Park Festival will bring food and fun to Como Avenue

By Bridget Faricy

The annual St. Anthony Park Spring Festival will be held on Sat., June 6 from 9 a.m.-5 p.m. at the intersection of Como and Carter Avenues.

The day begins with a pancake breakfast from 7-11 a.m. served at the St. Anthony Park Methodist Church, Hillside at Como.

Several new attractions are planned this year. A special area will be set up near Park Service to accommodate various animal demonstrations. Participants will include Como Zoo and the Raptor Center. Several University of Minnesota student groups also have been invited.

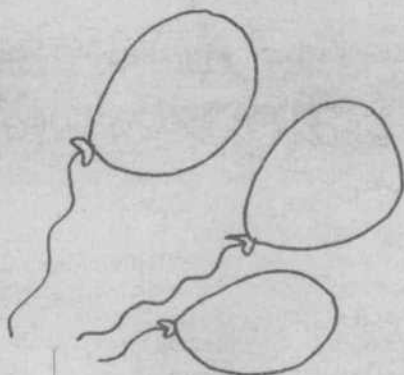

A security fair is being organized in conjunction with the St. Anthony Park Community Council which will include vendors displaying the latest in home and office security devices. In addition, there will be a police canine demonstration at the Park Service staging area from 3-4 p.m.

Traditional favorite local talent will be highlighted at the showmobile stage on Carter Ave. The Bells of the North Morris Dancers will perform at 11:30 a.m. and noon. The St. Anthony Park School of Dance will perform at 1:30. Twin City Linnea Home will have a Tai Chi demonstration at 3 p.m.

Participants from the Northern Clay Center will give wheel throwing demonstrations throughout the day near the library.

Food vendors will be back this year, selling gyros, mini donuts, fried cheese curds, cookies, hot dogs, popcorn and candy. Local food purveyors, such as Muffuletta, Pal's Sher Deli, Mannings, Sam Sherman Bakery, Miller Pharmacy and Speedy Market will have special foods for festival goers.

The festival is sponsored by the St. Anthony Park Merchants and Professionals Association, whose members will sell soft drinks at the festival as a fundraiser to underwrite the cost of the event.

Lauderdale residents to enjoy "Day in the Park" on Sat., June 20

By Corinna Nelson

Lauderdale will kick off summer with its annual Day in the Park on Sat., June 20. The event will start with a parade beginning at Lauderdale's city hall at 1891 Walnut. The parade route then goes south on Walnut, east onto Summer Street to Pleasant and north on Pleasant to the park. Awaiting paraders at 2 p.m. at the final parade block will be members of the Lions Club with a bike safety presentation. McGruff the crime dog will be in the parade and at the park, courtesy of the Roseville police.

There will be a community-wide garage sale within the hockey boards from 2-4 p.m., followed by an ice cream social at 6 p.m. Proceeds from the social will go toward future park improvements.

At 7 p.m. the Roseville band will play.

The Day in the Park had been held later in the summer in past years. Lauderdale's city council, which planned the event with input from city hall staff, moved the day to June in the hope of getting better weather.

Tour of Homes promises to be a treat

Jeff and Paula Sohlt's home at 35 Langford Park is featured on the House Tour. This photo was taken several years ago before the Sohlt's owned the home and prior to remodeling. Although the outside looks similar today, we're told the inside has been elegantly transformed.

By Ellen Watters

If you notice your neighbors washing windows and planting flowers in early June, chances are it's more than spring cleaning at work. Thirteen St. Anthony Park neighbors are busy readying their homes and yards for the upcoming Tour of Homes, which will be Sun., June 7, from noon-5 p.m.

Tickets for the tour are $8 in advance from Micawbers, The Bibelot Shop, First Bank Midway Muffuletta and Park Bank. For those who procrastinate, tickets can also be purchased at the Park Festival on June 6 and at the tour registration table on the library lawn on June 7. However, tickets on that day are $10.

This year's tour, the first since 1987, features more than a dozen examples of "Park living" at its best. Long-time Park residents Tom and Eileen Stack are once again opening their home, the famous McGill house, at 2203 Scudder. For nearly 20 years the Stacks have been carefully and wonderfully restoring this Victorian. In contrast, Beth and Greg Richardson have been working on their 1906 home for just a couple of years, but have already made great progress.

Block Nurse Program celebrates 10 years of service

By Amy Causton

Over ten years ago, some St. Anthony Park women began to discuss the need for in-home nursing care for elderly members of the community. They came up with the idea of a community-based organization, made up of nurses and volunteers, which would provide services for senior citizens and enable them to remain in their own homes. Since then, the St. Anthony Park Block Nurse Program, as it came to be called, has been tremendously successful, and it celebrates its tenth anniversary this year.

The main founders of the organization were Ida Martinson, Marge Jamieson and Jo Anne Rohricht; before long, Ann Copeland,

Mary Libera and Barbara O'Grady also got involved. They began talking in the fall of 1981 and according to Connie McGeorge, chairperson of the Block Nurse Program's board of directors, the idea "developed around kitchen tables here in the Park." The primary goal was to provide an alternative to nursing home placement and to prevent costly hospitalizations. In June of 1982 the program began operating.

The Block Nurse Program provides both nursing care (such as bathing and assistance with medications) and non-medical services (such as transportation, shopping, chore assistance and reading), which are provided by volunteers. Sometimes volunteers also help simply by providing companionship for people living alone.

Nurses for the program are recruited locally, with preference given to neighborhood residents. Currently, out of 10 paid staff members, only two come from outside the St. Anthony Park area. Lynda Morlock, the nurse program director, lives in Roseville, but according to McGeorge she is interested in moving to St. Anthony Park: "Her heart is in the Park, so we don't worry about the address," McGeorge says.

Currently the program serves about 38 clients, though it has helped over 150 in its 10-year history. Clients are billed for services only, and many pay on a sliding fee scale. Administrative costs are paid for by grants as well as neighborhood contributions which, according to McGeorge, constitute 20% of the program's budget.

The Block Nurse Program has also been successful as a model for other communities. Several years ago, the Ford Foundation and the John F. Kennedy School of Government awarded the Block Nurse Program a grant to see if the program could be reproduced in other neighborhoods and to pursue long-term funding for such programs.

At that time Block Nurse Program Incorporated was created to administer the grant and pursue its objectives. Similar programs have been developed successfully in Prospect Park, Highland Park and North St. Paul, as well as several other sites in Minnesota and around the country.

In fact, people from as far away as Japan have expressed interest in duplicating the program in their communities. "The Park should be very proud of the Block Nurse Program," says McGeorge.

Currently the local programs are administered by the Metropolitan Visiting Nurse Association. "Our goal is to have no duplication of effort," says McGeorge, so the program strives whenever possible to refer clients to other organizations that can meet their needs, such as Meals on Wheels.

Anyone interested in receiving assistance from the Block Nurse Program can call the program's office at 642-9052 between 8 a.m.-4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Debate opens on Lyngblomsten expansion

By Joel Schurke

Lyngblomsten Health Care Facilities has announced plans to expand its senior care buildings on Midway Parkway. Discussions with area residents began in earnest at the April meeting of District 10 Community Council's Land-Use Committee meeting. Lyngblomsten is proposing to demolish its original nursing home at the intersection of Midway Parkway and Pascal Avenue and construct a seven-story apartment building.

At the committee meeting, David Wagner, an architect for Lyngblomsten, described the size limits imposed on a new structure at this site by St. Paul city ordinances. The limits allow for a structure with a maximum "footprint" of approximately 22,600 square feet and a maximum height of seven stories if the new structure is physically attached to the existing, adjacent apartment complex (also seven stories).

Lyngblomsten intends to complete its senior care "campus" with this new building, which would provide assisted living units. These units would be small apartments whose occupants would have access to nursing services provided through Lyngblomsten. The apartments would serve as transitional living spaces—a step between independent living and full-time nursing care.

Midway Parkway is a unique stretch of St. Paul green space. Affordable homes, many occupied by life-long residents and new young families, line this gently curving parkway as it makes its two-and-a-half block passage from the entrance to the State Fairgrounds to the entrance of Como Park.

Lyngblomsten is one of two large senior care facilities on Midway Parkway. Shalom Home is the other.

The close proximity of 380-plus acres of Como Park, the Como Zoo and the Conservatory make this an ideal residential setting. The loss of residential properties is a significant concern to many Midway Parkway area residents, and as senior care facilities continue to expand, some residents are wondering where Lyngblomsten will stop.

In an open letter addressed to Lyngblomsten neighbors, area resident Darryl Breitenfeldt captured the sentiment of many. "Where once we had a nice wooded park, we now have a sprawling 'campus.' Where there once stood homes, we now have parking lots... No one is against the idea of quality housing and health care for the elderly. The facilities and care provided at Lyngblomsten appear excellent, and the staff and management should be commended. However, this is still a neighborhood and should not be turned into a large, corporate, elderly care village. These proposed expansions every few years gradually replace what we have today. Do you think that the need is going to diminish over the next 20 years?"

Citing excessive renovation costs and mounting maintenance costs, Wallace Hauge, president of Lyngblomsten, said the existing building cannot be adapted for their use. When asked whether the original Lyngblomsten building has any historic value that would merit saving the structure, Hauge answered, "No." Wagner stated that no formal studies of any kind have been done to assess the building for its historic qualities.

History for Lyngblomsten began in 1903. A group of 11 women paid 10¢ per month in dues to provide care for the elderly; it was officially incorporated in 1906, according to Hauge. The dimes added up and the original structure was built in 1911 as a home for elderly Norwegian women. James J. Hill gave a gift of $500 to purchase additional land, expanding Lyngblomsten's land holdings from 1.5 acres to 6.9 acres. An addition was added to the original building in the 1930s. The remainder of the land remained wooded for many years until construction of the new brick structures in 1961, 1976 and 1979.

The original Lyngblomsten home is positioned gracefully on a prominent berm overlooking Midway Parkway. It is an institutional building, yet aesthetically pleasing and set back discreetly on a well-manicured lawn with mature elm and pine trees.

Discussions about making attempts to save the original building have been as abruptly ended as Hauge's assessment of its historic qualities. According to Lyle Bergquist, an architect for Lyngblomsten, "The scale and character of the campus has changed. Now the [original] building has come out of character with the rest of the campus...the building has spent its usefulness." Bergquist also suggested that neighborhood opposition to demolishing the original building may force Lyngblomsten to again consider expanding to the east.

Lyngblomsten headed east once before, in 1988. The dust has not settled entirely from neighbors' struggles over this last expansion effort. A bitter dispute arose between neighborhood residents and Lyngblomsten over the purchase of houses to its east on Midway Parkway. Lyngblomsten purchased the first, third and fourth houses to the east; but was not able to buy the second house—stopping its effort to "square-off" its property. The first house to the east was removed and a zoning change was sought for the residential lot to allow its use as a parking lot.

In 1988 Ramsey County Commissioner John Finley wrote a letter to the City Council president voicing strong opposition. "It is not only the proposal but the precedent that it will set for future developers whom I am afraid will use this rezoning when they are pitching for construction of other commercial uses on not only Midway Parkway but other parkways in the city of St. Paul. Let's nip this in the bud."

The planned parking lot had its supporters too. The effects of the State Fair, Shalom Home and Lyngblomsten make street parking an issue of real concern to neighborhood residents, visitors and employees. Letters of support and opposition for the proposed zoning change stacked up. Eventually the change was granted, but the tone of the relationship

Block Nurse Program deserves praise

"The Park should be very proud of the Block Nurse Program," Connie McGeorge is quoted as saying in the article on page 2.

We are.

We're proud of a program that accomplishes what it set out to do—to make life easier and safer for frail or elderly people, saving those people and society money at the same time. We're proud of a program that has put St. Anthony Park on the map, the world map in fact.

We wish for the continued success of this exemplary program. Such community-based services will become increasingly important in the face of recessionary cutbacks in individual income and public services.

Those of us who live in St. Anthony Park are lucky to know that we have more affordable and less stressful options for nursing care and for addressing household and personal needs.

Cleveland Ave. construction set for after State Fair

By Kathy Malchow

Cleveland Avenue in Falcon Heights will be smoother and wider, but there will still be only one lane in each direction.

The county-owned road, long due for refurbishing, will be closed for construction for about two months from Larpenteur Ave. in Falcon Heights to County Rd. B in Roseville, beginning just after Labor Day. Access to the Gibbs Farm Museum parking lot will be available from Larpenteur Ave. throughout construction.

Currently, that section of Cleveland Avenue is about 24 feet wide. The new width will be 48 feet, according to Dan Soler, Ramsey County engineer in charge of the project. The additional width will allow for a center turn lane the length of the construction area, he said. A sidewalk for pedestrians will be installed along the east side of the road. A bicycle lane is not included in the plans.

In addition, a traffic light will be installed at Roselawn and Cleveland.

Cost for the entire project is almost $1.5 million, with about $208,000 of that amount allocated to the City of Falcon Heights. No resident assessments are necessary, however, since the University of Minnesota owns all the property along both sides of Cleveland in Falcon Heights. The University will be assessed the entire amount.

The City of Roseville's allocation is approximately the same as Falcon Heights'; the remaining cost for the project is absorbed by county and state aid funds.

Plans continue for 4th of July costume and bike decorating contest

By Mary Ann Bernard

Plans continue for the contest sponsored by the St. Anthony Park Association to promote children's costumes and decorated vehicles (bikes, trikes, strollers, scooters or wagons) in this year's 4th of July parade.

All children who are in costumes or have decorated their bikes will receive a ribbon as the parade organizes. At that time, children and parents will be told when the final judging for their age group will occur, if they want to participate. The grand prizes will be awarded in four different age groups (preschool, K-3, 3-6, and 7th and up) and three different categories: best historical costume, best all-American costume, and best decorated children's vehicle. Historical costumes would include all eras of American history, from Revolutionary War figures to pioneers and cowboys to modern political figures. "All-American" will include everything else.

Children will be judged by age category in the bandstand area at the close of the parade, prior to the foot races. Prizes will be age-appropriate toys or gift certificates. There will also be an award for the most creative adult entry.

The St. Anthony Park Library will have a special display of books on costumes available beginning June 1.

Helpful hardware men

Dear editors,

Although I consider myself of Swedish ancestry, I was asked last year to help construct a Turkish cultural exhibit at the Festival of Nations. Of the 50 nations represented, their entry won first place.

Because of this, I was presented this year with an even greater challenge: to build a river running through a tulip patch with a bridge across the river.

I immediately headed to Park Hardware Hank. Stew, Nate and Mark supplied me with the materials and advice.

Many thanks folks!

Harry Forsberg
P.S. First place again this year.

Better restaurant needed

Dear editors,

What makes St. Anthony Park such a special place to live is its wonderful qualities of small town living with few of the liabilities. One of the qualities it is missing, however, is a good cafe. A place where neighbors and friends can meet for a good cup of coffee, great pie, and home cooking.

Well, we have Mannings, you say. Sorry, but it doesn't measure up. What a disappointment! Poor service, waitresses who smoke cigarettes on duty, food that's unimaginative and tasteless.

Two years ago I wrote Mr. Manning a letter registering my disappointment at the quality of his cafe. My critique included positive suggestions. I have spoken with enough friends and neighbors to know I was not alone in my criticisms. I shared that with Mr. Manning, too. He failed to acknowledge my letter or respond in any way.

We deserve a better cafe in this neighborhood. A few more cards and letters to Mr. Manning might arouse his attention and get him to do something about it.

A potential customer,
Dianne Aisenbrey

Proposed parking lot at St. Anthony Park Elementary School is subject of town meeting

By Vickie Gilmer

Neighbors, parents and teachers will once again tackle the idea of building a parking lot at St. Anthony Park Elementary School. A town meeting, sponsored by the St. Anthony Park Community Council will be held to discuss the issue at 7 p.m. at the St. Anthony Park Library on Wed., June 10.

Initially planned for the corner of Como Ave. and Scudder St. 18 years ago, controversy over the lot's aesthetic value combined with the school staff's lobbying for the lot have left the project at a standstill.

"I have taught here for 18 years and have had to find a parking spot for 18 years," said Blanche Burroughs, a 6th grade teacher. Burroughs said the school had moved a house on the corner where the proposed lot is slated to be built, but due to community resistance the plan was never carried out.

Problems with parking stem beyond the mere convenience of having the lot on school grounds. "I got sideswiped this spring and had to pay the $250 deductible," Burroughs said.

She said staff at the school "fully support" the parking lot and that a petition has been sent to the community council and the city of St. Paul. She added that new surveying has been done, which includes landscaping ideas.

Some have said teachers should carpool to come to school. "Others feel there has not been enough of an attempt by the staff [to use] possibilities like mass transit or leasing [space] from the Children's Home Society in the parking lot of the Methodist Church," said Bobbi Megard, community organizer for the St. Anthony Park Community Council. Burroughs counters these suggestions by stating, "Teachers lug things home every day. Some of us choose to come early, some stay late."

Patrick Quinn, executive director of plant planning and maintenance for St. Paul Public Schools, has drawn up plans for two proposed parking areas on the school's land. Neither of the proposals includes using any part of Langford Park, a long-time contention with the community.

"The neighborhood has been reluctant to give up green space," Megard said. But,

"we have heard very little. The community doesn't know about it [the lot]."

Quinn added that "we won't take a square inch of Langford Park. That was clear from the beginning." He said plans are "firming up" and will be proposed at the June 10 meeting. One plan includes a lot on the corner of Como and Scudder that would hold about 23 cars. Quinn said this plan "is very similar to the first one proposed [18 years ago]."

The other proposed lot would run along Knapp Street and would hold 9 cars. "The assumption is that if we build anything, we'll build both," he said.

Quinn says he is unsure how the community will react to the plans but said the school wants to get as many cars off the street as possible.

Those attending the town meeting will be able to view the site plans and hear concerns of teachers and neighbors, as well as voice their own concerns, Megard said. The cost of building the parking lot will be the responsibility of the school once the community accepts the proposal, she added.

Corpus Christi Church to move June 21

By Ann Bulger

The Feast of Corpus Christi on June 21 will be especially significant this year for parishioners of Corpus Christi Church, when the move will be made from the Cleveland Avenue church to the new worship space on County Rd. B in Roseville. Plans are to meet at the present church and to bestow the keys and a gift to the Korean Catholic community of St. Andrew Kim, new owners of the church at Cleveland and Buford. The Korean Catholics bought the church a year ago and have rented space to Corpus Christi, just as they in turn rented space from Corpus Christi for two years prior to that.

After the farewell presentation, the parishioners will process through the St. Paul Campus and north on Tatum to the new church in Roseville, built adjacent to the former Corpus Christi School that is now leased by the Waldorf School. The new church resembles an 80-foot-square pyramid and will seat 500, with the altar in the center of the square space. Charter members will be honored at the first liturgy in the new building at 10:30 a.m. These pioneers of the parish were present at the first Mass in the old church on Dec. 25, 1940, a Christmas Mass at 5 a.m. There are 32 of these original members still in the parish.

Following the liturgy at the new church, there will be a brunch to celebrate the opening of the building. The former gym will be the new fellowship space. Former parishioners are invited to the celebration. New Mass schedule will be 5 p.m. on Saturdays, 8:30 and 10:30 a.m. on Sundays, with all services in the new location at County Road B and Fairview.

Father Robert Nygaard, pastor of Corpus Christi, has had a busy year, supervising the construction of the new worship center and the sale of the lots on Fairview Avenue to finance the project. Other priests serving the parish on a part-time basis are Father Ronald Bowers and Father David Smith.

Farmers from around world benefit from U of M program

By Michelle Christianson

When Celio Lobo arrived at the Miami airport from his home in Brazil, the multitude of languages made him wonder in just what country he had arrived. He was on his way to the St. Paul campus of the University of Minnesota to take part in the M.A.S.T. (Minnesota Agricultural Student Trainee) program and didn't know exactly what to expect. The Chicago airport was even more daunting, but when he arrived in Minnesota he began to feel more comfortable in what has been a very rewarding experience for him.

The M.A.S.T. program began in 1949 and has educated more than 3,000 students from over 30 countries. The students range in age from 21 to 29 years and must have had at least two years of agricultural or horticultural experience as well as two years of schooling in either of those fields with basic English-speaking skills.

Lobo is 25 years old and a graduate of the University of Uberlandia, his home city. He was originally interested in attending graduate school in Ohio when he heard about this program from a friend.

All students arrive at the campus in March, July or November and begin with a few days of orientation before leaving for host farms in rural he feels that some of the differences in management styles help U.S. farmers have better production.

Lobo enjoyed being "a celebrity" in Paynesville where he spoke to the Lions Club and other groups about his country. The hardest thing to get used to was the food, which was quite different from what he ate at home. Nevertheless, the whole experience was most valuable.

The final part of the M.A.S.T. program consists of ten weeks of academic course work at the School of Agriculture. When Lobo finishes that portion of the program, he intends to return to Brazil for one month and then come back for his graduate studies at the University of Ohio. After that three-year course of study Lobo plans to teach at the University of Uberlandia and manage the family's 500-acre coffee farm.

Sue Rains-Johnson, director of the study period, says that most students have a positive reaction to the program. Many of the host families have been doing this for years and understand the needs of the students. Also, placements may be switched in the first few weeks in order to ensure that students have an optimal experience.

Potential students find out about the program through agricultural programs in other countries as well as by word of mouth. If you are interested in participating in this type of program in another country or in being a host family for a foreign student during their initial few days in the city, contact Sue Rains-Johnson at 624-2732.

Minnesota. There they gain practical experience in how farms run in the United States, doing everything the host farmers do except make final decisions. Lobo spent his eight months at two farms in Paynesville working with the dairy herds on these farms.

Asked about differences between farms in the U.S. and Brazil, Lobo states that he did work with his hands for the first time. Farmers in Brazil are usually managers and hire manual laborers for the work of the farms. Lobo sees advantages in doing some of the jobs himself in that he will be able to understand his employees better by having been in their places. Also,

Programs at Gibbs Farm

Dairy Day, an annual event co-sponsored by Schroeder Milk Co., will be held at Gibbs Farm Museum on Sun., June 7, noon-4 p.m. There will be demonstrations of how to milk a cow, churn butter and make ice cream (with free samples!).

Ramsey County's Schroeder dairy farm, like the Gibbs family's vegetable farm, began catering to residents of the Twin Cities in the 19th century. Some of the methods to be demonstrated, such as the working of the cream separator, are in keeping with that earlier time period.

On Father's Day, June 21, noon-4 p.m., Ken Kopetzke of the St. Croix Horse and Carriage Society will discuss the museum's collection of James J. Hill's carriages. Fathers are admitted free when accompanied by children of any age.

Admission for these two Sunday events is $2.50/adults; $2/seniors; $1 children. Regular hours at the farm, located at Cleveland and Larpenteur, are Tues.-Fri., 10 a.m.-4 p.m.; Sat. & Sun., noon-4 p.m.

Turn-of-the-century style birthday parties are available at Gibbs Farm Museum for groups of ten children or less on Tues.-Fri. afternoons from 2 p.m. and Sat. afternoons from June-September. Highlights are homemade ice cream, period games, and a costumed interpreter who will give a special tour of the museum and its one-room schoolhouse. Cost is $45 for non-members and $40 for members. Table setting is included; you provide cake and beverage.

Gibbs Farm Museum has scheduled seven writing workshops for adults this summer. One is designed for classroom teachers. Others are open to the public. Each workshop is 2 1/2 hours long. Dates are June 18 & 20, July 1 & 18 and Sept. 10, 17 & 24. Registration, which includes all materials, is $15. One of the workshops features Teri Graham, founder of Write Connections, who will conduct a session on personal note-writing called "Pencil Power for Busy People."

For more information on Gibbs Farm Museum programs, call Ted Lau at 646-8629.

All Ramsey County libraries will be open the same total amount of hours, but those hours will be spread over seven libraries instead of six.

Lyngblomsten from 3

between some area residents and Lyngblomsten was set.

"I get the feeling that they have a ton of pull. I don't really trust them. They are very open and up-front and kind of conciliatory at the beginning, but then they are doing these deals under cover," said Patty Breitenfeldt, a neighbor. "It gets kind of frustrating after a fashion. At a recent meeting Hauge got up and had the nerve to say that 'We don't mow our lawns before 7 a.m.' Well, about eight neighbors then got up and said, 'I beg your pardon, you do too!' He's [Hauge] paranoid and he doesn't give a damn."

The lack of sensitivity for the neighborhood on Lyngblomsten's part was noted in an Aug. 10, 1988, Pioneer Press article in a comment attributed to now-Mayor Jim Scheibel: "Council president Jim Scheibel, who voted for the project [zoning change], said that the institution [Lyngblomsten] has to be more sensitive to neighborhood concerns in the future."

Andrew Knutson, chairman of the Lyngblomsten Board of Directors, wants to maintain good relations with neighbors. Knutson points to the Lyngblomsten mission and its stellar reputation for providing senior care as starting points for discussing its expansion plans.

"Number one, the decision has not been made that the building will be removed and the Living Center erected. Number two, we want neighborhood input—but it is Lyngblomsten's decision. Unless the neighborhood wants to contribute financially," Knutson said.

Funding clearly remains an issue for making Lyngblomsten's plans a reality. "The big question that remains is, of course, funding. Various regulations prevent us from using the equity in either the Care Center or the Apartments to finance a new building for assisted living... The Foundation has begun the process of evaluating our ability to raise several million dollars," David Rokke, Lyngblomsten Foundation executive director, wrote in a recent progress report.

"I think that there is a greater probability of tearing the building down and not replacing it," Knutson said. It [the original building] is just costing us a lot of money."

Thomas Blanck, a St. Paul architect specializing in historic renovation, toured the original building and bemoaned that attention is not being focused on preserving the building. Blanck said the layout of the other new buildings on the campus was done in such a way as to plan for the obsolescence of the original building. He said the reason the building is not being preserved is because Lyngblomsten planned to eliminate it a long time ago by designing the campus the way they did. Hauge disputes this notion and maintains that new housing code requirements and customer demands have made the building impossible to renovate from a financial perspective. The building has not been used for housing since the 1970s.

Lyngblomsten solicited area residents' ideas by sponsoring two informational meetings on May 6 and 7. The intent of these meetings was to "focus on the proposed new building for independent senior housing with assisted living services and community senior center accommodations" and "allow for input from our neighbors and the community we serve as we design this very important addition to the Lyngblomsten campus."

The means by which this neighborhood input will be incorporated is not clear. "I don't think the community will be asked to design the building," said architect Bergquist.

St. Paul city council member Paula Maccabee, responding to the question of the original building's historic value said, "As a matter of principal I don't have an opinion. I don't have the facts on whether to tear it down or whether we should save it. If there is historical value to the building I can support historical designation."

Asked how many concerned area neighbors it would take for Maccabee to take a position on the issue of Lyngblomsten's expansion, she said, "It's not neighbors, it's facts my friend. Are you asking me to support additional changes in zoning? That's not even on the board—but probably not."

Concerned neighbors continue to meet informally and are discussing—as separate issues—parking problems in the area and specific design ideas for Lyngblomsten to incorporate into their proposed plans. Two ideas being discussed are a proposal for a moratorium on expansion of institutional properties at the expense of area homes and the establishment of a Midway Parkway Area Residents Group that would serve to preserve the parkway's unique setting.

Two specific design ideas for Lyngblomsten's building plans have been proposed by a group of neighbors concerned about the appearance of the new structure. One idea is to save the facade of the original building and build "within it"—similar to Calhoun Square in Minneapolis.

Another idea would retain the earth berm and setback from the parkway. This would involve cutting away the earth berm at the existing setback, but

Debit cards save money and time

More and more Minnesotans are casting their checkbooks aside and making room in their wallets for the convenience of a bank debit card.

"It looks like a traditional credit card, but it works like a plastic check," explains Kathryn Lind, Norwest Card Services marketing specialist. "Unlike a credit card, a debit card directly withdraws funds from your checking account without adding on costly interest charges."

Debit cards are very popular on the East and West Coasts. "They take the hassle out of shopping," Lind says. "Instead of having to stand at the check-out line, fumbling for your checkbook, a pen and two forms of ID, all you have to do is hand your card to the clerk and sign your name. Your bank statement tracks your use just like it would your checks."

Cash Convenience

In examining their own spending and check-writing habits, many people find using a debit card saves them money.

- Do you write checks often and for small amounts?
- Do you prefer not to carry cash?
- Do you make frequent visits to a cash machine?

"If you normally write a lot of checks or like the convenience of credit cards, use a debit card instead," says Lind. "Shoppers in a hurry or those with small children love how easy it is to use in place of check-writing. And, because it is sponsored by a major credit card, it can be used for purchases anywhere a credit card is honored." Debit cards also act as cash cards, giving users access to their money through any cash machine — usually free of charge.

Travelers find debit cards especially useful: They retain ready access to their checking account without worrying their out-of-town checks won't be honored. Plus, there is no need to buy travelers checks, since the debit card can be used at cash machines and retailers all around the world.

"Debit cards are not designed to take the place of traditional credit cards which are used for major purchases or to extend payments," Lind points out. "But for most other purchases, debit cards can save money and offer a convenience that today's consumers appreciate."

Dancer Wendy Hambidge presents own concert

By Kristin Copa

"It's All in How You Get There," is the name of local dancer Wendy Hambidge's latest concert and the story of how she's achieved her success.

Hambidge, a 5-year resident of Falcon Heights, has come a long way from her first dance lessons at the St. Anthony Park Library when she was four. In the middle of May, she presented her own concert at the Hennepin Center for the Arts.

In addition to dancing, Hambidge choreographs her dances and costumes some of them. It was a natural progression for her, although she said, "I love to perform, too."

Her parents took her to dance lessons and concerts when she was young and her interest centered on modern dance.

"That's where my heart has always led me," she said. "Ever since I was a young child, I've been drawn to it."

Hambidge studied with Nancy Hauser from the time she was nine until she left to go to college. Hauser had great influence on her work and Hambidge dedicated a piece to her called "Tides of Desiring."

After finishing her degree, Hambidge moved to Portland, Oregon, and continued to perform, receiving two independent project grants from the Portland Metropolitan Arts Commission.

Upon her return to the Twin Cities, Hambidge joined the Nancy Hauser Dance company and works through the Minnesota Dance Alliance, a group she finds very supportive.

"The Dance Alliance is a very positive influence in the dance community in town," she said.

Wendy Hambidge

The Twin Cities dance community is very strong, she added—"It's a very fertile place."

Hambidge creates different images in her different pieces. They range from the theatrical, with single dancers exploring a character, to an emphasis on movement, with up to nine dancers moving together and in groups on the stage.

For her May concert, Hambidge performed one solo dance using two trapezes and large boulders. She learned the trapeze in Portland with a dance group and integrated it into her premiere of "Hunting," a mesmerizing and primitive piece.

She was able to work with local composer Michael Aubart, a member of the board of directors of the Minnesota Composers Forum, for two of the pieces from the concert, "Tides of Desiring" and "Full Tilt." Both pieces filled the stage with dancers moving in sequence and autonomously to the rhythms.

"We've really enjoyed working together," she said. "We've fed off each other a lot."

City of St. Paul planning new "Office of Neighborhoods"

By Jane McClure

In a place that calls itself a "city of neighborhoods," what should an Office of Neighborhoods be? What should it do for residents and neighborhood organizations? And in a time of increasingly scarce resources, what can such an office do for neighborhoods and neighborhood organizations?

As planning for St. Paul's new Office of Neighborhoods continues, those questions and others are being asked of the people who may be using the office the most. The ideas of district planning council members and community organizers, representatives of community development corporations, block club leaders and others active in an array of neighborhood issues are being sought.

"One message we've gotten is that there is a lot of power out there," said Mayor Jim Scheibel. "There's a lot of energy in neighborhoods—energy that we need to bring together on the big issues."

That energy might help neighborhoods and the city as a whole accomplish more collectively at the state and federal levels of government, he added. "I get asked sometimes, 'What really will make a difference, and what can be done?'"

Building a coalition of grass roots organizations will also help the city develop an agenda for the future. Many items for that agenda are expected to emerge at a day-long meeting of neighborhood groups. Scheibel and his staff will soon announce a date and place for the meeting on the Office of Neighborhoods, as a way to hear more ideas on what the new office should be and do.

"We don't want the office to be just another part of the city bureaucracy," Scheibel added.

One question that might be raised is why start another city office in a time when budgets are being cut for existing offices and departments? But Scheibel contends that budget cuts in other areas make the Office of Neighborhoods even more of a priority. "In a time of budget crisis, we're going to rely on our neighborhoods more and more," he said.

"We don't want the office to be just another part of the city bureaucracy."

—Mayor Scheibel

In turn, the Office of Neighborhoods can help strengthen the city's many grass roots groups by directing them to needed resources. "We have committed citizen leadership in neighborhoods," said Tom Welna, the mayor's executive assistant. His hope is that the new office will break down any barriers perceived in relationships between neighborhood groups and city government.

How the office works with neighborhood groups on issues is expected to vary. Sometimes, people simply need direction to resources. Other times, they may have suggestions to improve a program or process. "And sometimes," said Welna, "the best thing city government can do is get the hell out of the way."

Two major issues have already emerged, from discussions about the proposed Office of Neighborhoods. These are:

1) The need to look more closely at how neighborhood programs are funded. While there's consensus that grant programs such as the Neighborhood Partnership Program (NPP) and Urban Revitalization Action Program (URAP) do provide the incentive to improve neighborhoods, there is also concern that such programs aren't used for their proper purposes. The use of URAP funds for a parking lot that would serve the East Side's Payne Reliever bar, and NPP funding for Grand Avenue and Swede Hollow decorative street lighting have been cited as reasons to drop the two programs.

NPP is the funding source the city has the most control over, as its supporting bonds are local. (URAP dollars are allocated by the state, but originate from the federal government.) Although Capital Improvement Budget (CIB) committee members called for ending the NPP after this year's funding cycle, Scheibel and Welna contend that NPP is needed, and must continue in some form. Ways to change NPP will be studied over the next several months.

Other grant programs, such as Neighborhood Crime Prevention grants, have run into criticism at the neighborhood level. In the most recent round of crime grant funding, questions were raised about a mayoral and City Council decision to fund two groups not recommended for funds by the Planning Commission.

"Questions have been raised about how we can fairly distribute resources, and how we can develop a fair and simple funding process," said Welna.

One goal for the new office is to have its staff assist other city departments in meeting neighborhood needs.

2) The need to look at which neighborhood programs have worked, and how those programs can be strengthened. In raising the idea for an Office of Neighborhoods, Scheibel said, "I wouldn't want to convey the impression that nothing has happened in the past 20 years."

What's needed is to get neighborhood activists together and ask, "What's your biggest success of the past 20 years? What have you learned in that time?" said Scheibel. "We need to support what has worked."

One project that made a difference was the design effort that went into the new High Bridge. Discussion about how that bridge was needed by the adjacent West Seventh and West Side neighborhoods and how the bridge should look was seen as having an impact on how that project turned out.

"The comment from many of those involved was 'We will never build another ugly bridge in St. Paul,'" said Scheibel. Facets of the High Bridge planning effort are now being used as city officials study proposals for a new Wabasha Bridge.

Other functions of the Office of Neighborhoods are also being outlined. One goal for the new office is to have its staff assist other city departments in meeting neighborhood needs. Scheibel admits that some city departments do a better job of this than others. He cites the public works department and director Tom Eggum as being able to take the kind of neighborhood perspective needed in implementing programs and presenting projects.

Then there is the question of who should be hired to lead the Office of Neighborhoods. "I'm looking for someone who is a good organizer," said Scheibel. "Someone who is a good organizer is able to listen, and then bring people together." Familiarity with neighborhood groups and the district planning council system and a good working knowledge of the grant-making and grant-seeking process are other qualities sought.

The public meeting on the Office of Neighborhoods and the hiring of a director were delayed until after the 1992 Minnesota Legislature wound up its work, said Welna. The recent legislative session caused considerable uncertainty for city officials, as the budget originally proposed by Gov. Arne Carlson threatened to take almost $10 million in local government aids away from St. Paul.

Intense lobbying spared local government aids and the local government trust fund. As it stands now, the city will have to make up a budget shortfall of between $2 and $3 million, caused by the state lawmakers' decision to have cities and counties pay the 6.5 percent sales tax. Carlson approved this proposal in April, when he signed the budget package into law.

In response to the state budget, city departments will be making 3 percent budget cuts by the end of May, and are to tentatively plan on making 7 percent cuts by Jan. 1, according to St. Paul Budget Director Pamela Wheelock.

...most [budget] issues center on funding for district planning councils and neighborhood activities.

When the mayor and his staff visit with St. Paul residents about the Office of Neighborhoods, more budgetary issues may be raised. Not surprisingly, most of those issues center on funding for district planning councils and neighborhood activities.

The city's 19 district planning councils are funded by one of three sources: general fund (tax levy) dollars, federal Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) money from Housing and Urban Development, or a combination of tax levy and CDBG dollars. The funding source used is determined by several factors, including population and average income in each planning district.

In the past couple of years, councils funded through CDBG dollars have had to cope with increased federal reporting requirements and paperwork. This has been the case with the St. Anthony Community Council. Use of funds has been restricted to certain projects, such as crime prevention activities.

Linked to the issue of financing district planning council activities are questions about the future role of those councils.

Some CDBG-funded councils have asked Scheibel if they can be funded through the general fund instead. Funding was one of the main concerns discussed at a meeting between the mayor and community organizers in late March.

Ward Two City Council member Dave Thune has supported this concern, and has asked Planning and Economic Development Director Robert Sprague to see if CDBG funds used to support district councils can replace general fund dollars elsewhere in the PED budget.

In a letter inviting Sprague to a breakfast meeting, West Seventh/Fort Road Community Organizer Maggie Schwichtenberg parodied the time-consuming CDBG reporting process, joking about the need to use an "American-made stopwatch" to maintain proper timesheets for the meeting.

"Please take note that before meeting with you, according to our citizen participation regulations, an affidavit under Sections 570.208 (a) (1) and 570.208 (a) (2) (b), that documents family size and income must be maintained and must be in the federation offices before we can hold this meeting," the letter stated. "However, if your income exceeds certain levels given your family size, we might require a listing of the neighbors on your block to calculate the ratio of low/moderate income population to total population per census block group."

The mayor's office is aware of the daunting paperwork of community organizers face, and such a funding shift is being considered, said Scheibel. But he and Welna note that reallocating funds will be difficult, in these times of already tight budgets.

Community organizers who work with general levy-supported councils such as District 10 note that their organizations are more vulnerable to difficult economic times at the city and state level. Moving all the CDBG-funded organizations to the general fund could mean tighter times for every neighborhood, noted Macalester-Groveland Community Organizer Kathie Tarnowski.

In the 1992 budget process, she said, district councils funded with tax levy or general fund dollars took a funding cut. A cut this year, as a result of the new state budget, is possible.

On the other hand, councils funded with CDBG dollars were spared the 1992 budget ax.

Linked to the issue of financing district planning council activities are questions about the future role of those councils. When the City Council becomes a part-time group in 1994, many community organizers believe their offices and volunteer councils will be more active than ever, as more constituent questions are dealt with at the neighborhood level.

Bobbi Megard, community organizer for the St. Anthony Park Community Council, contends that the city will save as much as $400,000 by cutting council salaries and dropping one of each council member's two aides. That savings isn't likely to be reflected in corresponding increases in district council budgets.

But cutting district council budgets will make it more difficult to meet those increased needs, Megard added.

Darren Bjork, Michael Quinn, Thomas Gulner and Timothy Martin (l-r) received thanks and an award from the Como Park (District 10) Community Council and the St. Paul Police Department for rescuing a 13-year-old boy from a possible sexual assault near Como and Snelling on April 24. Over 50 people attended the May 14 ceremony.

Bjork and Quinn chased the alleged robber, recovered the boy's wallet and, with the help of Gulner and Martin, took the man to the Tom Thumb store, where they waited for police. Bjork and Quinn are students at the University of St. Thomas. Gulner and Martin are neighborhood residents who grew up in the area. Said Gulner, "I told the guy, 'You chose the wrong neighborhood to do this.'"

Como Park (District 10) to add clothing and small appliances to curbside recycling

By Linda Johnson

At the May 19 District 10 Community Council meeting, approval was given to a six-month pilot recycling program starting in July and administered by the St. Paul Neighborhood Energy Consortium in cooperation with Goodwill Industries.

Under this program, textiles and small usable appliances will be added to District 10 curbside recycling. Special plastic bags will be provided for recycling these new items.

A Larpenteur Avenue Task Force was put under the direction of council member Herbert Lentsch, Jr., to discuss issues connected with reconstruction between Hamline and Dale.

Approval was also given to a collaborative effort with North Dale Recreation Center to obtain arts grant money for neighborhood programs including a grant to start an arts program in the neighborhood and a grant to take neighborhood children to a museum or show.

Midway Parkway residents sought and obtained approval from the District 10 Community Council for a request that the city implement small area planning for the Midway Parkway area.

Bob Clyborne was voted in as a new council member.

Community Organizer Keri Poepe announced in a special staff report that the Como Park Garden Club will do planting on Midway Parkway on Sat., May 30 at 9:30 a.m. Special thanks was given to Lebens for providing perennials.

Other upcoming meetings include a Parks Committee meeting, Wed., June 17, to discuss trail systems in parks, and several June block club meetings.

Poepe announced an opening on the Ramsey County Charter Commission. She also said the swing set on the Chelsea Heights school playground will not be constructed until the whole playground is redesigned.

Call Keri Poepe at 644-3889 for more information on any of the items discussed.

leaving intact the portion of the berm facing Midway Parkway. The new building could be inset into this excavated area with landscaped retaining walls rising to the top of the existing berm, providing light for the lower level apartments. Lyngblomsten features a similar design in the construction of its chapel. The excavated area adjacent to the chapel provides natural light to offices at the basement level.

If Lyngblomsten decides to proceed with plans to build the new facility, it is clear there will be much discussion. Neighbors concerned about the proposed project are encouraged to attend community meetings and express their opinions.

"Don't think that you are simply dealing with a building. One hundred new apartments will cause even more problems with parking and traffic. How many more delivery trucks or garbage haulers will rumble past your children while they walk to school or play outside? We all know how noisy and busy the traffic gets when the shifts change." Darryl Breitenfeldt continued in his open letter: "Do we really want more? Ever try driving down Almond Ave. during an afternoon in wintertime? How about the heavy equipment used to remove snow at 3 a.m. or the heavy equipment used to remove snow at 7 a.m.? These are not the sounds of a neighborhood. It sounds more like an industrial park! Many of your neighbors contend that we don't need more."

At a May 19 community council meeting, the Midway Parkway Task Force was officially formed. The Task Force is urging the city to conduct a Small Area Plan study of the area. Such action would require a moratorium on any new construction until the study is complete. Those interested in joining the task force should call community organizer Keri Poepppe at 644-3889.

Maitland running

Ian Maitland, associate professor of management at the University of Minnesota, will attempt for a third time to unseat Congressman Bruce Vento. Maitland received Independent-Republican endorsement for the 4th Congressional District seat. He ran in 1988 and 1990 against Vento.

Maitland said at a State Capitol press conference on May 18 that the problems of America's cities could be solved by getting poor people to do the "right things" (staying in school, finding jobs, staying off welfare and staying married), not by spending more on social programs.

Day in the Park from 1

In April Lauderdale passed a resolution and allocated moneys to make park improvements. Council member Cindy Wheeler is coordinating plans for the improvements, using her experience as a trail planner for the State Department of Natural Resources.

Lauderdale will survey the park from the air before making plans. There will be a booth at Day in the Park from 2-4 and 6-7 p.m. where the city will describe long-term plans for the park and donations on hand from the Lions Club and Rotary Club, and will solicit donations for park improvements.

Lauderdale does not have other organized events in the park other than the "Day," but it does cooperate with Roseville recreation in allowing the park to be used for team sports. Teams that participate through Roseville recreation are reimbursed the non-resident fee for use of the park.

All are welcome to bring items to the garage sale. The first 10 people who call the city will be provided with a table on site. Later callers provide their own tables. Proceeds for the garage sale go to the sellers, who may begin setting up their tables at noon.

If you would like to volunteer for Day in the Park by baking a cake for the ice cream social or other activities, call Lauderdale city hall at 631-0300.

Razskazoff is Eagle Scout

Jari Razskozoff

By Michelle Christianson

Jari Razskazoff has more than one reason to be proud of himself. Not only is he the third generation of his family to live in St. Anthony Park, he is the third generation to be a Boy Scout. But in one way, he is unique. He will be the first Eagle Scout among his Park family.

Razskazoff, 14, is in the 8th grade at Breck School and has been a Boy Scout in Troop 17 for three years. He takes part in football and hockey and plays the piano.

Jari's Eagle project was to clean up the railroad tracks from Food-N-Fuel to the 280 bridge and along Eustis Street to Murray field. He and several other Scouts picked up trash, wood and even tires to make the roadway better looking.

Razskazoff says his parents Don and Hilka were a great help to him in earning this award, as were his teachers and scout leaders.

The award will be presented at a court of honor at St. Anthony Park United Church of Christ on June 8 at 7:30 p.m.

Real Estate
 By Peggy Sparr
 Edina Realty REALTOR
UNDERSTANDING APPRAISALS
 The purpose of the appraisal is to establish value for lending purposes to confirm collateral for the loan. Value is established by comparing subject property to similar houses in the neighborhood that have sold and closed. The best comparables have 1) sold within the last 6 months 2) are within 1 mile radius and are 3) similar in size and style.
 Professional appraisers are employed by the mortgage company, FHA, VA or an independent appraisal firm. In arriving at the estimated value, the appraiser considers obvious defects. If they are serious, repairs will be required. The buyer should understand that the appraisal does not serve as a home inspection, or as a warranty to the condition of the home. If work orders are anticipated, the purchase agreement should indicate who is responsible for repairs.
 When an appraisal is less than the purchase price, the choices are 1) to request a reconsideration, (agents will supply needed comparables.) 2) Buyer purchases at original price and makes larger down payment or 3) Renegotiate the purchase agreement.
 If you have any questions regarding this or other real estate issues, please contact Peggy Sparr at 636-3760! We're here for you!

 If there is anything we can do to help you in the field of real estate, please call Edina Realty, 2803 Lincoln Drive, Roseville. Phone: 636-3760. We're here to help.

School News

Central High School

The yearbooks are getting passed out, people are studying for finals and the seniors are trying on their caps and gowns. Looks like another Central school year is nearing its close.

Both the blood drive and Arbor Day, at the end of April, were very successful. Central students and teachers donated 86 units of blood to the Red Cross, 57 of them were from first-time donors. Central's front lawn has probably never seen as many politicians as it did on Arbor Day. While well-known dignitaries gave speeches, workers from the Department of Natural Resources and Central students were carefully planting new trees. Central now has 42 new trees to show off.

Senator Paul Wellstone came to speak at Central on May 11. He gave the 300 students in the auditorium a chance to speak out against racism in the community and to give him suggestions about what can be done to improve the tense racial atmosphere.

The spring sports teams are all doing well. Their current standings are:
 girls' track: 5 wins, 0 losses (first in conference);
 boys' track: 4 wins, 1 loss (second in conference);
 boys' tennis: second in conference;
 softball: 9 wins, 8 losses;
 girls' golf: 2 wins, 2 losses, 2 ties;
 boys' golf: 5 wins, 1 loss (second in conference);
 baseball: 7 wins, 5 losses.

Graduation will be held at 5:30 p.m. on Wed., June 3 in the Civic Center. If you would like to go, get a ticket from a Central senior. The final day of school is June 4, and final exams for underclass students will be Wednesday and Thursday of that week.

The top ten seniors (in alphabetical order) are: Allison Albrecht, Murray Blackmore, Cedric Fan, Liz Kramer, Kari Krogseng, Anna Lamin, B.J. Priester, Jan Solon, Cindy Wu and Ellen Wu.

Como Park High School

The month of June at Como Park is a very short, yet sweet month. For the school year, there is only one week of school during June. Although this is one short week, it is an extremely busy week starting with June 1 and 2. These two days are the days in which the seniors will take their finals. June 2 is also the last day for seniors. June 3 and 4 are finals for underclass students (first, second and fifth hours on the 3rd, and third, fourth and sixth hours on the 4th). The graduation ceremony will be held on June 4 at 5:30 p.m. in the Roy Wilkins Auditorium at the Civic Center. That night, the senior all-night party will take place at Como.

On April 30, Como held an Academic Honors Night for the top ten in each class. The following students from St. Anthony Park and Como Park were honored: 9th grade: Kimberly Bible, Kimberly Pojar, Joshvan Petkovich, Joelle Banks, Joshua Jongewaard, Benjamin Jongewaard, Richard Rassel, Joshua Sumner and Clinton Maxson; 10th grade: Joshua Henly, Andy McIntosh, Ben Tressel, Belia Moreno and Beth Schmitz; 11th grade: Melissa Belde, Brian Steglich and Naomi Davis; 12th grade: Dan Brings, Mike Tressel and Beth Eilts.

As the school year comes to a close, Como is already beginning to miss the class of '92. The contributions of these students to Como will always be remembered and they will be thought of often. As these students are bid a farewell, the new freshman class (class of '96) is called to join in on the fun.

Naomi Davis

Dan Larson, center, of St. Paul Central High School, and math teacher Marlys Henke, left, were honored recently for exceptional math achievement at a recognition event sponsored by Unisys. Kurt Johnson, Unisys, is on the right.

Murray Junior High

Congrats to the following students on a third place finish in the state history day competition: Aaron Doepner, Tim Rupert, Brett Magnuson, Peter Mazanec, Erika Backberg, Kate Kolb and Jordana Whyte. Also congrats to the mathletes who won second place in the state math competition at the University of Minnesota Duluth on May 2. The top scorers were Chris Peak, Raini Wood, April Larson, Amy Lampman and Rebecca Rubinstein.

The students who performed the Murray play, "The ReOpening," did a fabulous job. The students wrote the play and acted it out by themselves, with the help of a volunteer from SteppingStone Theater.

We are sorry to say that next year Ms. Rivera, the assistant principal, will not be returning to Murray. She is moving to Fort Lauderdale, Fla., to be a counselor in the school district. We will all miss you a lot, Ms. Rivera!

Since this is the last article for the Murray school year for the 8th graders, I thought it would be neat if we could read what the students thought about the year, so here goes:

"We've all made so many great memories these past two years at Murray. It'll be hard to say goodbye."
 Cherish Galvin-Davis-Foote.

"I've made the best friends I could ever make at Murray."
 Anna Bartholome.

"I enjoyed every bit of the two years I spent at Murray!"
 Ben Mooney.

"Junior high was an exciting experience, I will never forget it!"
 Louisa Lorimer.

"I will miss all of my friends that will be going to different schools."
 Carlo Sweeney.

"It's funny how we laughed at the times we cried, and cried at the times we laughed."
 Sarah Meggitt.

"Leaving will be so hard. Thanks for two great years Murray!"
 Emily Rohr.

"All the people are wonderful and I will miss all the people I met here."
 Regan Golden-McNerney.

"It will be hard leaving the atmosphere here at Murray."
 Donny Graph.

"Murray has been wonderful, I will miss everything, I will miss the teachers!"
 Amy Lampman.

"There are many junior highs, but I think Murray is at the top of the list."
 Christina Heringlake.

"Murray is an unforgettable experience. Bye everyone! I'll miss you!"
 Mekea Kaplan.

It has been a great experience writing for the Bugle. I had a lot of fun, bye!
 Carin McIntosh

House Tour from 1

If you're interested in remodeling, you'll be inspired by the Weig's home on Buford, which was transformed from a small old house into a beautiful contemporary home. Or the home of Bob and Bobbi Megard on Hythe St., which nearly doubled in size thanks to a recently completed two-story addition.

The Old Muskego Church at Luther Northwestern Theological Seminary also is on the tour. It is a wonderful example of original architecture and old-world log construction.

The church also served as inspiration for local artist Susan Broussard, who was commissioned to create a limited-edition commemorative poster for the tour. Susan used a woodcut image of the Old Muskego Church and superimposed a photograph of pine trees over it. The entire picture was then printed in bronze ink on a heavy black paper. Look in the window at Carter Avenue Frame Shop and other merchants to see the poster. Price of the poster is $6. Besides Carter Avenue Frame Shop, they are available at The Bibelot Shop, Micawbers and at the library lawn on June 7.

The Tour of Homes is a benefit for the St. Anthony Park Community Council and Park Association. Ticket purchases are tax deductible. The tour was organized by a group of volunteers who spent countless hours recruiting homeowners, organizing other volunteers and preparing for the tour.

Speaking Briefly

Parks & Rec Commission members sought

Ramsey County is seeking applicants for four positions on the Ramsey County Parks and Recreation Commission. Three of these positions are for a three-year period; the fourth is for a two-year period. Applicants must be residents of Ramsey County.

The commission members act in an advisory capacity to the Board of Commissioners in policy matters pertaining to parks, open space, trails and recreation areas. They also assist in the preparation of long-range system plans and master plans for these areas.

Get applications from Bobbie Schleper, 266-8001. They are due by June 8.

Yard waste sites open

Ramsey County's yard waste sites, open free of charge to county residents, will change to summer hours beginning June 1. The new hours will be: Mon., Wed. & Fri., noon-8 p.m.; Sat., 9 a.m.-5 p.m.; Sun., 11 a.m.-5 p.m. Sites will be closed July 4 and Sept. 7.

The yard waste site closest to most Bugle readers is on Pierce Butler Rd. near Fairview Ave. in St. Paul. Call 633-1204 for a recorded message of site locations; call 633-EASY for other information.

Leaves, grass clippings and other soft-bodied plants are considered yard waste materials and cannot be mixed with other trash. They must be bagged separately for trash pickup or taken to a yard waste site.

Collins running for state senate

Tom Collins, a St. Paul police officer and lifelong resident of the Como area, is running in the DFL primary for the seat in

Tom Collins

Senate District 66. That district, created in 1991 redistricting, will have no incumbent, since Sen. Gene Waldorf has announced his retirement.

Collins serves as "Officer Friendly" in the St. Paul School System. Since becoming a police officer in 1977, Collins has served many St. Paul neighborhoods, including Midway, Como and North End.

School News

St. Anthony Park Elementary

As the weather heats up so does the excitement of the students in anticipation of summer vacation and of the close of another academic year. It's hard to believe how fast the year has gone by! All classes are busy planning year-end parties and the teachers are working hard to complete the necessary paperwork so that report cards can be distributed on Thurs., June 4.

The 6th graders are anticipating the "Sixth Grade Super Sub Supper" on the evening of Wed., June 3. This is a party for the graduating 6th graders and their families to recognize and celebrate their completion of their elementary education. The evening will also be an opportunity for the 6th graders to honor Dr. Hope Lea for her contribution to our school during the four years she has served as principal. Dr. Lea will be retiring from the St. Paul School System at the end of the year. Both she and her husband will be retiring so they plan to enjoy their new time together pursuing other interests.

It is with mixed feelings that I see this year come to a close. As a 6th grader, I will soon be entering a new phase of my school years. I will miss St. Anthony Park Elementary and many of my friends who are going on to different schools. I have learned so much and grown in so many ways and now it will be exciting, yet a bit scary, to move on.

Holy Childhood

Our annual spring concert was May 19 at Lyngblomsten Chapel.

The 6th, 7th and 8th graders attended the St. Paul Patrol Picnic on May 19. We thank the junior high for the endless hours of work they put in to keep our children safe.

Congratulations to Chelsie Foster of the 8th grade for her beautiful Peace Poster. Chelsie won $25 for third place. The theme of the posters was to make children aware that worldly peace is possible and should be part of their lives.

A bike rodeo safety course will be held at Holy Childhood School on Sat., May 30, noon-4 p.m. Anyone is welcome, especially volunteers, to supervise stations. Helmets are required and may be purchased at the rodeo.

This year the 6th grade went to the Festival of Nations at the Civic Center. They saw foreign dancers, different foods, arts and crafts. They spent all of May 1 at the Civic Center and all said they had a great time!

Every year on the last day of school the students go over to Como Park for a day of picnicking, fun and games. The lower grades break open a piñata and the upper grades play kickball and softball games. This year the picnic will be on June 3.

The Fable of the Gentleman Cat: Keeping our neighborhood fit for the fur person

May Sarton's The Fur Person was a Cat About Town until he decided it was time to settle down: find a house in just the right neighborhood. He had "dreams of an open fire and himself with his paws tucked in sitting in front of it..." Like many of us who live in the Park, he had "aimless wanderings and painful encounters (some) with fat sleek cats sitting on porches..." before he found the perfect place in which to settle.

In his quest—without an understanding real estate agent to guide him—he found himself "on the border of a dangerous street—very dangerous, he realized after a short exposure to the roar of cars, the squeaking of brakes, the lurching, weaving, rumbling, interspersed with loud bangs and horns of a really incredible amount of traffic." Add speeding school buses, and one would think he had found himself on Raymond Avenue before the new stop signs were installed this year.

In another stop on his way to finding the perfect house, he found a promising one but ended up in "a terrible series of smells, the smell of a small stuffy apartment, of overheated radiators, of cheap perfume, of talcum powder, of yesterday's bacon." Add falling porches, accumulated garbage, open holes in the roof, and more than a foot of water in the basement, and one would think he had ended up in the Park's infamous "garbage house."

Finally, he found "providentially indeed... a house bounded on one side by a porch with a very suitable railing running along it and a little patch of sunlight which seemed to have been laid down there just for him... and a garden at the back..." excellent posts for claw-sharpening... flower beds in just the right condition for making holes." And so, the Cat About Town settled in and became a Gentleman Cat.

Of course the story doesn't end there. Like Park residents, he took pride in his house and wanted his neighbors to do the same but still live in peace. Taking editorial license with Sarton, we continue the story: Since he had decided that wisdom was to be preferred to power, he joined the Housing Committee of the St. Anthony Park Community Council.

Yes, we have had an almost-garbage house in beautiful St. Anthony Park. We had—and have—houses where peeling paint or other appearance or safety problems were unacceptable. Traffic concerns are ongoing in residential neighborhoods. And this is just the beginning of the long list of issues with which the Housing Committee deals each month. Keeping a close watch on crime statistics, and monthly "walk-arounds" of the entire neighborhood, including alleys, sometimes prevent small problems from escalating. Listening to neighborhood concerns about zoning, and investigating and passing on input directly to City Hall makes this committee viable and important to the well-being of the community. As a resident, you can use your wisdom in two ways: help keep the committee informed of your needs, observations, and wishes, and better yet, join the Gentleman Cat and the rest of us at 5 p.m. the fourth Wednesday of each month!

—Jan Meyer

Council-sponsored meetings are listed each month in the Bugle Community Calendar on page 21. Everyone is welcome!

Council Actions at a Glance: Pilot project to improve bus ridership initiated by council

In May the council:

- Initiated formation of a task force to work with MTC in a survey of businesses and residents to provide improved bus service and increased ridership in the West Midway and St. Anthony Park.
- Recommended to the Dept. of Planning and Economic Development that a small area plan be done in cooperation with Prospect Park to review the zoning and land use issues in the area of the proposed Westgate Station for LRT.
- Approved the site plan for the Luther Northwestern Seminary maintenance building addition.
