul Chamber Orchestra. He trains the students in sight-

Native American writer leaves prairie for St. Paul

By Mary Mergenthal

"It's as though they opened the door and I stepped through and someone said, 'Yes, you're a writer...here are your tools...get to work.'"

That's a thoughtful reflection from Thomas King, St. Anthony Park writer. Step through the door he certainly did. A writer of note he certainly is.

"I started writing seriously when I lived in Canada during the last ten years. Five years ago I had nothing published. Then suddenly lots of my short stories were published, some of them anthologized. Medicine River, my first novel, was published by Penguin Books in Canada. It enjoyed good reviews there, and got exceptional coverage. Now Viking has bought the U. S. rights and published the book in September."

Medicine River is getting acclaim in the United States, too. It rated quite an extensive review in the New York Times Book Review, Sept. 23, 1990. The reviewer, Jack Butler, called it a "charming and low-key tale...a nice book, in the older sense of the word 'nice': economical, precise and elegant."

Will, the narrator of the book, is half Blackfoot and a photographer in Medicine River, a small town on the edge of a Blackfoot reserve in Alberta, Canada. Thomas King, the author, is a Cherokee who most recently taught in the Native Studies Department in Lethbridge, Alberta. To add to the similarity, Thomas King has been a photojournalist in Australia and New Zealand.

King is already working on his second novel, in the few moments when he is not flying around the country promoting the book, giving readings, and presenting workshops....or working on the house he just bought in St. Anthony Park.

That second novel will feature Native Americans, too, and he hopes to call it Green Grass, Running Water. "That's the title I want, though publishers may fight it.

It's an ironic play on the language found in many Indian treaties, about land being set aside for the Indians 'as long as the grass is green and the water runs.'"

King is on leave this quarter from his position teaching American Studies and Native American Studies at the University of Minnesota. That's fortunate because he's more than busy jet-setting around the country, dealing with the vagaries of a huge turn-of-the-century Victorian

Thomas King's first novel has sold well in Canada for some time. It is now available in the U.S.

house, planning the next novel AND writing the script for the film version of Medicine River. It has been sold to the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation and two production companies in Canada, but King gets to prepare the script.

King will be signing copies of the book at Micawber's Bookstore in St. Anthony Park at 1 p.m., Nov. 11.

Concert unites music and prose

By Marilyn Fritz Shardlow

Patricia Hampl remembers huddling on the playground with her girlfriends at St. Luke's School in St. Paul and replaying over and over again that requisite question of 1950's childhood, "What are you?" Usually, she claims, the answer was, "I'm Irish," but occasionally the response might be, "I'm German," or "I'm Norwegian." Her own reply (given while "sweeping her hand like a cleaver across her midriff") was more on the lines of "I'm half-Irish and half-Czech."

Little did she comprehend at those moments what her Czech heritage would do to shape her view of herself and of the world, as well as her increasingly distinguished literary career. The local author and memoirist has used this focus in two earlier prose works, A Romantic Education (1981) and Spillville (1987), both of which were listed among the best books of the year by the New York Times Book Review.

Life has not ceased to be an interesting adventure for Hampl these past twelve months. This "St. Paul girl made good" not only was awarded the very prestigious MacArthur Foundation fellowship, the so-called "genius grant," which will allow her to finish her next two books; she has also been an acutely interested witness to the dramatic political events occurring half a world away in her grandparents' homeland of Czechoslovakia.

Hampl will be available to autograph copies of A Romantic Education during intermission and after the Nov. 11 concert. The book may be purchased at the concert or in advance at Micawber's Bookstore.

This opening concert of the Music in the Park Series on Sun., Nov. 11 at 4 p.m., commemorates the first anniversary of what Czech playwright/president Vaclav Havel has termed his country's "velvet revolution." Readings and commentary by Patricia Hampl will provide the framework for chamber music by three of Czechoslovakia's most revered composers—Bedrich Smetana, Bohuslav Martinu and Antonin Dvorak.

Pianist Lydia Artymiw, whose performances at the Minnesota Orchestra's 1990 Sommerfest drew rave reviews, will join members of the Ensemble Capriccio string trio, bringing together a rare assemblage of internationally acclaimed artists.

Artymiw has succeeded in every facet of an important international career: as a soloist with over 70 orchestras throughout the United States, in recital and chamber music, and as a distinguished recording artist whose debut record was a Gramophone Magazine "Critic's Choice" and "Best of Year" disc. Currently on the faculty of the University of Minnesota, Artymiw has been hailed by the New York Times as "a compelling musical personality with an unusual ability to reach out and touch her listeners."

The Minneapolis-based Ensemble Capriccio makes a return visit to the Music in the Park Series with members violinist Chouhei Min, violist Sabina Thatcher, and cellist Mina Fisher. All three are musicians with the Minnesota Orchestra or the St. Paul Chamber Orchestra who have assembled distinguished solo careers as well. Their St. Anthony Park appearance will be the second performance of this, their seventh season.

If the purpose of anniversaries is to provoke reflection, then this pastiche of musical and literary excellence should certainly provide an excellent opportunity to contemplate the interconnected nature of music, art and politics. The history of Czechoslovakia as described by Patricia Hampl is the history of a nation that has struggled to define itself from its beginnings but has produced startling beauty in its culture.

To celebrate the Nov. 11 performance, concert-goers can gather for a buffet supper at the Muffuletta following the performance. Tickets will cost $10 per person and should be reserved and paid for by Nov. 5. (Seating is limited, so call early for this popular event.) Checks should be made payable to Music in the Park Series and mailed to 1333 Chelmsford St., St. Paul, MN 55108. Call 644-0745 for further information.

Season tickets for the five-concert series are $40, ($37 seniors, students, MPR members) and are available at The Bibelot Shop (646-5651) and Micawber's Bookstore (646-5506) in St. Anthony Park. Single tickets are $10, $9 in advance, $5 student rush at concert time. The Music in the Park Series concerts take place at St. Anthony Park United Church of Christ, 2129 Commonwealth Ave. at Chelmsford. Call 644-4234 for brochure/concert information.

Jorja Fleezanis

Fleezanis concert rescheduled for November 25

Music in the Park Series will present violinist Jorja Fleezanis and pianist Robert Helps in concert on Sun., Nov. 25, 4 p.m., at St. Anthony Park United Church of Christ, 2129 Commonwealth Ave. at Chelmsford.

The long-awaited event, rescheduled from May, 1990, promises to be an exciting one for Twin Cities concert-goers. Fleezanis, now in her second season as concertmaster of the Minnesota Orchestra, will preview her New York debut recital with a program of music by Charles Ives, Robert Helps and George Enescu.

Acclaimed baritone Sanford Sylvan, who has appeared in recent seasons with the SPCO, and percussionist Daniel Druckman, will join Fleezanis and Helps for the Minnesota premiere of "Brilliant Sky, Infinite Sky" by Aaron Kernis. The new work was commissioned jointly by The Schubert Club and Fleezanis, and is dedicated by the composer to the four performers.

Tickets, at $10, $9 if purchased in advance, are available at The Bibelot Shop and Micawber's Bookstore in St. Anthony Park. Information: 644-4234.

NOTE: New tickets will be issued to those who purchased season and single tickets last season.

Planning for retirement:

The good news and bad news

The good news about retirement is that, on average, we're all living longer; we have many more "leisure years" to enjoy. The bad news is because we're all living longer, it costs a lot more money to ensure a comfortable retirement. Especially if you hope to retire early (and who doesn't?), retirement planning has never been more critical.

How much will I need?

As a rule of thumb, you will need 70 to 80 percent of your final year's salary annually to maintain your current standard of living during retirement. And even that figure needs to be adjusted for inflation each year.

Often too late, people discover a substantial gap between what they expected to afford during retirement and what they actually are able to afford.

If you turned age 65 in 1989 and your final year's salary was $45,000, you would receive each year from social security only $10,788 if you're single and $16,176 if you're married!

Closing the gap between your retirement expectations and reality requires that you plan for retirement at least in your forties or no later than your fifties. It also requires that you make smart investments today while there's time to let the money grow, for a prosperous tomorrow.

Did you know that if you save just $100 a month at 8 percent interest from the day you turn age 40 to retirement at age 65, you would have more than $95,737! At 12 percent interest - a realistic rate for some of today's high-yielding bonds - that figure would nearly double to $189,764. These savings would grow even more under a tax-deferred plan such as an IRA.

First Bank can help

First Bank can help you set up a retirement plan that meets your particular needs and objectives, such as an IRA, Simplified Employee Pension plan or Keogh. We also offer a broad array of investments, such as money market retirement savings, CDs, annuities, mutual funds, stocks and bonds, and government securities.*

With serious planning and the right investments, your retirement can be all that you hoped it would, a time not to worry about but to look forward to.

Don't forget to purchase your holiday gifts with a First Bank check or your CHEXTRA® card. Under the First Bank Buyer Protection Program, many of your purchases are automatically protected for 90 days against loss, theft, or breakage. See our brochure for more details on limitations and restrictions.

Library & rec center hours surveyed

By Dan Callahan
Neighborhood News Service

Our community's library and recreation centers may have new, longer hours next year. Or hours and programs may be cut back to even lower levels than they are today.

It all depends on the outcome of hearings and a survey of residents taking place this month at recreation centers and libraries around the city.

South St. Anthony is closed on Fridays. All rec centers are only open for special events on Saturdays.

Libraries, too, have weekend hours only at the four large branches—Hayden Heights, Lexington, Sun Ray, Highland Park—and the central library. And residents, who have been asked for their opinions about libraries in a survey distributed throughout the system, are also calling for longer hours, especially on weekends, the only days many residents can find time to get to the library.

The fact that officials are still battling for extended library hours embarrasses Kathleen Stack, assistant library director.

"For years I stood before the council finance committee asking for the money for Sunday hours," Stack says. "Here we are the urban library system with millions of books and a professional staff and the doors are locked. From a professional standpoint, this is a travesty."

The intensive assessment of community opinions about the two institutions has been spurred by Maccabee, who originally proposed that hours be lengthened.

"When we got into it we found that we wanted to assess not only if there were enough hours but are those the hours the community would choose to have?" Maccabee says.

The result was that in mid-September Maccabee's Community and Human Services committee asked representatives of libraries and rec centers to find out what the public wanted. And they had to do it in time for the November budget meetings.

Two of the stumbling blocks to increasing hours are money and convincing employees to accept the hours. City officials recognized those problems and formed committees made up of labor and management to oversee the hearings and

Hours to 18

"Why not be open for skating on Saturday nights during the winter? That's when the kids don't have to get up and go to school."

The hearings and surveys are drawing opinions from residents who use the services. Those opinions will be tabulated to determine hours and programs for 1991. And administrators hope that the intensive assessment of community opinions of the services will prevent budget cuts.

"This may determine how much money they [libraries and rec centers] get," says City Councilwoman Paula Maccabee. "If we see them serving the community well, it lets us know the money is being justified."

At a recent hearing at North Dale Recreation Center, five residents attended to tell recreation director Michael Windey they liked the center's programming but wanted more hours.

"There is not enough time in the week," Deb Kelley said. "Why not be open for skating on Saturday nights during the winter? That's when the kids don't have to get up and go to school."

"I think there are more than enough things going on," said Ken Clausen. "You cover every sport, every season. I don't know what else you could do. If they don't get involved, then it's their own fault."

On the other side of St. Paul, 20 residents near the Wilder Recreation Center told center director Joseph Germaine they wanted more programs for 13-17 year-olds, tutoring for children and more multicultural programs.

The responses were typical of what other residents were saying at the other city rec centers, according to Vince Gillespie of the Park & Recreation Department. "The need for Saturday programs is coming across loud and clear," he says. "People are also saying they want more family activities and special events."

Generally, the 42 rec centers are open from 2-10 p.m., Mon.-Fri. Langford is now open 2-8 p.m. on Fridays;

Speaking Briefly

Take the bus

Residents of Lauderdale, Falcon Heights, and St. Anthony Park may ride the Roseville Area Circulator bus to and from Rosedale at rates identical to those charged by the MTC. Although the Roseville Circulators (those small white buses with the red rose on the side) are operated by Morley Bus Company, they work with the MTC on fares, transfers and scheduling link ups. They pick up passengers at MTC bus stops.

The buses have been operating for a year and a half in Shoreview, Little Canada, Lauderdale and Falcon Heights on six routes. Two of those routes serve the Bugle area: Route 105, which goes from Como & Eustis to Rosedale via Eustis, Roselawn, Cleveland & Fairview; and Route 106, which goes from the St. Paul Campus Student Center to Rosedale via Cleveland, County Rd. B & Fairview. Call 631-8826 for more information.

Gardening calendar

A new "Minnesota Gardening" wall calendar for 1991, a publication of the University of Minnesota Extension Service, has several connections with St. Anthony Park.

Don Breneman took most of the full-color photos, John Barrick is featured on the October page, and the Wehrwein home is February & November's photo. In addition to some lovely gardening and nature shots, the calendar offers planting tips on each page.

It's for sale locally at the Bibelot, Miller Pharmacy and the St. Paul Campus Student Center bookstore.

Author visits local school

Allen Say, noted children's author and illustrator, will visit St. Anthony Park Elementary School on Fri., Nov. 16. He will talk to students about his work, answer questions and autograph books.

Say was born in Yokohama, Japan, and apprenticed himself to a famous cartoonist at age 12. When he was 16, he came to California, where he continued his art studies. He now lives in San Francisco.

His visit is jointly sponsored by the St. Paul Public Schools and the St. Paul Public Library.

"75 Years and Growing," will be completely different from past presentations. This year's mum crop will be presented in the new growing house, which was completed in February, 1990.

The show will be held from Nov. 10-Dec. 2 from 10 a.m.-6 p.m. daily. There is no admission charge because the Sunken Garden remains under construction.

Over 10,000 mum cuttings were taken from 166 varieties of the flower for this year's display.

The designer of the Japanese Garden at the Conservatory, Masami Matsuda, is in town to work on pool renovation, construction of a bridge and completion of the Japanese tea house at the garden. This work will be completed this fall and new plants will be added in the spring of 1991.

Rehabilitation of the Palm Dome at the Conservatory and an addition of picnic pavilions in Como Park are now possible because of an allocation of $3.2 million from the Metropolitan Parks and Open Space Commission.

Donate A Book

The major fund-raising drive for the library at St. Anthony Park Elementary School is called Donate A Book. It is sponsored by SAPSA (St. Anthony Park School Association) to increase the number of school library books available to students. This year most of the books are hard cover; there are a few paperbacks. Prices range from $2.50 to $16.95.

If community residents are interested in donating a book, the Donate A Book tables will be near the school office entrance at the following times: Nov. 13, 5-8 p.m.; Nov. 14, 9 a.m.-noon, 1-4 p.m. & 5-8 p.m.

If you would prefer to make a cash donation, the school's librarian, Mrs. Kaiser, will select a book for you. Checks may be made out to SAPSA—Donate A Book and sent to the school, 2180 Knapp St., St. Paul, MN 55108.

Islam discussed

St. Anthony Park United Methodist Women will address the subject "The World of Islam" on Tues., Nov. 6 at 7 p.m. After dessert, members Marilyn Dunshee, Sara Glew and Evelyn Harne will lead the presentation and discussion. Friends of the community are invited.

Artist selected

Kinji Akagawa, professor of art at the Minneapolis College of Art and Design, has been selected as the conceptual artist to work with the St. Anthony Park community to select a public art project. Public Art St. Paul, a non-profit company, has held Public Space Design Workshops since July. Participants have included members of St. Anthony Park's business community and interested residents.

Next on the agenda is selection of a site, which is expected to be done at the upcoming workshop session on Mon., Nov. 5, 7 p.m., at So. St. Anthony Recreation Center. Locations being considered most seriously are University & Raymond, Energy Park Drive & Raymond, Hampden Park (Raymond & Hampden), as well as a larger project encompassing most of Raymond & Como Aves.

The main focus of the decision making process has been to choose a project that will unite the various educational, historical, residential and commercial aspects of St. Anthony Park.

members and develop a security manual for the businesses. He will also coordinate the business crime watch program with the residential crime watch Block Club program operated through the St. Anthony Park Community Council and St. Anthony Park Association.

Wilson says his first priority has been setting up a telephone network among the businesses—a process he says will be in place by early November. This is modeled after successful "Mall Watch" programs at Maplewood Mall and Burnsville Center. It works like this: If a merchant or customer spots a suspicious person or activity, a call is made to a central security person who then gets on the phone to another merchant. Through a "telephone tree" setup, each member calls three others, and within minutes details about the suspicious behavior has been relayed to all the member merchants, who can be on the lookout.

Wilson himself will not respond to each incident. His job, he says, is "to make an overall impact on the community's deterrence to crime. The community needs to give a message that crime will not be tolerated here.

"The 'shock value' of a crime is greater here than in other areas because St. Anthony Park has been relatively crime free," he continues. "Setting up a security manual will relate the kinds of problems that could happen, how to prevent them, and the best steps to take for communication between the businesses, the community, and the police."

Wilson has been a resident of St. Anthony Park for two years. He is a student at Luther Northwestern Seminary. His experience in the crime watch field includes three years with the military police and a background in retail security. He's worked in security at Rosedale and Burnsville Center.

He intends to coordinate the association's activities with the residential crime watch program, and stresses that residents should not be concerned about increased vigilance in the business area pushing crime into the neighborhood. "When things are made tougher on criminals they will generally cease their crimes. They don't go to another area," he contends.

Members of the St. Anthony Park Merchants and Professionals Association will have decals on their windows by November to announce their participation in the crime watch program. Customers and residents are urged to report any suspicious activity to an employee in a store with one of these identifying logos.

Participants in the program are not limited to the retail stores near Como & Carter. Businesses on Cleveland Ave. and agencies such as Children's Home Society and Group Health, Inc. are members of the association, as well.

Julian Zweber is pleased the merchants are addressing crime problems directly. He encourages other businesses and institutions to become involved in addressing potential problems.

"We want to keep things safe in St. Anthony Park and we want to let the criminal element know we're not easy pickings."

Heliport from 1

to be involved in a dispute with residents of the Midway area.

City Councilmember Paula Maccabee says a city ordinance passed in the summer of 1989 states heliports must be in an area zoned for airport use and managed by a government entity. Under the ordinance, Holman Field would be the only place in St. Paul allowed to be the site of a heliport. Maccabee feels the appeals court made a mistake by acting as if the city lifted the 1987 moratorium. "The neighborhood was right," said Maccabee. "The heliport said Maccabee. "The heliport does not belong on University Avenue. I'm willing to do whatever I can to protect the neighborhood and the business community against this nuisance."

St. Anthony Park Community Organizer Roberta Megard has been watching the situation develop. "We'd know something if something were happening," she said. "It [the heliport] is not going to help the quality of life in West Midway."

MONITOR ENDORSES
OUR NEIGHBOR FOR U.S. CONGRESS!

Ian Maitland is only Republican endorsed by Monitor.

"Ian Maitland's candidacy looks better than ever.... A professor of management at the University of Minnesota, Maitland is intelligent, opinionated and has definite opinions about government.... Maitland is the most impressive candidate the Independent Republican party has fielded to run against Vento for some time. He deserves consideration from 4th District voters and as far as the Monitor is concerned, he has won over our endorsement."

VOTE FOR OUR NEIGHBOR

It won't be business as usual in Congress anymore.

Hours from 11

surveys.

"The libraries are highly unionized," Stack says. "We saw that there was no point in management or the city council making a decision without talking to the union."

Stack says library workers may be asked to trade hours or part-time workers could be hired to take over some hours.

"We know that libraries in other communities are open on Sundays," she says. "Let's find out how they do it."

"Here we are the urban library system with millions of books and a professional staff and the doors are locked. From a professional standpoint, this is a travesty."

Representatives of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees say they are withholding judgment until a plan is presented.

Workers like North Dale Rec Center's Mike Windey support working with management to set hours and programs.

"We need to work together," Windey says. "Look at Eastern Airlines. When they had labor-management incentives, they were making the highest profit in the airlines. Then they became adversaries. Look where they are now—they're gone."

The tight timetable for compiling the information bothered library administrator Stack, who says, "we are doing six months of work in less than six weeks."

"It's been very difficult," Stack says. "We're going to get it all done but this isn't the way we like to do it. We would like to hire some marketing firm to do this work. But that just isn't a luxury we've had."

Windey, who has worked in recreation for 18 years, says the rec centers are important community outlets. "The activities give the kids self esteem," he says. "If they feel good about themselves maybe they won't get into other things like drugs."

But at Wilder, an area made up of middle- and lower-class income residents who can't pay fees that North Dale Rec Center is able to collect, those who attended the meeting were realistic about the limited funds available to them.

"Everybody knows the resources are limited," Germaine says. "We're dealing with a lot of single-parent and low-income families who can't afford to pay fees."

"It's great to get the community's input but I don't know if it will make any difference. I hope things will get better, but you never know."

Community Council passes LRT motion

By Phil Holt

The St. Anthony Park Community Council passed a motion at its Oct. 10 meeting stating that it would look with disfavor on any Light Rail Transit (LRT) system that did not serve the Westgate development and Court International, located in the redeveloped International Harvester Building.

The Council noted that a route for the proposed LRT system has not been decided. The three possible routes include I-94, the Burlington Northern right of way, and University Ave.

Council members also discussed the LRT ridership survey. Several members expressed hesitation at making a motion without knowing the results of the survey findings. At press time it was unclear when these findings would be released.

Community Organizer Roberta Megard was a supporter of the motion. "The district council is looking at the needs of the neighborhood in terms of large employers," Megard said. She also noted that LRT would alleviate a significant traffic problem. Speaking on her own behalf, she said, "My bias is for LRT. We need to start thinking harder than we have about service to the area. We need to think of the future."

The measure was passed by a 9-4 vote. The council discussed the possibility of announcing a town meeting once the ridership survey was released along with an environmental impact statement.

Schola from 6

reading, phrasing, understanding musical terms, rhythm and counting, singing in other languages, and building basic musicianship.

"Sometimes I feel like a football coach," says Schmall. "It's hard to keep everyone's attention with kids this age. But if they try at all, they will learn to sing. Even those who are tone-deaf!"

Schmall was trained in the Italian vocal method and uses it with the children to produce a full, round tone. He thinks there are few in Minnesota (possibly only five others) who use this method and wishes there were more.

"Just a few singers can fill a church with sound using this style of singing. The flat style most children are taught now just doesn't produce much volume. Also, it is difficult to stay in tune with other instruments because a flat tone doesn't have the vibrato of stringed instruments, for example. The Italian method is clearly superior."

Schmall invites people to hear the Schola on Sun., Nov. 25 at 10:30 a.m. when they will sing the Messe de Domremy by Henry Busser for the Feast of Christ the King. This is the United States premiere of this Mass; it will be accompanied by trumpets and organ.

A passage from an informational sheet written by Schmall sums up the purpose of this program. "A great work of art can truly spark or ignite the mind and move the spirit." This truly fulfills Father Buchanan's original goal of praising God with the highest possible quality of performance.

The month of November is going to be an exciting month. On Fri., Nov. 16, an author is going to come to school. He is a well-known children's author named Allen Say. He will come to talk about his work, answer questions, and autograph books.

The Student Council has paid for two new basketball hoops for kids to use during recess. The students had been waiting for the hoops for quite awhile and are very happy they are finally here.

Now I'd like to tell you just a few things that individual grades have planned for November. Some of the kindergartners will study Native Americans. They will also read the book Stone Soup and hopefully make soup!

Grades 1, 2 and 3 are going to a special program at the Ordway Music Theatre on Nov. 8. The program is called "Shanghai Acrobats and Imperial Warriors of the Peking Opera." Third graders will begin to learn cursive writing this month.

The Intermediate team of grades 4, 5 and 6 also has lots of fun activities planned. The 4th graders will visit Belwin Nature Center. The 5th graders will begin nutrition classes taught by the U of M Extension Service. Math Club will be starting for 5th and 6th graders, and Math Olympics will begin for grades 4, 5 and 6.

After all these activities, the whole school will enjoy a short Thanksgiving vacation.

Murray Junior High

Excitement here at Murray is rising during these late fall days. The Wolf Ridge Environmental Learning Center Multi-cultural Retreat is fast approaching. Close to 100 students and 12 8th grade leaders are chosen to spend a week near Finland, Minn., studying our environment and participating in outdoor activities.

The Halloween Spooky Day and dance is going to be on Wed., Oct. 31. Students are preparing costumes for this fun day.

Tryouts for the drill team were held on Oct. 15. As for our soccer teams, the boys have lost only one game and the girls are still undefeated at the time of this writing.

On October 22, Como Park kicked off Red Ribbon Week, which is a week devoted to Drug Prevention. Students heard from Dr. David Bennett, Councilman Bill Wilson, School Board member Margo Fox, Chief of Police Bill McCutcheon, Mayor Jim Scheibel, the C.E.O. from U.S. West, Governor Perpich and Peter Hayden from Turning Point, a Drug Prevention Center.

Connie Tressel and other advisory council members have organized a potluck athletic banquet for fall sports. It will be held Nov. 5, 6-8 p.m.

Parent Teacher Conferences will be held on Thurs., Nov. 8, and Wed., Nov. 14 from 5:30-8:30 p.m.

On Fri., Nov. 16, 7-11 p.m., students can attend the Sadie Hawkins Dance.

Everyone is invited to the Advisory Council meeting on Nov. 27 at 7 p.m.

The Como Alumni Organization, which was started last spring with help from John Brodrick, is becoming very active at Como Park. It sponsored the pre-Homecoming Game Bonfire on Oct. 11. It is also sponsoring the Como Alumni Hockey Game at Aldrich Arena on Jan. 14, at 6 p.m. This will be played prior to the Como/St. Bernard's hockey game which begins at 8 p.m. The team will be made up of alumni members, but all Como alumni are encouraged to come and watch.

Como is continuing its partnership with Unisys. Unisys is providing tutors for enrichment and remedial work.

Como has a newly formed partnership with Hamline University. Hamline will provide mentors for special education students. The program is called "Best Buddies" and encourages these students to seek post-secondary training.

Gail Brinkmeier

Central High

The school year is well under way. The athletic teams are nearing the end of the fall season and getting up at 5:45 a.m. has become natural for most students.

The most significant of recent events was Homecoming week, Oct. 8-12. Students had the option to participate in many activities including dress up days, tug of war competitions, and a Friday afternoon pep rally. The end of the week was the most exciting with the royalty coronation on Thursday and the football game and post-game party on Friday.

Central was the proud host of some very special guests for a day at the end of September. The graduating class of 1925 was celebrating its 65 year reunion which included lunch at The Lexington and a tour of the school building.

Thanks to the Student Council, the year is off to an excellent start. Hopefully the same spirit can be continued all year.

Parent-teacher conferences will be Nov. 8 & 14 in the evening. If you have not yet made an appointment, please call the school at 293-8700.

The 1990-91 yearbook can be ordered in homerooms for $35 through Oct. 26.

Bandana Square for sale

The St. Paul Port Authority has announced plans to sell the Bandana Square retail center in Energy Park. The sale was announced to Bandana merchants in September. However, Port Authority President, Jim Bellus, says the agency is committed to assisting the center with its holiday promotions "to make sure this holiday season is as successful as possible."

In an Oct. 1 letter to tenants, Bellus thanked merchants for their cooperation during a time of transition during the past few months. He also pledged to continue Port Authority efforts to make the first-floor retail area a success.

Lovely lutefisk

The 34th Annual Scandinavian Dinner sponsored by the St. Anthony Park Chapter Order of the Eastern Star will be held at the Fairview Community Center, 1910 W. County Road B, Roseville. It's scheduled for Sat., Nov. 3, from 4-7 p.m. Featured foods are lutefisk, Swedish meatballs, home-made lefse and krumkaka. All you can eat for a donation of $7.50 for adults and $2.50 for children under 10.

Library news

St. Paul Public Libraries are putting a little more power in the fingertips of its users. Online catalogs were installed during October at 12 St. Paul public libraries. From now on, library users only have to type an author, subject, or title on a keyboard to initiate their search for the location and availability of an item. All the needed information is displayed on a computer terminal. Users will also know much sooner when a new title has been added to the library's collection.

St. Paul public libraries used the traditional multi-drawer card catalogs until 1980. For the last 10 years, microfiche readers were utilized.

Free films for children will be shown at the St. Anthony Park library, 2245 Como Ave., on Fri., Nov. 23, 10:30 a.m., during the Thanksgiving holiday. The films include "Angus Lost," "A Pocket for Corduroy," and "Dingles."

South St. Anthony Rec Center

A reminder to elementary age area youth: Our gym is available for your use after school, 4-5:30 p.m. Bring your friends down, and recreation leader, Steve Shapira, will lead activities and supervise free play. Our Parent-Child play group has continued to meet. New families are always welcome. This group meets alternating Wednesdays, 9:30-11:30 a.m. to meet with neighbors, and future schoolmates, discuss and offer support on parenting issues, and to have fun! Bring a few toys to share. The next meetings are Nov. 14, 28, and Dec. 12.

Anyone interested in donating new or slightly used toys for our Parent-Child play-group is encouraged to do so. The group has been growing, and could use some additional playthings. Items may be dropped off at the recreation center.

A special thank you is extended to all our neighbors who attended the recreation needs meeting on Oct. 4. We received a lot of good ideas that will be helpful in future programming.

New snow plowing system announced

By Phil Holt

The St. Paul Public Works Department plans to begin a new two-phase system of street plowing which it says will reduce total plowing time from 45 to 20 hours.

The previous plan called for plowing all snow emergency routes at night, with north-south and east-west streets (depending on calendar day) being plowed on the following two consecutive days.

The new system continues the plan for night plowing of all snow emergency routes. In addition, one-half (either east half or west half) of all north-south residential streets will also be plowed at night. This first phase of the new snow plowing plan will happen from 9 p.m.-6 a.m. on the first evening of a snow-storm. Then from 8 a.m.-5 p.m. the following day, all east-west streets and the remaining half of north-south residential streets will be plowed.

The Public Works Department says signs reading "Snow Emergency Route—No Parking This Side of Street" will be placed on designated residential streets in addition to the current snow emergency designation signs. It is hoped this plan will simplify TV and radio announcements considerably. The announcements will call for no parking on designated snow emergency routes at night and then no parking on non-designated routes the next day until plowing is completed.

The new plowing system was tested last year on the West Side of St. Paul. Al Shetka, St. Paul Street Maintenance Engineer, says last year's test period saw only one snow emergency but the system seemed to work just as well as the former three phase plan. Shetka acknowledged the increase of signs on residential streets will decrease parking options but noted that "reduced parking is the price to pay for quicker service."

Call the Street Maintenance Division, 298-4321, with questions.

Central America Resource Center

The Central America Resource Center, 1407 N. Cleveland Ave., is celebrating its seventh year of service to the Twin Cities community with an anniversary open house celebration on Sat., Nov. 17, 11 a.m.-5 p.m.

Festivities begin with a Central American meal from 11:30 a.m.-2:30 p.m., featuring fresh hot tortillas, rice, beans, salad, beverage and dessert, all generously donated by local co-ops and restaurants. The meal will be served at Corpus Christi Church, just one block north of CARC.

If you're looking for alternative holiday gifts, the short stroll back to the Resource Center will open into a world of the Central American marketplace, where you can consider stunning Guatemalan weavings and clothing, colorful hand-painted Salvadoran wood carvings, Chilean needlework, beautiful 1991 Native American calendars, greeting cards, as well as the latest Latin American books, cassettes and other handicrafts.

CARC's annual celebrity silent auction will present opportunities to bid on celebrity items and donations from local merchants, including one-of-a-kind photographs, South American textiles and dolls, autographed books, Nicaraguan carvings, tickets to local restaurants and theaters, Mexican language school courses, memorabilia from the 1990 Nicaraguan elections and much more.
