

Council sponsors Christmas tree recycling

By Vickie Gilmer

'Tis the season to recycle, and we're not talking just your everyday trash anymore. The St. Anthony Park Community Council is co-sponsoring its first Christmas tree recycling on Sat., Jan. 11. The council is hoping to recycle between 750 and 1,000 trees.

While recycling mania has spread almost as quickly as the hole in the ozone layer, this is the first year the council has offered the program.

The use of toxic chemicals, paints, and glues used during the growing season and after cutting has caused concern and limits the types of trees that can be recycled. Not acceptable are flocked trees (which have been sprayed with paint, glue and wood fibers), wreaths, and trees with ornaments, tinsel or tree stands.

After pickup the trees will be chipped, a process that cuts the trees into small pieces that can be used for landscaping or non-crop mulch.

The project is funded by cleanup revenues collected by the council and the city of St. Paul. The Hansen Tree Farm and Conklin Tree Farm will furnish trucks; volunteers from the council and the University of Minnesota's Forestry Club will help pick up the trees.

Falcon Heights, Lauderdale and Como Park are not offering Christmas tree recycling. Tree pickup will be left to the various refuse collectors in those areas.

The St. Anthony Park Community Council recommends that trees not be placed on the curb until the evening of Fri., Jan. 10. Trees must be set out by 7 a.m. on Saturday morning for recycling pickup. If you would like to lend a hand, call the St. Anthony Park Community Council at 292-7884.

David and Mark Hansen from Hansen Tree Farm, along with other local volunteers, will collect Christmas trees in St. Anthony Park on January 11.

Gibbs schoolhouse could still get the wrecking ball

By Kathy Malchow

Now's the time for supporters of the Gibbs schoolhouse at Cleveland & Larpentur to put their money where their mouth is. The grey Falcon Heights landmark, surrounded by Christmas trees for sale each December, may not be around forever if the community isn't willing to put up dollars to maintain it.

At least this was the message relayed by the University Board of Regents Physical Planning and Operations Committee at a meeting on Dec. 12. The committee discussed plans for the building for the first time, responding to a resolution introduced by University senior vice-president for planning, Robert Erickson. (The University owns the property and the building, which is the oldest one-room schoolhouse on its original site in Ramsey County.)

The resolution, entitled Gibbs Schoolhouse Preservation, calls for the University to install "an entrance sign for the St. Paul Campus, a building identification sign at the schoolhouse and to landscape the grounds appropriately." In addition, the University is asked "to make the necessary repairs to the exterior and paint the building's exterior, and make such repairs to the interior to ensure that the schoolhouse remains structurally sound, if sufficient financial support is provided by the community."

Gibbs schoolhouse has been the subject of much discussion in 1991, with at least two public meetings held in the fall. Members and friends of the Minnesota Historical Society and people from Falcon Heights, St. Anthony Park and Roseville, several of whom were pupils and teachers at the school, formed a committee to help save it. They pledged financial support and even elbow grease to fix the place up.

One of the committee's wishes, however, is that the inside of the schoolhouse be renovated as a museum celebrating the one-room schoolhouse in Minnesota and its link with higher educational institutions such as the University of Minnesota. University officials have put thumbs down on this request, citing sky-high liability coverage in these times of University belt-tightening as the main drawback. In fact, the resolution presented to the Board of Regents states the building should be preserved "...as a visible linkage to the past with no occupancy or access to the interior spaces, and...that it be used for University purposes and no other."

At the Dec. 12 meeting, Board of Regents committee members wanted to know how much commitment the community

Gibbs to 11

By Mary Mergenthal

More than $8,000,000 worth of new development is now getting under way in St. Anthony Park thanks to $800,000 in city loans and other funding approved by the Saint Paul Housing and Redevelopment Authority. The Update Company's massive renovation project will make a vacant warehouse and factory into a commercial business and office complex at the southeast corner of University & Raymond.

The loan money will purchase land and create 300 off-street parking spaces in an area where there are now 50. The cost involves tearing down a third vacant building at the site to create parking room, according to Chuck McCann, a partner in the family-owned development firm.

Except for the parking assistance, the project is privately financed. McCann says that up to 350 people eventually could be employed at the old Specialty Building manufacturing plant and the nearby Kempf Building, a vacant paper warehouse. Plans are to create a medium-cost office rental building out of the four-story, 110,000-square-foot former metalworks factory. Owners of the factory moved their operations and 30 jobs to a single-story plant in White Bear Lake last year after 69 years in St. Paul.

The Update Company has previously developed nine other buildings in the area, including the Midtown Commons project in the same block and the Northern Clay Center across the street. Most of those renovations and the current project are the work of architect Rolf Lokensgard.

The loans were approved after the Update Company asked the city for financial assistance to develop parking, the catalyst for undertaking a multi-phase development project at the Raymond-University intersection. That project includes acquisition and renovation of the Kempf Building, 2300 Myrtle, which will be rehabilitated with an additional $125,000 commercial loan from the city, and acquisition and demolition of existing property at 2304 University. The Kempf Building will be renovated this winter and the parking lot will then be constructed at the 2304 University site this spring.

Sandy Jacobs, Update property manager, says "We have lots of interest in the Kempf Building and are currently negotiating several leases. The first tenants should be able to move in in March." The Kempf Building would also be available for occupancy by tenants of the existing building at 2304 University, which will allow those tenants to remain in the neighborhood.

Both the Kempf renovation and the parking construction projects are considered Phase I of the development, McCann said, with Phase II including renovation of the Specialty Building so that 100,000 sq. ft. of new office space will be available there, it is hoped within three years.

Mozart and Clementi come to St. Anthony Park

By Linda Steen

The year was 1781. The scene, the royal palace of Emperor Joseph II of Austria. Muzio Clementi had received an invitation to perform his works for the emperor and his guests. When he arrived he realized that he was not the only performer. Mozart was there, also at the invitation of the emperor, and the two composers soon understood that this was not simply a concert but a competition. At the time opinions varied about which of them had won.

Now shift to Jan. 12, 1992, at 4 p.m. at the St. Anthony Park United Church of Christ, 2129 Commonwealth Ave. in St. Paul. The Music in the Park Series along with the Schubert Club has invited two renowned fortepianists, Penelope Crawford and Nancy Garrett, to perform works of the 18th century by Mozart, Clementi and Couperin. From the looks of the program, this concert will be a collaboration rather than a competition. Each number involves either one piano, four hands or two pianos, meaning that these two artists will be playing together at all times. And if they're not collaborating, this concert promises to be more exciting than anyone anticipated.

Nancy Burton Garrett, professor of piano at the University of Texas, holds a bachelor of music with distinction, and a performer's certificate from the Eastman

School of Music and master of music in performance from the University of Texas at Austin. She won first prize in the G.B. Dealey piano competition in 1962, and has won numerous other awards including finalist diploma in the Busoni international piano competition in Bolzana, Italy, first prize in the KRBE national piano competition, and a Fulbright award for study in London.

A native of Michigan, Penelope Crawford has received performance degrees from the Eastman School of Music and the University of Michigan, with additional studies at the Mozarteum in Salzburg and the Accademia di Santa Cecilia in Rome. A faculty member of the University of Michigan, Crawford has recently established a master's degree program in fortepiano and is currently involved in the planning and formation of an Historical Performance Institute. Since 1976 she has taught and performed each summer at the Oberlin Baroque Performance Institute, the workshop where she first developed an interest in historical instruments.

All right, so we have a program of 18th century music. We have two performers who have promised to exchange primo and secondo parts as well as trade pianos now and then. Could the concert contain another element of surprise or interest? Yes! said the performers. Yes! said the Schubert Club. Audience members will have the opportunity to hear a copy of a Walter piano that Mozart was familiar with and a replica of another 18th century-style piano. These pianos were built respectively by John Lyon and Keith Hill, both of Michigan. The Schubert Club will donate a Stein piano from its museum collection. Dick Sorenson of Minneapolis built this piano, patterned from an original made in 1784.

This next part is a discussion of the merits of playing 18th century music on instruments that replicate as closely as possible those instruments for which the music was written. If you have heard this argument once too often, skip to the next paragraph. Penelope Crawford describes it this way: "All three fortepianos are 5-octave instruments which throughout their range have audible contrasts in color as you ascend or descend the scale. The sound is more transparent. The articulation markings in the music translate into immediate sense as you play these instruments. Some listeners will remark that the sound is softer, but they'll also notice that it has more clarity." She went on to say, "These instruments bring out more speech-like or vocal gestures in the music. They declaim the text, make it very talkative, make the music more rhetorical."

Now if that doesn't make you want to get up out of your easy chair on a cold January afternoon to hear two pianos talking to one another, what will? (Just practicing some rhetoric...) This concert will be the fourth in a series of concerts that Crawford and Garrett are performing together in preparation for their concert at Lincoln Center in New York on April 5.

The concert on Jan. 12 is sponsored jointly by the Music in the Park Series and the Schubert Club through a partnership grant from the Metropolitan Regional Arts Council with funding through the McKnight Foundation. Tickets are $10 at the door, $9 advance purchase and $5 student rush. They may be purchased at The Bibelot Shop (646-5651) and Micawber's Bookstore (646-5506) in St. Anthony Park. More information about the concert may be had by calling 644-4234.

Penelope Crawford and Nancy Garrett will give the music of Mozart, Clementi and Couperin new life on period instruments at the January 12 Music in the Park concert.

Council actions at a glance

- Voted to purchase 1/2 page in the Bugle in light of the 1992 community council budget deficit.
- Delegated the community organizer to negotiate reduction or elimination of the 8% rent increase with Parks and Rec.
- Approved the creation of a South St. Anthony Park Rec Booster Club task force to pursue playground equipment and design.
- Directed a letter to MnDOT suggesting that plantings along both sides of I-94 and T.H. 280 be done as part of the Reconstruct Project to provide sound abatement.
- Requested that the city council remove the truck route designation on Raymond south of Hampden to University.
- Approved a subdivision of land south of Como Avenue on Stella and North of the BN tracks to allow sale of property by Glacier Park Company to the State Fairgrounds and the University of Minnesota Transitway. Council expressed reservations regarding land sale to fairgrounds because they did not know what the intended use is.
- Adopted Westgate Station option for LRT in the Midway Corridor and sent the recommendation to the Ramsey County Regional Railroad Authority.

Council comments Langford Park—who is responsible? by Alice Magnuson

Langford Park is a focal point in St. Anthony Park and in its history and development. It was a place of beauty when city dwellers left the city 100 years ago to settle in this new suburban community. At that time Langford Park was a lake that offered fresh breezes, green trees and a public place for new residents to meet. Urban studies tell us that citizens need natural public spaces for the healthy development of the self and to help provide a sense of community.

The privilege of having public space also carries a responsibility for those who use it. In St. Anthony Park we all use Langford Park. Like the early residents who used the lake as a meeting place, we use it according to our activities, but almost all of us use it once a year to celebrate the Fourth of July. But what happens to the park the rest of the year? As a lifelong resident, I have spent many years observing Langford Park and have become aware of the need to work together to ensure its future.

Alice Magnuson

A public space should be used by anyone who wants to use it. But there needs to be cooperation between those who use it and those who have the authority to manage it. As a park in the city of St. Paul, it is part of the parks system. That is what Fredrick Olmstead planned when he established parks and public spaces in New York and across the country in the late 1800s. Cities should provide and care for park spaces.

St. Anthony Park is fortunate to have a history of community groups that have helped maintain cooperation with the city in how our public spaces have been used. This was true when the "new" St. Anthony Park grade school was built in the early 1950s and Langford Park became part of the school playground. This was true when the community and the city worked together to fill in the swimming pool that ran in front of the bandstand. (Yes, folks there was a swimming pool in Langford Park.) The playground at the south end of Langford is the place many of us learned to skate, play hockey, softball, football and now basketball and volleyball. Except for the two or three days in the spring when the snow melts and the park becomes a lake again, the outside basketball/volleyball court, tennis courts and horseshoe ring are used daily. But on those few days when it is a mini-lake, more than one of us have launched a boat or canoe and paddled around under Fred Steinhäuser's trees. The countless community groups and families come to picnic in the evenings and on weekends. Other people come to walk through it like the early residents did.

Why then the concern about whose park it is? It is obviously everybody's park and it is being used by everybody year around. To keep it a park that everyone wants to use requires all of us to be diligent about how it is managed and how it is cared for. There needs to be communication between the city, the community organizations and the school district, but most of all between the residents of St. Anthony Park and those who live around Langford Park. We need to be aware when NSP puts in natural gas regulators to control gas pressure. We need to be aware when the grade school installs another basketball court, obviously intended for the school-age children but misused by others. We need to be aware when individuals are dropping off their trash. We need communication when trees are planted and benches are built so that they are not in the middle of the playground area for the grade school. We need to know if volleyball courts are planned for a place others see as a quiet place.

Each spring we get to look into its past, when, for that brief time, the park becomes a bit of a lake again. All of us who live here and use Langford Park need to work together to look ahead to its future. We must continue to provide a park where residents can still come to celebrate the Fourth of July. Where we can look back at its history with the knowledge that it is everyone's park and that everyone took responsibility for its future and understood the human need for public space in the city.

Town meeting set

A town meeting will be held prior to the regular January 8 council meeting to make bylaws proposals and allow for an easier amendment process. The proposed changes will be published and available for review in the council office at 890 Cromwell Ave. and in the St. Anthony Park Library prior to final action at the February council meeting.

Thanks for your support

Donations to the community council have brought us to within 90% of our goal of $5,000 during this fund drive. We value your support—220 residents and 20 businesses have "voted" their support of the St. Paul citizen participation process. The reality is that the financial resources from the city have not kept up with increased operating expenses. As a result the council has taken action to balance its budget by reducing the advertising space we have purchased on page 2 of the Bugle for the past 15 years. This change will affect the budget of the Bugle as well as that of the council and we urge that you continue support of this outstanding neighborhood newspaper through your donations.

The news of the community council will move to the back page of the Bugle or elsewhere—watch for it!

District councils flourish under St. Anthony Park leadership

By Kristin Copa

Jerry Jenkins may retire from being District Council Citizen Participation Coordinator, but that won't stop her from being busy.

After a 12-year tenure as leader of the city's district councils, Jenkins plans to keep organizing through Block Nurse and church programs and take time out for travel to Florida and Alaska.

The St. Anthony Park resident and former District 12 community organizer said councils have learned valuable skills during her term.

"They grew and developed and learned to problem-solve creatively and effectively," she said. "They've demonstrated what it means when citizens care about their community."

Jenkins said she has also noticed a change in the role and tactics of councils in their communities.

"Groups have initiated a lot more things," she said. "At first they were primarily reactive and took part in planning actions, now they have started a lot of things themselves—recycling, Block Nurses, childcare."

Turning to more quality of life issues rather than zoning questions was also a positive step in Jenkins' eyes.

She said she enjoyed the variety and unpredictability in her job and though it was at times stressful, she learned a valuable method to ease tensions.

"I learned to say, 'We're together in spirit if not always in opinion," she said.

Jenkins' position will be filled by another resident of St. Anthony Park and former District 12 community organizer, Ann Copeland.

Copeland took over for Jenkins once before, at the district twelve years ago. The two have become friends through their work on the council and at the League of Women Voters.

The current St. Anthony Park community organizer, Bobbi Megard, said the district's strong representation is more than a coincidence.

"People who have been organizers in St. Anthony Park have always been good people who have been able to understand the process," she said.

Megard said the neighborhood has been politically active and influential since 1945.

"It's a group of people who are reasonable, with good ideas, innovative, proactive and successful," she said.

Aiding future success, the city council passed a budget that cut less than expected from district councils, she said. Though the council gets less than half of its budget from the city, times are tough on the council because it is initiating so many more programs.

Megard cites recycling, block clubs, community gardens, Bookstart, the neighborhood partnership at Energy Park Drive and Arts District redevelopment at University and Raymond as recent examples.

This year, the council will start Christmas tree recycling.

"We try to respond to the desires of the neighborhood," she said. Megard said those responses are important to the future of the council.

"The neighborhood contributes significantly in dollars to the council," she said. "We consider contributions as votes for the council."

Partly through the work of the council, Megard said the neighborhoods of North and South St. Anthony Park are becoming more alike.

She said as younger families move into South St. Anthony Park, they bring a lot of energy and fuel participation in the council and booster clubs.

North St. Anthony Park's residents are also changing, as more single heads of household and minorities move into the area.

Megard said the neighborhood as a whole remains vital, stable and safe which, along with its healthy business district, makes it retain high property values as people shift back to the cities from the suburbs.

Working with Jerry Jenkins to maintain the quality of life in the neighborhood was valuable, Megard said. Jenkins was very available, informative and involved.

"Jerry was very supportive of citizen participation," she said. "She's been there to help us work out differences."

Megard looks to similar aid working with Ann Copeland in the new year when she hopes to get rid of some of the time-consuming paperwork required by the city to keep track of the council's action.

"I expect we will have the same sort of assistance from Ann, because she's been involved in the same way," she said. "She knows the ropes and how to cut through red tape and provide the same help and support."

Remember the old pavilion

Dear editors,

Kind of sad isn't it. A headline article in the Bugle said "Como pavilion to be razed soon."

But I guess it was doomed. The old brick, cement and plaster that held the grandiose structure together was slowly sinking.

As a young man I would go to the pavilion and rent a paddleboat or even a bicycle-built-for-two. And how many trips to the zoo?

My later days have been spent on the pavilion's promenade watching everything from Oklahoma to barbershop quartets. The promenade has already been restored.

Perhaps two quotes from the Bugle upset me: "A full basement connecting with the lower level of the promenade will be used for storage," and, "...replicate the old structure and bring it back to the grandeur and popularity it once knew in the 1920s."

What most people don't know is that the St. Paul Rifle and Pistol Club, Inc. (the longest existing affiliated club in Minnesota) was organized in the basement of the Como Park pavilion in 1929. Last year they dismantled the range when the city rebuilt the pavilion's promenade. We cried about that but still have our meetings there.

Most folks don't like guns, but our officers and members are dedicated to teaching firearms safety to youngsters and are very proud of our safety record, as well as members who continue to excel in rifle shooting as an Olympic sport.

I hear that the new lakeside pavilion may have restaurants, fast food, a dinner theater, and perhaps even a banquet hall. But please don't forget the ladies and gentlemen in the basement.

Thanks from Goodwill

Dear editors,

I'm writing to once again thank your readers for their generous donations of good condition clothing and household items to Goodwill stores and donation center trailers. During fiscal year 1991, Minnesotans contributed a record 18.5 million pounds of material to Goodwill/Easter Seal.

Proceeds from the sale of clothing and household items at Goodwill stores help support our not-for-profit job training, placement and related services for people who are disabled and disadvantaged. Each year, thanks to your readers, hundreds of Minnesotans progress toward self-sufficiency through productive employment.

Thank you all for showing the holiday spirit 365 days a year.

A new chapter

Dear editor,

I am going to bid farewell to Sal's Park Deli.

When I bought Dorsh's Deli 4 1/2 years ago I was a single person. A couple of months later I met Ralph and we were married. I had my first beautiful girl in January 1990. I was blessed to have second beautiful girl in September 1991. Now I have a dream-come-true family. It's time to become a full-time mom. I am excited about it.

I met a lot of wonderful people whom I will miss the most. Sal's Park Deli will continue under new ownership. I want to thank you all for your continued support. It's been a pleasure serving you and this community.

Sal Augustin

Thanks to Meals on Wheels drivers

Dear editors,

This group of volunteers delivers Meals on Wheels to St. Anthony Park residents regularly all year, some of them more than once a month. These are the people who help, good weather and bad. Thanks to: Ann O'Neill, Mary Libera, Del Bierwerth and Judy Jones (St. Anthony Park

Let's hear from you in '92

Dear readers,

As president of Park Press Inc., parent company of the Bugle, I thank you for your support and suggestions over the last year.

The Bugle welcomes and encourages wide community input. We want to hear from you. If we know what is on your mind, we can do an even better job of covering news of direct importance to you. Please call the Bugle (646-5369) with ideas or suggestions.

Please call us, too, if you would like to be more directly involved—serving on a committee (editorial, fund drive, budget, personnel and nominations) or nominating yourself or someone else to the board of directors.

Please accept this opportunity to support your community through involvement with the Bugle. We hope to hear from you in 1992.

Alliance Française announces winter classes

French classes for adults will begin at the French Alliance of the Twin Cities on Mon., Jan. 13. Classes are held twice a week for five weeks, or once a week for ten weeks at 821 Raymond Ave. (Baker Court). They are scheduled for day and evening hours. Saturday classes for children ages 5-14 are held from 9 a.m.-1 p.m. The winter session runs through March 21.

The Alliance Française is a nonprofit organization that encourages the study of French language and culture. It is supported in part by the French Ministry of Education and Culture.

For more information about joining the Alliance Française or to obtain class or program schedules, call 644-5769.

Seminary offers classes to public

Those interested in exploring Christian life and faith can take a course in the Lay School of Theology at Luther Northwestern Theological Seminary. The courses are informal, non-credit classes open to anyone. The cost is $30 for five sessions (Mondays, 7-9 p.m., beginning Jan. 13). The courses are taught by seminary professors.

Three courses are offered beginning in January:

"The Execution of the King: The Death of Jesus in the New Testament" will be taught by Donald Juel, professor of New Testament.

Walter Sundberg, associate professor of church history, will examine Luther's teacher on everyday life in "Day by Day: Martin Luther on the Christian Life." Topics will include Christian life in the work place, church, home and society.

Paul Westermeyer, professor of pastoral theology and ministry and church music will discuss music associated with Christian hymns.

For more information, call the Continuing Education office, 641-3416.

Public hearing on St. Anthony Park

The St. Paul Planning Commission has set Jan. 10 as the date for a public hearing on recommendations regarding zoning and land use and related development for the areas around the Raymond Ave./University Ave. and Raymond Ave./Energy Park Drive intersections. The rezoning recommendations, if eventually adopted by the city council, would result in a change in zoning for portions of six blocks at Raymond Ave./University Ave. from I-1 (light industrial) to B-3 (general commercial) and for the Everett Court residential area near Raymond Ave./Energy Park Drive from I-1 to RM-2 (multiple-family residential).

The plan was developed by a neighborhood-based task force appointed by the St. Paul Planning Commission.

The community's vision for the Raymond/University area includes retaining and enhancing the area's warehouse district character, improving the area's attractiveness to pedestrians and promoting and supporting the development of an arts district.

General recommendations include encouraging residential over office/commercial/studio uses for the north half of the block on Territorial Road north of University and west of Raymond; developing shared use parking lots; emphasizing reuse of existing buildings rather than wholesale clearance and redevelopment; strengthening the Raymond Ave. retail area by attracting more neighborhood retail and service businesses; creating an off-street parking area for retail customers and implementing coordinated facade and streetscape improvements.

At Raymond and Energy Park Drive, the plan is to create a link between North and South St. Anthony Park by strengthening and maintaining the residential neighborhood centered around Everett Court, and encouraging redevelopment of the remaining area with office or light industrial uses. These recommendations include relocating trucking firms from the southwest corner.

The public hearing will take place at 8:30 a.m., Fri., Jan. 10 on the 15th floor of the City Hall Annex, 25 W. 4th St.

Women's brunch

The women of St. Anthony Park United Methodist Church invite neighborhood women to be their guests for brunch on Sat., Feb. 1 at 10 a.m. The program centers on understanding Native American culture, with Pauline Brunette speaking on "Peace Quilt." She is an Ojibwa who describes women in her family as storytellers. Call the church, 646-4859, for reservations.

Learn to cook at Muffuletta

Muffuletta in the Park restaurant will offer a series of informal food and wine classes on Sundays Jan. 19, Feb. 9 and March 1. The classes will be taught by chef Carron Harris.

Block Nurse Program home-maker/home health aide Diane Keller braved 22 inches of snow in the November 1 storm to visit her grateful client, Ralph Thomson.

The lesson schedule will include: pasta making and sauces; fish and seafood; and putting it all together for a dinner. Each student will receive recipes as well as "hands on" experience in the kitchen. Also each week two different wines will be served with the food.

Class times are 7-9 p.m. Cost is $20 per lesson per person. For more information, contact Carron Harris at Muffuletta, 644-9116.

Making connections

St. Anthony Park United Church of Christ will explore the African-American experience in our community on Sunday mornings during January. Activities will include pulpit-sharing with an African American pastor, an intergenerational program with storyteller Mattie Clark, an African-Caribbean dancer and drummer and a dramatization of historical figures.

Celebrate Martin Luther King, Jr.

"Mine Eyes Have Seen the Glory of the Coming of the Lord" is the theme for Luther Northwestern Theological Seminary's annual Martin Luther King, Jr. Day service on Sun., Jan. 19, at 7 p.m. The service, which takes place in the Chapel of the Incarnation, Campus Center, Hendon at Fulham, will emphasize King's dream of equality for all people. It will feature music from a variety of cultures, including Hispanic, African-American, Native American and Hmong.

The Rev. Kathleen Gatson, family counseling minister at Pilgrim Baptist Church, St. Paul, will give the sermon. She is active in the Black caucus of the American Baptist Churches, USA.

Prior to the service a soul food supper will be served from 5:30-6:30 p.m. in the Campus Center dining hall. Cost for the meal will be about $4.

When you're gone, everything will go to the loving children who survive you.

Or will they?

Unfortunately, we cannot assume that our children will outlive us. We need to consider all possibilities during estate planning. So it helps to have the guidance of someone who has made estate planning a specialty.

Community Ed

Beginning winter session, Community Education in St. Paul will take on a new look. The brochure will now be in a magazine format rather than the old newspaper style. St. Paul residents should receive their new brochure in early January. Nonresidents may pick up a copy at any St. Paul Public Library.

Registration dates for winter session are Jan. 13-24.

Along with the new brochure comes a new registration policy. During the first week of registration mail-in and walk-in registrations only will be accepted. During the second week of registration, phone-in registrations will be accepted along with mail-ins.

Call the St. Anthony Park Community Education office, 293-8738, with questions or concerns.

Group Health employees win awards

Thomas Norris, M.D., pediatrics, and Georgeanne DelGiudice, certified nurse midwife, have received 1991 Group Health Inc. President's Awards. Norris was honored for his outstanding contribution to health care for adolescent patients. In 1987 he helped establish the Teen Clinic. DelGiudice was recognized for the outstanding service she provides to Group Health members through the development of the Teen Clinic and Teen Pregnancy Program.

South St. Anthony Rec Center news

The South St. Anthony Booster Club will hold its next meeting on Mon., Jan. 13, 7 p.m., at the rec center. Community members are invited to attend to give their input on upcoming events or programs. Discussions will be held on hosting an open house, potluck dinner and grant proposals for the new year. Community involvement at the rec center is essential.

Elementary school age children are invited to participate in two after-school programs led by recreation leader, Steve. Starting on Jan. 18 at 4:15 p.m., there will be an after school snack class where children will learn how to make simple, tasty and inexpensive snacks. The fee is 50 cents per time. On Thursdays, gym games will be held from 4:40-5:30 p.m. A variety of games will be available including floor hockey, trench and steal the bacon.

Community youth and adults are encouraged to utilize our skating rink at the center. Changing and warming facilities are available Mon.-Thurs., 4-8 p.m., and on Saturdays, noon to 4 p.m. Saturday hours continue to Feb. 15. We will not open if the temperature is colder than -35° wind chill or warmer than 35° at 11:30 a.m.

For more information, call South St. Anthony, 890 Cromwell, 298-5770, Mon.-Thurs., 4-8 p.m.

Library stories

There will be a storytime for children ages 3, 4 and 5 at the St. Anthony Park Branch Library, 2245 Como Ave., on Friday mornings at 10:30 a.m., Jan. 31-Feb. 28. Register at the library or call 292-6635.

Langford Park

With skating season finally here, Langford Park's extended weekend hours will be Saturdays 9 a.m.-4:30 p.m. and Sundays noon-4 p.m. Hours during the week are Mon.-Thurs., 3-9 p.m. and Friday 3-6 p.m.

Langford is offering beginning skating lessons for children in grades K-6 on Mon. and Wed. evenings, Jan. 20-Feb. 6. Registration begins Mon., Jan. 6.

A family skating party will be held on Sun., Jan. 12, 1-3 p.m. Bring the entire family for an afternoon of skating fun. Refreshments will be served.

Langford Park's Annual Squirt/PeeWee Hockey Tournament will be held Jan. 14-18. This is your chance to see exciting youth hockey action. Concessions will be sold all week. Call for specific game times.

On Jan. 24, Langford will host a ski trip to Afton Alps for those grades 7 and older. The bus leaves at 2 p.m. and returns at approximately 10 p.m. Cost of $13 for youth and $15 for adults includes transportation and lift ticket. Ski rental is extra. Space is limited, so register early by calling Lori, Mike or Nick at 298-5765.

The 33rd annual winter sports days will be held Jan. 25 & 26. Events include hockey and basketball games, snow sculpture, skating races, adult volleyball, open skating, open gym and medallion hunt. Great food sold all weekend.

Registration for tumbling begins Jan. 20 at 3 p.m. Classes are held for 3-5-year-olds on Saturday mornings starting Feb. 1. Registrations will be accepted by phone or in person.

For more information on any of these events, call Langford Park at 298-5765.

Serie receives teaching award

Janet Serie of Lauderdale, a biology professor at Macalester College since 1983, has been selected as the first recipient of the National Association of Biology Teachers Four-Year College Teaching Award. The award, sponsored by Harper Collins, recognizes outstanding creativity in the teaching of biology and considers such criteria as curriculum design, teaching strategies, laboratory use and program effectiveness.

Serie has been instrumental in restructuring Macalester's biology curriculum and has managed to make the field accessible and interesting to majors and nonmajors alike. She has facilitated student involvement in her research and has supervised numerous honors projects.

Serie has also been a leader in diversifying the college's curriculum to include women's and minority studies. She has helped attract women students to the sciences and has served as a mentor to her junior colleagues.

Serie is a specialist in immunological research—looking at how the human body defends itself against infection and foreign matter. She earned a bachelor's degree from the College of St. Benedict in 1975 and a Ph.D. from the University of Minnesota in 1981.

Investment forum

Lauderdale resident Don Ellis, former city treasurer, hosts introductory investment forums on Mondays at Fairview Community Center 1910 W. Co. Rd. B, Room 110. Sessions are held every Monday in January at 10-11:30 a.m. The meetings expose people to investment possibilities and introduce skills in managing money. Call Ellis at 631-9040 for more information.

Real Estate

By Peggy Sparr

REALTOR

CONVENTIONAL MORTGAGE INSURANCE:
WHAT IS IT? WHAT ARE MY OPTIONS?

Mortgage Insurance in simple terms is insurance coverage to protect a lender in the event of a foreclosure.

Conventional loans require insurance when the down payment is less than 20% of the purchase price or the appraised value, whichever is lower. This is unlike FHA loans which always require Mortgage Insurance, regardless of down payment.

Mortgage Insurance is often confused with credit life or credit disability insurance which protects you in the event of death or disability.

WHAT ARE MY OPTIONS?

A. ANNUAL PREMIUM WITH MONTHLY ESCROW PAYMENT: The entire first year premium expense is collected at the closing. An escrow account is then set up to pay future years' premiums and a fee is collected as part of the borrowers' monthly payment.

B. FINANCING THE FIRST YEAR PREMIUM: If your down payment is at least 10%* you now have the option to finance your first year premium by adding it to your mortgage amount. An escrow account is then set up to pay future years' premiums.

C. FINANCING THE ENTIRE PREMIUM: If your down payment is at least 10%* you also have the option to finance all of your Mortgage Insurance. This one-time premium is then added to your mortgage amount and your monthly costs are now in the form of principal and interest payments vs. an escrow account. This not only will provide lower cash requirements at closing but will also provide maximum tax benefits due to increased monthly interest payments. Also, this option is less expensive on a monthly basis.

If the mortgage is paid off early a prorated portion of the premium will be refunded to the homeowner.

Authors in the Park

The St. Anthony Park Association is pleased to show off three published authors in our midst at the next St. Anthony Park dinner on January 14. The authors, Warren Hanson, Marjorie DeBoer and Janet Quale, will talk about their own work and careers, read from some of their works-in-progress and answer questions from aspiring authors and interested neighbors.

A 20-year resident of St. Anthony Park, Warren Hanson is best known as an illustrator for the three books on which he collaborated with Twin Cities author Tom Hegg: A Cup of Christmas Tea, Up to the Lake, and The Mark of the Maker. Janet Quale won the national Fagley Award in 1986 for her historical look at the St. Anthony Park United Church of Christ. Marjorie DeBoer is author of six historical romance novels, including her most recent, No Perfect Dreams, published last January. She has lived in the Park since 1956.

The dinner will precede the program at the church at 2129 Commonwealth Ave. Cost is $5 for SAPA members, $6 for non-members and $4 for children. Free babysitting will be available. The dinner will be prepared by the St. Anthony Park Chorus. To confirm or cancel registrations, call Linda at 770-8097.

The school patrol

A true story about snowballs and power, complete with a sermon.

By Bob Frost

Exactly 25 years ago, in January, 1967, when I was 11 years old, I was kicked off the School Patrol of St. Anthony Park Elementary School. I would like to tell you about it, and I'd like to briefly discuss the issue of children's rights.

But first, I should like to announce that I will not be suing the St. Paul School District for every bloody penny it has. On the occasion of this silver anniversary of one of my life's least favorite moments, I have decided to be noble about the whole affair. For lo these many years I have relished the prospect of a lawsuit, but now I cast the idea aside as unworthy of a mature man.

However, I'm still gonna throw a big fat snowball right at the elementary school's big fat stupid brick wall.

It was snowballs, actually, that got me in trouble in 1967. I was kicked off the School Patrol for throwing snowballs in Langford Park.

THE BELT AS STATUS SYMBOL

You know all about the School Patrol, of course. It's the cadre of sixth graders who guard their peers by displaying traffic flags at street corners. It's valuable work. Lives and limbs are saved. The first student safety patrol in America was created at St. Paul's Cathedral School during the 1920-21 school year. In the first years of the Patrol's existence, members carried little wooden STOP signs. Later, they used flags made of droopy red cloth. In the 1960s there was a big change to gorgeous flags of flaming orange plastic.

I considered it an honor to hold that flag. I took the work very seriously and it was grand to wear the leather Patrol belt with its numbered silvery badge and shoulder loop. Those belts had great importance in the status life of the elementary school. One learned as a kindergarten that certain big kids wore special belts and had to be obeyed while others did not and could be ignored. From age five to 11, I coveted my own belt. Then I got one. I had arrived as a Big Shot.

The leather belts were officially known as Sam Browne belts, named for a British general, Sir Samuel J. Browne, who, in 1857, having lost an arm in the Indian Mutiny, invented the belt as a way to simultaneously brace his sword and holster a pistol. A side benefit was that it made him look dashing. The design was used for decades by soldiers and cops, and people depicting those professions in the movies, even if they didn't carry swords. School Patrol kids in St. Paul wore Sam Browne belts until the 1970s, when they were replaced by reflective belts and, later, vests. Today's equipment is outstanding in terms of visibility and economy, but it does seem to come up short in glamour and dash.

"BASEBALL" AT COMO & CARTER

On that January day in '67, wearing our belts, my patrol partner, Dan Smith, and I threw some excellent snowballs at a tree in Langford Park, about 50 yards from the school. The next thing we knew, literally, was that we had been booted permanently off the force.

I will note here that there was a rule specifically forbidding the throwing of snowballs by patrol members—while on duty. We thought we were off duty. This will emerge as a key element in my story.

The no-snowballs-on-duty rule had been enacted a month or so earlier after an incident at the intersection of Como and Carter. Several patrol members on duty there had entertained themselves with a game of "baseball"—tossing snowballs across Como Avenue, swinging with their rolled-up flags and occasionally connecting.

Among the perpetrators were my friends Paul Halvorson and Mark Anderson, who were captain and lieutenant, respectively, of the patrol, and with whom I often played baseball, but usually in the summer, and usually on the gently-sloping hill in front of Luther Seminary.

News of the on-duty baseball game at Como and Carter reached the elementary school with the speed of lightning. Mr. Gronli, one of the sixth grade teachers, the man in charge of the patrol, was informed. (The other sixth grade teacher, my teacher, was Miss Ohman—the tall, talented, rather severe Miss Marian Ohman—who kept order by rapping her pencil on her desk, and who was never quite the same after badly breaking her hip in a fall just outside the school in 1965. She returned to teaching for the '66-'67 year, with a cane, and taught for several years after that. She died in 1989.)

The day after Mr. Gronli heard about the baseball game at Como and Carter, he convened a meeting of the patrol in his room. It was a somber gathering. Mr. Gronli, a short, stout, crew-cut man, was furious. He laid down the law very clearly: there would be no more throwing of snowballs at any time while on duty, under threat of permanent banishment from the force.

Fine. No one had any trouble with that, including me and my partner.

TRASHY ROCK AND ROLL

Dan and I were assigned to what was called "kindergarten duty" on the school patrol. We left class 30 minutes earlier than usual to escort a group of morning and afternoon kindergartners home. Dan often brought along his transistor radio; on that day 25 years ago, as we strolled toward Raymond Avenue with our gang of kids, we listened to that month's hits on KDWB—"I'm a Believer" by the Monkees, "The Beat Goes On" by Sonny and Cher and "Georgy Girl" by the Seekers. We listened with particular relish to the only decent hard rock records of the month, the wonderfully trashy and angry "(We Ain't Got) Nothin' Yet" by the Blues Magoos and "I Had Too Much To Dream (Last Night)" by the Electric Prunes.

Dan insisted the Prunes were singing "I had too much to DRINK last night," and I took his word for it, that's indeed what it sounded like, and also, he seemed to know about these things—Dan was a fairly wild kid, at least in St. Anthony Park 1967 terms. His family was one of the few I knew of where the father was never around. Dan didn't have to go to church. He smoked (though never in the presence of our kindergartners). He swore eloquently (ditto). And he had a couple of copies of Playboy magazine hidden away at home. This was a fantastically alluring thing for a sheltered Lutheran kid like me. The only other place I knew of that had Playboys was a certain drawer at Miller's Drug Store that no one close to my age ever dared touch—certainly no Lutheran boy. At Miller's in 1967, the magazine rack was in a different spot than today. You would walk in the main

MONDAY - RAVIOLI "DEL GIORNO" $8.95

Homemade ravioli of the day stuffed with delicacies from our pantry
- varies from time to time - but always a treat

TUESDAY - POLLO RIPIENO $10.95

Rolled boneless chicken stuffed with tasty surprises - such as - fresh spinach - ricotta cheese - chopped pistachios - fresh herbs - maybe a "whim" of the chef.

WEDNESDAY - LASAGNA "BOLOGNESE" $8.95

As prepared in the traditional style of Bologna, Italy
- and now Muffuletta's kitchen

THURSDAY - TORTELLINI $8.95

Small pasta rings stuffed with good things to eat - and then tossed with sauces that vary with the imagination.

FRIDAY - FRESH FISH "EN PAPILOTTE" Varies

The freshest "catch of the day" baked in parchment
- as served in the Province - with fresh herbs - and more.

Every "Week Night Special" is served with a Muffuletta salad and freshly baked bread with herb butter.

2260 Como Ave. on Milton Square 644-9116
(Take I-94 to 280, exit on Como and head East . . . 6 blocks)

door, the one on Como, and immediately to your right, against the window, was a rack of paperback books. A bit further down the wall were magazines. Down below, secreted away, were Playboys. Or, at least, a rumor of Playboys. Dan, however, had the real thing. I can't quite explain their immense appeal to me at the innocent age of 11, but my interest was as profound as my feeling for my classmate, the magnificent Lorna Rupp.

Anyway, on that fateful January day, Dan and I got our batch of kids safely across Raymond, stashed our flags at the Standard station at Raymond and Como and were headed through Langford Park for lunch at our respective homes, him on Ludlow and me on Hillside.

In those days, virtually all the kids at school ate lunch at home. For those who lived on, say, Hythe St., this involved a brisk 15-minute hike, 30 minutes of eating, and then another 15-minute hike. (Maybe it was a secret exercise program.) Many of us ate to the accompaniment of "Lunch With Casey" on WTCN Channel 11, starring Casey Jones and Roundhouse Rodney and featuring stupid low-budget cartoons like "Felix the Cat," "Hercules" and "Casper the Friendly Ghost."

FIELD OF DREAMS

So, Dan and I were headed for lunch with Casey, and as we trudged through the park on that overcast, rather mild day, we threw a few snowballs.

The main reason I did the deed, I believe today, was because of my honest feeling that it had to be OK to toss snowballs at trees in the park—OK to do it while not standing at one's post. Also, I suppose there was some mixture of defiance and idealism in me, along the lines of "It should be OK to throw snowballs at trees while off duty"—accounting for, let's say, 20 or 30 percent of my motivation.

A final factor was the sheer exuberance of being 11 years old and walking through a field of dreams made of sticky snow.

I like to imagine that Jack Morris of the Twins, an exact contemporary of mine, was doing the same thing that day in his St. Paul neighborhood. My big thing, when I was 11, was imagining I was Sandy Koufax, my ultimate sports hero, who had retired from the Los Angeles Dodgers the previous November, at the peak of his career, because of an arthritic elbow. Whenever I threw snowballs, I was Koufax (except that he was left-handed, athletically-gifted, famous, wealthy, tall, handsome, Jewish, arthritic and got to meet movie actresses).

Paul Wirtz, a student sitting in Mr. Gronli's second-floor room facing the park, spotted us throwing. Paul was not on the patrol himself, but he apparently had a firmer, or stricter, grasp of the rule than us; he sang out lustily. When Mr. Gronli got to the window he saw two boys throwing snowballs at trees but still wearing their patrol belts. We were thus, in his mind, on duty. I suspect, too, that he was deeply offended that we had chosen to goof off in full view of the school.

He formed several students into a posse and dispatched them to bring us in. The kids started howling delightedly in our direction as soon as they came out of the main door. It wasn't clear to us what was going on, but we walked back toward them and heard the kids say things like "kicked off." Mr. Gronli apparently had announced his intentions to his class in the heat of the moment. He opened the door, stepped outside, and, right there on the steps, relieved us of duty.

The principal, Miss Johnson, spoke to us individually that afternoon. Neither of us made any sort of case for ourselves—Dan didn't particularly care if he was kicked off; for my part, I was virtually tongue-tied. I must have been in something like shock. Miss Johnson informed us that Mr. Gronli's decision was final.

Thus, the legal safeguard of "due process"—a central principle of American justice—was not applied by public officials to two persons who were full U.S. citizens. The concept mandates that the appropriate decision-makers in all criminal and most civil cases obtain the full range of information before issuing judgment, and usually specifies that affected parties get an opportunity to carefully prepare and present their cases. I would guess that it never even occurred to the powers-that-be that the safeguard could apply to a couple of mere kids.

It could have applied. It should have. Dan and I didn't get a fair shake from the adults who had the power.

HERE COMES MY SERMON.

IT WILL BE MERCIFULLY BRIEF.

A fair shake for kids is, in my judgement, entirely too unpredictable a proposition in American society today.

I'm talking about everything from unfair punishments to stupid TV cartoons to lack of decent health care to child abuse. The degree of seriousness of these things obviously varies, but they all fall under the rubric "abuse of power."

Minor abuses of power, like what Dan and I experienced, are related to major ones like child abuse. We adults slip easily into a habit of command over kids. We invade their boundaries. We too often find it difficult to sit back and objectively judge if we're proceeding legally and ethically.

We have vast economic, physical and intellectual power vis-a-vis children. We control the agendas in most of society's arenas. And our power is pretty much unchecked. The notion of unchecked power made the framers of the U.S. Constitution quiver in their Virginia riding boots.

Unfair punishment is an abuse of power. So is corporal punishment. And physical child abuse. And the 1,001 methods of emotional abuse. And Congress cancelling a significant percentage of Head Start funding. And inadequate public schools. And what ABC News, citing authorities in the field, calls a "pattern of neglect" in half this country's day care centers.

It's abuse of power for film companies and TV stations to produce and show stupid cartoons—or, rather, to produce and show only stupid cartoons, to largely ignore, or pay only lip service to, the idea of voluntarily setting aside a percentage of time and resources to create and broadcast programming that's first of all fun and, in addition, is illuminating and enriching.

If I feel so strongly about rotten kid's TV, maybe I'm abusing power (the power of owning a word processor, the power of access to language, the power inherent in whatever standing I have in the community) by not finding the time to write letters about it to cartoon producers and broadcasters, as well as to sponsors, including at least one very large Minnesota-based cereal maker.

We all know that TV matters. Maybe we lose sight of how much it matters. Recall what E.B. White wrote in the late 1930s after seeing a demonstration of a prototype television broadcast: "I believe television is going to be the test of the modern world, and that in this new opportunity to see beyond the range of our vision, we shall discover a new and unbearable disturbance of the modern peace, or a saving radiance in the sky. We shall stand or fall by television, of that I am quite sure."

THIS MESSAGE COURTESY OF KOOP

It was a TV show, as a matter of fact, that got me to thinking about some of these things. It was on NBC last summer—one of Dr. C. Everett Koop's programs about U.S. health care. He pointed out that millions of kids in this country don't have health insurance, in most cases because their families can't afford it, and thus probably don't get the kind of care they should. He noted that one hundred children in America die every day without celebrating their first birthday. There are millions of cases of undiagnosed lead poisoning in this country. Hundreds of thousands of drug-exposed babies are born annually. Forty-seven of the 50 states have inadequate health care for rural children. (Minnesota, as it happens, is one of three states with a good program.)

We have the resources to create healthier new generations. To be sure, there are other priorities—ozone leakages, energy wastages, discrimination in all its forms, vehicular slaughter, the S & L crisis and addictions to every kind of drug at every level of society. Not to mention the struggle of Third World countries.

But as we deal with various problems, it would be wise to recognize that at the root of most or all of them is our unwillingness to properly care for and respect the rights of our children. The environment, for instance, won't get healed without a sound, sane, educated citizenry.

In the last half of the 20th Century, we have seen a deepening of our unwillingness to guard and respect our children's rights and welfare (and those of our neighbor's children). This is because of complex new factors such as the ever-expanding universe of moronic TV; the drug crisis and the paucity of creative thinking about it among legislators; the unbounded sums said to be required by weapons; the flight of the middle class from cities; and our devotion, which is perhaps increasing, to hothouse capitalism, that is, capitalism where the only thing that matters is growing green cash and hanging on to as much of it as possible.

A final point: If we the educated, if we the affluent, think it's enough to care just about our own kids—if we think we'll not be touched by the suffering or mediocrity in another part of town or another part of the country or the world—we're mistaken.

Well, that's my sermon.

I'll conclude my snowball adventure. That afternoon and evening, after the school's dictate was handed down, I told my tale to my parents. They were very sympathetic and concerned, but they fully accepted the school's ruling. So, I did too. My ability to stand up for myself got stuck in a tar pit of shock, guilt and, yes, powerlessness. I felt I was a rotten sinner and had gotten what I deserved. It took me a few years to set aside that idea and get angry.

But, as noted, I'm not going to file any lawsuits. Hey, I never seriously considered it, despite the premature loss to me of the rank of Sixth Grade Big Shot.

What I'm going to do, I think, is stop by the old school on some snowy evening, make a big snowball and fire it at that brick wall with some of the speed of Sandy Koufax and all of the holy wrath of the sainted Blues Magoos and Electric Prunes.

Students learn about government

Project 120, a four-day state government seminar, offers seven seminars during the 1992 legislative session, Feb. 17-March 29. It is open to all Minnesota high school students in grades 9-12.

Project 120, now in its 17th year, is named for the 120 days the legislature can be in session each year. It brings students to the State Capitol to participate in a hands-on study of state government.

The students and their instructors see legislative floor sessions and committee meetings, Supreme Court hearings, meet with state officials and the news media, and learn about state issues.

The deadline to apply is 30 days before the seminar a student wishes to attend. The first deadline is Jan. 15. Cost is $200 for each student, including tuition, meals, lodging at the St. Paul Hotel and materials. Project 120 administrators can help find scholarship funding to help defray the cost. The deadline to apply for a scholarship is also Jan. 15.

Call 224-2100 for more information.

Gibbs from 1

really is willing to give to preserve the structure. Unfortunately, no one from the community group was able to attend the meeting.

Timelines were discussed and it was suggested that perhaps the community should be given one year to come up with money to fix up the exterior. Since this was only an informational meeting, no dollar amounts were discussed and no formal motions were made.

Chairman David Roe, former president of Minnesota's trade unions, suggested that union members might be willing to take on the task of renovating such an historic structure. He said this had been done with great success at the Godfrey House in Minneapolis, the oldest house in the city, now sitting at University & Third Ave S.E.

The bottom line seemed to be that the University does not want to spend money on the Gibbs schoolhouse, except for putting up signs and landscaping. It wants the community to maintain the building, and if financial support is not forthcoming from the community, the University may decide to demolish it.

At the meeting, Regent Ann Wynia received assurance that action of the full board is required and the community must be notified if a decision to demolish is made.

The extent of the community's commitment was questioned several times at the meeting. The committee representing the community intends to meet with University Vice-President Erickson in January to prepare for the next Board of Regents meeting in February. Watch the Bugle for more information.

Anyone wanting more information or wishing to join those campaigning to save the schoolhouse should call Tamara Truer at the Minnesota Historical Society, 222-0701.

Young pianists featured in Jan. 19 concert

By Anne Turek

St. Anthony Park resident Emily Savage will be a featured performer in "Young Artists in Concert," along with two other pianists, Joanna Hepokoski and Karin Ou-Yang. The three will perform music by Bach, Beethoven, Ginastera, Gershwin, Chopin and Liszt on Sun., Jan. 19 at 4 p.m. at St. Anthony Park United Church of Christ, 2129 Commonwealth. The concert, sponsored by Music in the Park Series in cooperation with the Frederic Chopin Society, is supported by a generous grant from Target stores.

Emily has lived all of her thirteen years in St. Anthony Park. She began studying piano with teacher Jean Krinke (also of St. Anthony Park) at the age of three, learning to read music before she could read words. She first performed in public at the age of four in a recital at Landmark Center. Since that precocious beginning, she has regularly participated in Minnesota Music Teachers Association auditions and in the Hiawatha regional competition in Rochester, bringing home several first place awards and trophies.

A third-generation Park resident, Emily lives with her parents Linda and Phillip Hewett and brother Alex. She is the granddaughter of Paul and Arla Savage. She practices regularly with her grandmother, who is her untiring coach and support section. Emily is a 7th grader at the Capitol Hill Magnet in the Rondo Education Center, and she finds time for sports and theater activities in addition to her music.

Joanna Hepokoski, 14, is in the 8th grade at Brooklyn Park Junior High School. She started piano lessons at age six when her family lived in Oberlin, Ohio. Since moving to Minnesota in 1988, she has studied piano with Alexander Braginsky, a professor at the University of Minnesota School of Music. Her accomplishments include the first place award in the junior division of the Thursday Musical competition last April, and second place at the junior level in the 1991 Schubert Club contest. Joanna also plays the violin in her school orchestra.

Karin Ou-Yang, 14, is a freshman at Woodbury High School. She began piano at the age of three at the St. Joseph School of Music in St. Paul, and has been a student of Alex Braginsky for the past three years. In 1990 Karin won first place in the Thursday Musical's junior division, and in the spring of 1991 she took junior top honors in the Schubert Club Competition. In addition to her dedication to music, Karin is active in sports, most notably on a state championship basketball team.

Parents are encouraged to bring their school-age children to this concert.

Tickets, at $7 adult, $5 student, $3 student rush, are available at The Bibelot Shop (646-5651), Micawber's Bookstore (646-5506) or at the Chopin Society (870-0604). Group rates are available. For more information call 644-4234 or 870-0604.

Emily Savage is shown with her teacher Jean Krinke. Emily will be one of the young artists featured in the Jan. 19 concert.

Horticulture Society looks for new home

"A new building would be a horticultural center for the whole state," said Diane Emerson, immediate past-president of the Minnesota State Horticultural Society (MSHS), in speaking of the current fund drive at the society. "We could have a library, a viewing place for videos and slides, and regular classes on gardening. Such a center would be especially accessible to people in St. Anthony Park."

Emerson was speaking of the dream of a new headquarters for MSHS, a dream that currently focuses on a building in Falcon Heights, a half-mile north of the current headquarters on the St. Paul campus of the University of Minnesota. Emerson, who resides in St. Anthony Park, is leading the fundraising effort for the purchase of this new building.

"A horticultural center would give the organization something to rally round," said Emerson, in describing her vision of a center for northern horticulture. "But we need money to make the dream happen. We are fundraising, but we need cash backing because of the current savings and loan debacle. I would be happy to talk to anyone who can help."

"Our mission is to promote horticulture; we want to say to people that we are here to help with backyard gardens," Emerson continued, "but we are not currently user-friendly. The parking situation on the St. Paul campus is terrible. People come to volunteer, but they cannot find a place to park and they never come back." There is ample parking at the projected facility which is behind the Falcon Heights City offices.

"We had only been looking for an interim facility. The possibility of being able to move into a permanent home has encouraged us to look at long-term needs. However, we need to make sure that we can afford the move. We are looking into many funding possibilities, but we really need one or more large donations or a financial backer to make this dream come true," added Dorothy Johnson, executive director of MSHS.

The building under consideration is a two-story office building with handicapped access to both levels. There are thirty parking places in the attached lot, with additional street and lot parking available in the evening and on weekends. The building was constructed in 1987, but half of it has never been finished. The interior can be designed to fit MSHS specifications with offices, library and classroom facilities. A boulevard between the parking lot and the street offers a small area for gardening.

MSHS is the largest statewide horticultural organization in the nation, with over 15,000 members. MSHS programs serve the specific needs of northern gardeners through educational seminars, displays and horticultural tours.

For more information contact MSHS at 624-7752.

Cecealia on TV

"Como Zoo Presents: Cecealia," brought to you by the producer of Como Zoo News, is now playing on CTV channel 33 and Metro Regional Channel 6. "Cecealia" is a 30-minute look at the first year in the life of the California Sea Lion. Her June 23, 1990, birth at the zoo was a surprise to everyone, even zookeepers. The program includes footage of Cecealia at 20 minutes of age. Volunteer docents arranged an around-the-clock watch in case she developed health problems. Also featured is Cecealia's first bath and bottle-feeding and early swimming efforts.

Guest Tanya Byng, Como Zoo seal trainer, discusses training of California Sea Lions, which make good show animals due to their intelligence and grace.

Lyngblomsten recognized

Lyngblomsten Care Center, 1415 Almond Ave., has achieved accreditation from the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Healthcare Organizations (JCAHO), Oakbrook Terrace, Ill. JCAHO accreditation standards exceed both federal and state requirements and is a voluntary program. About 1,000 nursing homes have received accreditation nationwide.

Lyngblomsten was also one of eleven Minnesota nursing homes to be honored for its educational achievements by the Minnesota Area Geriatric Education Center, located at the University of Minnesota. Lyngblomsten staff have helped train students from Luther Northwestern Theological Seminary, the University of Minnesota, St. Paul Technical College and Bethel College in chaplaincy, administration, professional nursing, nursing assistant, pharmacy, health unit coordination and social work programs.

Lyngblomsten has been providing services to older adults since 1911. Facilities include a 256-bed care center, a 105-unit apartment building and a community center. Lyngblomsten also provides management support for the Villa Park community condominiums in Roseville.

Arts Calendar

Visual Art

"Faces of Strength: A Celebration of Women," is an exhibition of photographic portraits of common women from several countries, showing each one engaged in activities representative of their daily lives. They were taken by explorer Valerie Fons Kruger while she and her husband Verlen were on a 1989 two-continent canoe trip, starting near the Arctic Ocean in Canada and ending at the tip of Cape Horn in Argentina. The exhibition will be on display from Jan. 6-Feb. 14 in the Paul Whitney Larson Gallery, located on the lower level of the University of Minnesota St. Paul Campus Student Center. A reception will be held Wed., Jan. 8 from 3-7 p.m.

Lisa Beyer, an M.A. candidate at the University's Center for Ancient Studies, will speak on "Hierarchy, Prestige, and Imitation: The Art of the Early Iron Age in Central Europe," Wed., Jan. 22 at noon at Paul Whitney Larson Gallery.

An array of historic Hungarian folk art is on exhibit through February at the International Institute of Minnesota, 1694 Como Ave. This presentation of traditional ethnic clothing, table linens, doilies, ceramics and porcelain reflects Hungary's diverse ethnic folk art from the Kalocsa, Matyo, Transylvania, Bereg and Hortobagy regions.

Among the items of special interest is the ethnic suit worn in the early 1900s by the Mayor of Szatmar.

For more information, call 647-0191.

The Northern Clay Center, 2375 University Ave., will feature an exhibit called "Minnesota Blues" from Jan. 10-Feb. 15. This is an invitational show featuring the work of 35 Minnesota and Wisconsin artists. It explores the state of mind called "the blues," a condition not unfamiliar during the middle of a Midwestern winter. The show is also a celebration of the color blue in its many combinations and permutations, and reveals the relationship ceramists have with this ubiquitous color.

An opening reception will be held on Fri., Jan. 10 from 5-9 p.m.

Literary Art

The Faith and Fiction Book Club will have its next meeting on Sun., Jan. 5, 7 p.m. to discuss Minnesota novelist Jon Hassler's latest novel, North of Hope.

Park Crossing open for business

Park Crossing reports strong initial sales and customer traffic from the first five retail establishments to open. The new center at Energy Park Drive and Raymond Avenue has space for one more tenant.

Bruegger's Bagel Bakery store manager, Courtney Bolstad, reported record sales. "This store had the strongest opening day for any Bruegger's shop in the entire Twin Cities area. Thank you St. Anthony Park!"

St. Anthony Park School of Dance has experienced an influx of new students. Manager Sonja Hinderlie indicated that the school had enrolled 30 per cent more students than last year. Four new classes have been scheduled.

The Movie Shelf has tripled its business, according to owner Vern Blevins. "We have been very pleased with the strong response from both our existing customers and new clientele."

Food-N-Fuel has also been pleased with its strong sales volume.

Caravelle Restaurant was scheduled to open as the Bugle went to press. Owner Hang Truong is the owner of the fifth Caravelle in the Twin Cities.

Park Crossing apartments, the new three-story building still under construction south and east of the new retail center, will be available for occupancy Feb. 1. Sixteen of the eighteen units are already rented. "We're very pleased with the rapid lease-up," commented Ralph Colby of Project-for-Pride-in Living, the project's sponsor.

Still to be completed is Gateway Park, the new green space at the southwest corner of the intersection, as well as decorative lighting along Raymond and Energy Park Drive. The city's public improvements were delayed by the early snowstorms and will not be completed until spring.

Veterinarian Beth Boynton demonstrates her skills to students at St. Anthony Park United Methodist Church Nursery School.

Local vet takes animal care out of the clinic

By Kristin Copa

There's something more to the saying "man's best friend," according to a local veterinarian.

Beth Boynton, a St. Anthony Park resident, teaches vet students at the University of Minnesota's St. Paul campus how to help people form good relationships with their healthy pets.

This new community practice course mirrors the popular family practice setting for humans. Students learn to discuss with pet owners the effects of things like stress and diet on animals.

"There's quite a bit more of a trend to that," Boynton said, "like in human medicine."

Boynton stressed that the first year of the pet-to-owner relationship is key. "Pets go through childhood very quickly," she said.

Enhancing the pet's natural behavior to adapt it to the household is important, such as litterbox training for cats.

Protecting the animal and, through that, the home, from parasites and disease helps to make the bonding in the first year a good base for the relationship.

In return for the attention people pay to their pets, pets do much for people, Boynton said. People who have pets are generally healthier than people without pets.

She said people with pets have lower blood pressure, get more exercise and socialize more easily than people without pets.

"If you go to a park," Boynton said as an example, "notice how much more a person walking a dog is stopped by other people to talk."

Aside from teaching her students the relationships between pets and owners and a "bedside manner," Boynton said she encourages students to give back to their communities by making public appearances.

Recently the students went to schools to teach preventative medicine for pets to young people. After all, it's hard to teach an old dog new tricks.

School News

Chelsea Heights Elementary

Lately at our school, some of the 5th and 6th graders have been working with Short-Elliott-Hendrickson. This firm plans, designs and builds a wide variety of structures. In December, a man who works for this firm, Randy Thorsten, came to talk to the classes about his job as a planner.

Several of the 4th, 5th and 6th grade classes will be going to the Bell Museum to view live footage from a submersible called Jason. Jason is operated remotely by a crew from a ship. Jason will be filming two to three miles beneath the ocean around the Galapagos Islands.

Kindergartners through 3rd graders did a unit on Climb Theatre. It is meant to teach younger kids about self-confidence and about how to be healthy. The kids learned to use the expressions, "Help Me" or "Hurt Me" to identify those things that help or hurt them.

St. Anthony Park Elementary School

The holidays are over. And on January 6 the students return to their classes full of enthusiasm, mostly, excited to tell their friends about their vacation activities.

On the 15th the 6th graders are going skiing at Afton Alps. We are all looking forward to this event even if we are not the best skiers!

Each year many families wish to visit prospective schools in order to make informed choices of where their children will attend. We feel that St. Anthony Park has a great program and we would like to share it with you. Morning tours will be held Thurs., Jan. 23; Tues., March 3; and Thurs., April 23, 10-11:00 a.m. Afternoon tours will be held Tues., Feb. 11; Tues., March 24; and Tues., May 12, 1:30-2:30 p.m. The tours will be led by our student council members with St. Anthony Park staff members available for questions.

On Jan. 20 the St. Paul schools will not be in session in observance of Martin Luther King, Jr., Day. However, every class will be doing special projects focusing on the life of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. throughout January. The highlight of our observance of Black History Month will be an assembly on Jan. 31 featuring Dr. Curman Gaines, superintendent of the St. Paul Schools. Also during that assembly the sixth grade class plans to perform a play written by a former St. Anthony Park student, Bernard Shaw, now a 7th grader at Highland Junior High. Jeremy Maeker from Mr. Martinson's class will play the part of Martin Luther King, Jr.

Murray Junior High

The week of January 6-10 is Black American History Week at Murray. On the 10th, the Mixed Blood Theatre will give an assembly, "Daughters of Africa." This performance has received great reviews from other schools.

On Fri., Dec. 13, there was a geography bee and the winner was Aaron Bohr, with Tim Duffy as runner-up. They will be competing in the city tournament. Good luck!

On Jan. 13 at 7 p.m. the Murray School Association will be giving an informational program, Making Choices for High School. Students and parents can get answers about any questions or concerns they might have. Murray is hoping that this program will make the choice of a high be able to attend the Wolf Ridge retreat. Last year a scientist came to Murray with a new product H. B. Fuller had just made. The scientist explained what the product was, then let the students brainstorm for a name. They may do that this year also.

Murray is very proud of its partnership with H. B. Fuller, and very grateful, too.

Congratulations to both the girls' basketball team and the boys' wrestling team. Both teams' records are 5 and 0.

Jan. 20 is Martin Luther King Day and Murray students will not attend school that day. The first semester finals are on Jan. 23 and 24, so students have only a half day of classes those days. Then on the 27th the second semester will begin.

school easier. This evening is being coordinated by Diane Keller, Kathy McIntosh and Marge Schmalz. For more information, call Murray's school office at 293-8740.

H. B. Fuller has a Business and School Partnership with Murray. The H. B. Fuller headquarters used to be on Como Avenue so that's what first started the company's partnership with Murray. But also the company strongly believes in community service for its employees. The employees volunteer for tutoring, chaperoning field trips and the retreat to Wolf Ridge Environmental Learning Center and the company provides buses for a variety of school events. They are also judges in the geography bee, spelling bee and science fair. The H. B. Fuller employees have been volunteering for more than 20 years. This partnership is a model for many other schools.

Como Park High School

As the year begins, Como Park will continue to be busy with many different kinds of activities. There will be a Cosys (a combination of Como and Unisys) meeting on Jan. 7. A new sign for Como Park, to be put on Maryland Ave., will be discussed. On Jan. 13 representatives from Como will be at Murray Junior High for the information night.

At 2:15 p.m. on Jan. 15 in the library we will be celebrating Mary Preston's retirement and thanking her for her work. She retired at the beginning of the school year. She was the attendance specialist at Washington, Murray, Como Park and feeder elementary schools. We miss her very much and she is a very special person to a lot of schools in the St. Anthony Park and Como Park areas.

Obituaries

The Rev. Richard Halvorson

The Rev. Richard Arndt Halvorson, a former resident of St. Anthony Park, died of cancer on Nov. 12, 1991. He was 47 years of age and lived in Tacoma, Wash.

Born in Casper, Wyo., on Dec. 30, 1943, Halvorson lived as a child in New York; Forest City, Iowa; and Minneapolis. After his family moved to St. Anthony Park, he graduated from Murray High School and Augustana College, Sioux Falls, S. Dak. He married Mary Ann Clark of Howard, S. Dak., in 1965.

In 1969, he was ordained as a pastor in the American Lutheran Church. He served parishes in Montana, Alaska and Tacoma. He is survived by his wife, daughters Kaia and Sara and son Clark, all of Tacoma; parents, the Rev. Arndt and Emily Halvorson of St. Anthony Park; brother, the Rev. Leonard Halvorson Fargo, N. Dak.; sisters, Karen Hedland of Anchorage, Alaska, Gretchen Mannis of Tacoma, Sara Johnson of Great Falls, Mont. and Martha Knutson of Corcoran, Minn.; and 11 nieces and 6 nephews.

Vernon Huso

Vernon K. Huso died at the age of 66 on Nov. 16, 1991. He had lived in the Como Park neighborhood.

Mr. Huso was a member of St. Timothy Lutheran Church. He is survived by his wife, Jane, of Como Park; two daughters, Janet Mangold of Milwaukee and Karen Foertsch of Jasper, Ind.; a son, Steven Huso of Falcon Heights; and five grandchildren.

Kemper Kirkpatrick

Kemper E. Kirkpatrick, a longtime St. Anthony Park resident, died on Nov. 22, 1991, at age 75. He was a former employee of 3M and did the interior design for its Maplewood headquarters. He had lived on Raymond Avenue for most of his life.

He retired in 1986. He began an art collection for display at 3M, which grew to include a wide variety of works and often featured the first works of unknown artists who later became well known.

Mr. Kirkpatrick also helped catalog the print collection at the Minneapolis Institute of Art and volunteered at the art gallery at the University of Minnesota.

He is survived by his sister, Elizabeth Sargent of Brewster, N.Y.; his brother, Bruce Kirkpatrick of Minneapolis; and six nieces and nephews.

Margaret Pomeroy

Margaret L. Pomeroy, age 80, died December 13, 1991. She was a longtime resident of St. Anthony Park.

She graduated from the University of Minnesota with a double major in political science and library science. Mrs. Pomeroy was a librarian at the University and at Hastings High School.

She was an active member of House of Hope Presbyterian Church in St. Paul, especially in the library.

Mrs. Pomeroy is remembered as an extraordinarily erudite person—an expert in archeology, anthropology, British and American history.

She is survived by her husband, Dr. Benjamin Pomeroy; and children Benjamin, Dr. Sherwood, Catherine Pomeroy and Dawn Hewitt, all of St. Paul; nine grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

These cloggers are on no wild goose chase

By Ellen Liberatori

What do you have when you mix a click, a clack, a stomp, a couple of whoops and a fiddle? Appalachian Clog Dancing. It's a dance of joy and zest, as seen on the faces of members of one of the oldest clog dancing groups in the Twin Cities—The Wild Goose Chase Cloggers.

The unusual name was chosen from an old quilting pattern that was replicated in costumes some of the earlier members wore. The group of 13 has been performing for audiences around the state for ten years.

Strapping on simple leather shoes and stomping out folk rhythms to the striking bow of a fiddle, they rehearse on the second floor of the Odd Fellows Hall in St. Anthony Park on Wednesday evenings. Their leather shoes are worn with small taps placed on the toes to get a better percussive sound. But even with taps, the dance is unlike tap dancing or "jingle tap" dancing, where the movement is done predominantly on the toes. Clogging relies on a flat-footed step, which helps accent the downbeat of the music.

Clogging as it is known today has settled in the Appalachian Mountains, yet it certainly has remnants of its roots and influence from the English, French, Scottish and Native Americans. The dance steps have unique names coming from early settler days: the Wagon Wheel, the Alamo, the Lone Ranger, the Indian and the Buck and Wing. Many of the choreographed movements and steps are the brainchild of manager and director, Jim Brooks, who is dean of students at William Mitchell College of Law.

Karen Zeleznak has been a dancer with the group for about four years. She feels it is "important to show this kind of dancing to audiences who are unaware of it...a way of preserving one of America's old folk arts." In the time she has been with the group, she feels the group has become "more technical."

Dancers have to enjoy performing since the group entertains audiences weekly through the summer and regularly through the year.

A nonprofit group, the Wild Goose Chase Cloggers' only paid member is the fiddler. Members are currently saving for a trip to France to attend the 30th annual Festival Folklorique Des Pyrennes, where they will be the only group representing North America.

The Wild Goose Chase Cloggers can be caught by calling 222-5475. They'll answer your questions about upcoming performances and classes.

Como High School from 16

The winter band concert will be on Jan. 22. Finals and the end of first semester are on Jan. 23 and 24. These two days will be half days.

Second semester begins on Mon., Jan. 27. There is an advisory council meeting at 7 p.m. on Jan. 28.

The school improvement committee at Como Park has made many suggestions: improving the physical aspects of Como, tutoring, building expansion, parking, advertising (public relations about Como to other schools) and continuation of interracial understanding.

A program at Como with Lakewood Community College gives assistance to students who are thinking about college but may have financial needs.

The explorer engineering club at Como has gotten off to a great start. The members have made visits to the Unisys defense plant and 3-M. Future plans include a tour of the MTS Systems, Medtronic, Northwest Airlines and the University of Minnesota during IT week.

Congratulations to Casandra Fairbanks who was listed among the top 20 centers for girls' basketball in the state.

Apologies to David Berglund whose name was inadvertently omitted last month in the list of Como Park athletes. David received honorable mention in football at both the city and conference levels. He is also a starter on Como's hockey team.

Central High School

Our holiday food drive this year gathered 2,504 items. This is more than the combined total of the food drive the past three years. Thank you very much to the area residents who donated food to the students knocking at their door. Way to go students, especially student council members.

We have two new clubs starting at Central right now. The French club, which boasts 30 members, is meeting one Wednesday a month in room 502. There will be a different theme for each meeting and it is not required that French be spoken the whole time. If you are interested in participating contact Madame Renfro.

Two students from Spain have also organized a Spanish club at Central. The club meets every Friday in room 501 to cook, play

Dr. Curman Gaines, Superintendent of St. Paul Public Schools, spoke to the Central High School Parent Advisory Council. The council meets the second Wednesday of every month at 7 p.m. in the school library. Seated left to right are Nadya Parker, Central's principal; Dr. Gaines; Jane Garafola, council president; Sandy Kester, Maggie MacGregor and Jaye Nida, members.

games, sing songs and practice Spanish. They are looking for more members, so if you are interested, Vaya!

If you are wondering what hip seniors would choose as their motto, here is the Dr. Seuss quote Central's class of '92 chose as their class motto: "Oh the places you'll go; You have brains in your head. You have feet in your shoes. You can steer yourself in any direction you choose."

Many students in our neighborhood have now begun their winter sports. In basketball we have Bryan Christianson, Matthew Crosby, Daniel Larson, Eric Peterson, Colton Dunn-McHenry, Todd Nakanishi and Rebecca Hoyle. In gymnastics and hockey, Jesse Lipelt, Anne Nakanishi, Wendy Peterson, Aaron Erickson, Tim Kersey, Brian Maddock and Matt Witham all represent our area. Ray Albrecht is the only Parkite swimming and Brad Sperbeck our only wrestler.

In comparison we have Rachel Allyn, Brenna Barrett, Kerstin Beyer, Erica Breneman, Mike Dennis, Jeff and Matt Flory, Ed and Dan Kohler, Dan LeBarre, Ingrid Larson, Nunia Mafi, Mara Magnuson, Martha Namie, Kent Nelsestuen and Jason Wirka braving the cold on the cross-country ski team.

Good luck to all the athletes!

Liz Kramer

Holy Childhood

In September Holy Childhood received three exchange students from Guatemala. During their time here they have participated in many school activities. They left on Dec. 7.

During early December the Holy Childhood Women's Club held a potluck for the Schola trip to Rome. During the potluck the Schola boys and girls gave a spectacular performance. Thanks to all the contributors.

On Dec. 13 two retired 3-M chemists gave Holy Childhood a science demonstration. They told us about air pressure and gave impressive experiments to prove it.

This year our play "Christmas Time" was different. It was on Dec. 17 in the church! It was a great performance.

On Dec. 12 the 7th graders went to the Alexander Ramsey mansion. While they were there they learned some interesting facts about the history of the Ramseys.
