

Neighbors win first bid to restrict BN hub noise

By Mary Mergenthal

St. Anthony Park residents who wrote letters and attended the St. Paul City Planning Commission meeting on July 17 found out that it pays to make noise to stop noise. Their complaints about the proposed Burlington Northern (BN) hub were heard. The planning commission agreed to require a special use permit for BN intermodal hub operation. In addition, a 1,000 foot setback, landscaping to absorb sound, and use of arterial routes rather than residential streets for trucks will be required. There could be about 700 trucks per day driving to and from the piggyback yards.

The noise of the current BN railroad hub near Newell Park has been irritating neighbors there for years. Last year BN announced that it would move its hub to a site two miles west just over the Minneapolis city limits (west of Hwy. 280).

Residents on Hillside Ave., Hillside Court and Ludlow Ave. in North St. Anthony Park; on Hunt Place in South St. Anthony Park; and businesses in Westgate don't want the noise in their back yard either. They organized a letter-writing campaign to tell the planning commission their feelings. Commissioner Mark Vaught said, "I've had more correspondence on this issue than on any other since I've been on the commission."

Although 75 percent or more of the yard is in Minneapolis, no decision has been announced there yet about zoning restrictions.

Falcon Heights and Roseville consider sharing more services

By Roald Sateren

What do the Falcon Heights/Roseville merger discussions and a couple planning on getting married have in common? Although they are two very different situations, some of the feelings expressed by the people in both circumstances are similar:

- "We have different agendas. I'm afraid of getting swallowed up."
- "I can't imagine changing names—we want to preserve our identity."

Or conversely:

- "We have a lot of things in common."
- "With our combined tax base (income) we can be more creative."

For over two years Falcon Heights and Roseville have been courting each other, studying whether the two cities could work together, or perhaps merge, in order to provide better government for their residents.

To date, any final decision on the discussions remains distant. "We're still very much in the study/review process," said Steve Sarcozy, Roseville's city administrator. "This is a major issue and needs to be approached carefully."

A wholesale merger between the cities is becoming "less likely," according to Falcon Heights Mayor Tom Baldwin. Rather, the focus at this point is to look at proposals and models that "break new ground as to how you govern a city," he said.

Major considerations in any proposed arrangement are whether Falcon Heights and Roseville can be administered by some form of central government and still maintain high neighborhood involvement, continue to be responsive to citizens and preserve some autonomy between the cities.

In 1991, both cities hired the consulting firm Deloitte Touche (at a cost of $31,000) to analyze the financial and administrative impact of various types of cooperation. Deloitte Touche found that both cities could save money and provide better service through some consolidation of services. Falcon Heights could save $173,000 annually contracting municipal services through Roseville, and $340,120 annually by actually merging with Roseville.

Currently Falcon Heights is in sound financial condition according to Baldwin. But if the two cities were to merge, "Falcon Heights would become part of a tax base more diverse and stable," Baldwin said. Roseville, on the other hand, would gain stable and valuable residential property "without adding stress to its budget," he added.

Residents of both cities have expressed concern over the impact of a merger. Some Falcon Heights residents "like Falcon Heights' small town feel and are afraid of losing that identity," said Baldwin. "And there are Roseville residents who believe Roseville is fine the way it is, so why change success."

Lutheran Social Service groundbreaking

St. Anthony Park neighbors looked over the plan for the new LSS building to be located at Como and Hendon Avenues.

Lutheran Social Service (LSS) and Luther Northwestern Theological Seminary officials broke ground for the new LSS administrative headquarters building on the seminary campus on July 8. Diane Thormodsgard, chairperson of the finance committee of the LSS board of directors, said, "This will be an attractive building that should help us be good neighbors while doing good work."

Commenting on the location of the building, St. Paul Mayor James Scheibel said, "You've selected one of the finest, some would say the finest, neighborhoods in St. Paul. You'll be happy and welcome here."

Redistricting changes legislative boundaries

By Kathy Malchow

Legislative redistricting boundaries have been finalized for the state's primary and general elections, based on population information garnered from the 1990 census. Redistricting is done every ten years by the State Legislature.

Bugle area residents are now split into two separate districts. Residents of Lauderdale and Falcon Heights are in newly-numbered district 54, currently represented by Sen. John Marty and Rep. Mary Jo McGuire. Those two legislators will remain in that district. Marty, a DFLer, is running for reelection against IR challengers Bob Cardinal, Joanne Cushman, and Pat Igo.

Mary Jo McGuire (DFL) serves District 54A. Sheldon Christenson (IR) will run against her this fall.

St. Anthony Park and Como Park residents, however, who currently call John Marty their state senator, have been placed in new district 66. This means those two St. Paul neighborhoods will be electing someone else to represent them at the Legislature. Ellen Anderson, Tom Collins and Peter Stumpf (all DFL) have filed for the office, as has IR candidate Tara Tocko.

Alice Hausman (DFL) continues as house representative in District 66B. She is up for reelection this fall, running against John Krenik (IR).

This year all Ramsey County residents may choose to vote by mail in the Sept. 15 primary and Nov. 3 general elections. It is hoped that by making it easier and more convenient to vote, participation will increase.

In the past, voting by mail (absentee balloting) was permitted only for specific and limited reasons. This year, voters will not have to provide a reason—they only need to call or pick up an absentee ballot.

To request an application, call 266-2188, 24 hours a day, or for election and voter registration information call 266-2171 weekdays from 8 a.m.-4:30 p.m. Applications are also available at the Ramsey County Office of Elections, 50 Kellogg Blvd., Suite 722, and at Falcon Heights and Lauderdale City Halls.

Dexter gets royal treatment in Britain

By Michelle Christianson

"Whatever happened to my pilot, Al Dexter?"

Those words sent a chill down Dexter's spine. It had been over 40 years since he had seen 12-year-old David Hastings. Should he respond to the letter in the Armed Forces newspaper? When the letter appeared for a second time the next month, Dexter knew he had to reply.

Dexter first met Hastings in 1943 when he flew his B-24 bomber out of Hethel Airfield near Norwich, England. A crowd would always gather when he parked his plane near a country road, and although he was tired and hungry after the ten-hour flights, Dexter was always cheered to the people who cheered him as a hero. One day he lifted Hastings over the fence that separated the road from the airfield and brought him onto the base, and the two became fast friends.

"It got to be a tradition, almost a superstition, that I would lift David over the fence after each flight. We gave him ice cream and fried chicken, and he had his first Coca-Cola on the base. Of course, I was a scared 23-year-old, away from my family, and I appreciated his company as much as he appreciated mine," says Dexter.

The two lost track of each other after the war.

Hastings continued to be interested in planes, becoming an RAF (Royal Air Force) pilot and eventually chairman of the council governing the Norfolk district of England and the representative to and honorary member of the U.S. 2nd Air Force Division.

Dexter, meanwhile, went back to St. Anthony Park, where he raised three children, coached baseball and basketball, became cubmaster and scoutmaster (with Bob Nyland) and was generally known as a friend to children. He was the press box announcer for the North Stars for many years and longtime Park residents will remember how he ran the races and "narrated" the fireworks display on the Fourth of July.

Hastings and Dexter finally got together in 1989 for a three-day reunion arranged by friends. With planning under way this year to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the 8th Air Force, Hastings naturally mentioned Dexter to the sponsor of the event, Northwest Airlines. Northwest had arranged to bring one of only two remaining B-24s that still flew (the "Diamond Lil") to England for a tour.

Dexter had named his bomber the "Princess Pat" after his wife, and his commander had added the adjective "pugnacious" to the title. When Northwest heard the story of Dexter and his "Pugnacious Princess Pat," the airline offered to fly the couple to England and pay all their expenses. Pat and Al stayed eight days with the Hastings family in June of this year and took part in several air shows. Al, who had flown 35 missions over France to Germany, got to fly the "Diamond Lil" and Pat even got to go along.

Dexter was treated royally—he rode in limos, dined with dignitaries and was interviewed by television, radio and nine newspapers. There were even those who remembered him from 50 years ago who were happy to see him and thank him again for his contribution to the war effort.

Although there were some mechanical problems with the old plane, there were no problems with the young-at-heart Dexter. He had a wonderful time and has no regrets about answering that letter to the editor in the Armed Forces newspaper.

Corpus Christi Catholic Church procession approached the new church on Co. Rd. B and Fairview.

Corpus Christi community moves to new church in Roseville

By Ann Bulger

The Catholic community of Corpus Christi moved to its new home on June 21, the Feast of Corpus Christi. Although the new worship space was not quite completed, parishioners stayed with plans to move on their feast-day. Following the last Mass at the church on Cleveland and Buford at 8:30 a.m., the altar and lectern were moved to the new worship space on Fairview and County Road B in Roseville.

Parishioners met at the old church for a farewell ceremony, where Father Bob Nygaard, Corpus Christi pastor, presented the keys to the church and a bouquet of roses to Mr. Augustine Choe, chairman of the parish council at the Korean parish of St. Andrew Kim, new owners of the Cleveland Ave. church.

Singing hymns, parishioners proceeded east on Buford into the St. Paul Campus, north on Gortner through the plots, east on Larpenteur, north on Tatum, east on Ryan, and north on Fairview to the new site. Many walked, some rode bikes or rollerblades, others drove.

Thirty-two charter members of the parish were at the first Mass in the Cleveland Ave. church on Christmas Day, 1940. Those people were honored at a brunch following the first Mass at the new church.

After 33 years with a split personality, the parish has been reunited. After Corpus Christi School was built in 1959, one or two Masses were celebrated at the school each weekend, while three were at the church on Cleveland. The school is now leased to the Waldorf Schools, and all Corpus Christi's services will be at the new center, an 80-foot-square pyramid seating 500. It will be dedicated in the fall.

ParkBank to be sold

By Mary Mergenthal

Andrew Boss, CEO at St. Anthony Park State Bank, has entered into a purchase agreement to sell his controlling interest of the stock in the bank's holding company. The purchaser will be Bill Reiling of St. Paul, who also owns Franklin National Bank in Minneapolis. In addition, the Reiling family owns Towle Realty.

Boss will continue to manage this bank, holding a minority interest of the stock. The purchase is contingent on regulatory approval, which is expected by the end of the year.

"Bill is an old friend of mine and shares my philosophy about the importance of community banking. He's been active in the St. Paul business community for years and knows St. Anthony Park well," Boss said.

"My family has been involved in this bank for years. My grandfather was one of the founders and my father succeeded him."

Boss stressed that ParkBank customers will not experience any changes. He is pleased his family's banking philosophy will continue.

District 10 council opposes Lyngblomsten variance requests

By Linda Johnson

Como Park Community Council voted at its July 21 meeting to oppose the proposed parking and setback variances requested by Lyngblomsten Care Center.

Wallace Hauge, Lyngblomsten president, and David Wagner, architect, discussed the plans for a proposed new residence with 100-105 units. Replacing the old building, the proposed structure would have five stories above courtyard level and one additional story at the Pascal St. level.

Although some parking would be created under the new building, Lyngblomsten has requested two variances from the St. Paul City Council. One request is for a variance to allow the Pascal side of the building to have a 14-foot setback rather than the required 28-foot setback. The second request is for a less stringent parking requirement than the one space for every three units currently required.

Wagner claims these variances are necessary in order to preserve courtyard space for elderly residents. The new building would be built in three sections with the cornice line of the old building replicated but with brick matching the newer buildings. To enhance the building's appearance, the landscape architect plans a wall and plantings, creating a visual screen.

Many at the meeting expressed strong disapproval of the plans. Almond Street residents say the new building would only exacerbate existing severe parking problems. Concerns about visual impact were also expressed. Neighbors questioned the need for such a large complex and suggested a smaller building, a new site away from Como Park, or razing the old building to provide parking space for the current residential center.

Following is a letter from Garrison Keillor to Austin C. Wehrwein, 2309 Carter Ave., a member of the Library Association who had invited him to the "Andy's Day" celebration at the library on July 23. Keillor, the celebrated author and radio program host from "Lake Wobegon," shares our affection for the branch building, as he makes clear.

Dear Mr. Wehrwein,

It's good to hear about the St. Anthony Park library sailing on toward its 75th anniversary. My home town of Anoka had a beautiful old Carnegie library too, and I haunted it back in the Nineteen-Fifties, a little castle of books that the city fathers of Anoka, in their wisdom, tore down to rubble and replaced with a bank. Does this sound bitter? Well, it is, a little. The destruction of grand old buildings is a crime against the heart. Glib men in suits are accountable for a lot of vandalism in our society, which might have been avoided if they had spent more time in the library.

The loss of Anoka's old library made me treasure St. Anthony Park's all the more when I lived in the Park twenty years ago. It is a magnificent building that fills one with a sense of light and grace. You cross the grass and ascend the steps and pass through the little foyer with its community bulletin board and there, next to the librarians' counter, you contemplate a world of choice—to the right into the children's section, forward to periodicals, left to non-fiction, or hard left to fiction. Each section was small and well-tended, so that as you skimmed along the shelves, you spotted plenty of books that called out to you, made you want to pick them up, sit down, read. I spent hours this way, browsing, glancing through reference books, following a faint spore of information, sniffing through an appendix, like a young dog on the trail who is drawn to investigate every fallen leaf and fresh burrow. There is a passion for fact and rhetoric that has no immediate practical application, and the St. Anthony Park Library is a perfect place to pursue it, friendly, not too big, well-managed, and housed in that handsome, lofty, sun-lit building.

It is good to know that a library has dedicated friends who treasure it, defend it, and celebrate its anniversaries. Any library is a radical American institution, busy changing lives in the midst of silence, raising our sights, correcting our facts, enveloping us in passionate language, and the St. Anthony Park Library is fortunate to occupy a building that proclaims its high purpose so beautifully. I'll be sure to drop in this summer and make sure it is still there.

Very best wishes,
Garrison Keillor

St. Paul deals with budget cuts

By Jane McClure, Neighborhood News Service

Reduced hours at some city recreation centers, and fewer precincts for this fall's elections may be two of the most visible results of about $2.2 million in midyear budget cuts in the city of St. Paul.

But adults who enjoy using St. Paul recreation center gymnasiums during open gym times can relax and put away their wallets. Their pickup basketball and floor hockey games won't be used to subsidize the parks and recreation budget any longer. That's because a controversial open gym user fee, started in May on a trial basis, has been dropped.

Preparation of the 1993 St. Paul city budget has been competing for city staff time with amendments to the 1992 expenditures and revenues plan. Some of the 1992 changes have been implemented during the past few months; others are planned for later this year. Additional measures are being held in abeyance, until it is known if they are necessary. What will determine the need for further cuts in the 1992 budget is how police and fire department union contracts are settled, according to city budget director Pam Wheelock. As of late July, those two bargaining groups had yet to settle wage and benefit packages with the city.

If the contract settlements come in significantly higher than 1 percent, "we may have to make changes that result in layoffs," said Wheelock.

Wheelock points out that the loss of state aids could have been much worse, had state lawmakers adopted Gov. Arne Carlson's state budget plan.

Because the 1992 city budget contained no funds to cover this year's salary increases, other parts of the budget have had to be trimmed to make up the difference. Some settlements reached contain a 1 percent salary increase for 1992 and a second 1 percent hike in January of 1993. A 3 percent salary increase is then planned for July of 1993. The salary increases are just one factor affecting the city budget, according to Wheelock. As of June 1, the city is paying a 6.5 percent state sales tax on most purchases. The sales tax, adopted by the 1992 Minnesota State Legislature, is expected to have a $2.2 million impact on the city's coffers.

Budget changes have also been prompted by the city's move to fund a handful of new efforts this year. These include the FORCE (Focusing Our Resource on Community Empowerment) anti-drug program, which the city council approved in mid-July. FORCE, which will be funded for the remainder of 1992 with $219,383 in parking fine revenues and additional outside grant monies, will allow the police department to move officers out of communications center dispatching posts and back onto the streets.

But discussions at a recent city council finance committee meeting indicated that funding FORCE through parking fines would mean those funds cannot be used to balance the budget elsewhere. As of mid-month, ways to meet a $193,000 budget gap were still being sought.

The 1992 budget has also been strained by a $250,000 decline in anticipated interest earnings, a $400,000 cut in local government aids from the state, and a canceled rental property registration program that was expected to produce about $300,000 for the city.

However, Wheelock points out that the loss of state aids could have been much worse, had state lawmakers adopted Gov. Arne Carlson's state budget plan. At one point, St. Paul stood to lose as much as $10 million in state aid. Last spring, in response to Carlson's plan, Mayor Jim Scheibel called for all city departments and offices to prepare plans to cut their budgets. He asked for a 3 percent spending cut in May, and a 7 percent cut by year's end. Most departments and offices were able to make the requested reductions, said Wheelock. Fire and police were two exceptions, as making even a 3 percent cut would mean layoffs for both departments.

Recreation centers eyed for shortened hours include...South St. Anthony.

Another city department that was spared more extensive cuts was the library system. Last year library hours and some services were reduced. But further reductions could jeopardize the city's membership in the Metropolitan Library Service Agency (MELSA).

Throughout city government, the greatest budget impact thus far appears to be in the ranks of employees. Many offices and departments have either delayed hires, eliminated positions, changed job descriptions or cut out all overtime pay.

However, it is measures that directly affect neighborhood services that have drawn the most attention. One budget-balancing plan that has already been dropped is that of charging a $2 user fee for use of city recreation center gymnasiums. The user fee, to be charged to adults during "open gym" periods, went into effect in May.

The fee was tried for about five weeks and then evaluated. After the trial period the decision was made to drop the fee, said Vince Gillespie. He is manager of recreation programs for St. Paul Parks and Recreation.

Public comment, coupled with city council opposition to the open gym fee, were factors in the decision to drop the charge. No other fees are being considered at this time, Gillespie added.

When the open gym user fee was first discussed, some estimates indicated it would raise between $70,000 and $100,000 this year, said Ron Hoff, district supervisor for some city recreation centers.

Other parks department cost-cutting measures have included elimination of park ranger overtime, reduction or elimination of some ice rinks, and reductions in hours at some part-time recreation centers. Wheelock noted that the recreation center hour reductions won't take effect until after the busy summer season.

Recreation centers eyed for shortened hours include St. Clair, Desnoyer, Front, Newell Park, Highwood Hills, Griggs and South St. Anthony.

Sites where outdoor skating rinks may be eliminated or scaled down include ...Lake Como...

Sites where outdoor skating rinks may be eliminated or scaled down include Mattocks Park, Cretin-Derham Hall High School, Edgumbe Recreation Center, Lake Como, Webster Magnet School, Aldine, McMurray and Weide parks, and the Seventh Place Mall downtown.

Another more visible budget cut will be seen during this fall's elections. According to City Clerk Molly O'Rourke, the number of polling places will be dropped from 139 to less than 120. The reductions are being made in conjunction with the 1990 Census and subsequent redistricting. The reduced number of precincts means a savings of about $20,000 per election year.

Give credit where due

Dear editors,

I read with interest the article on page 16 of the July issue of the Park Bugle, "Professor studies use of lawn chemicals." I believe it was a well-written article and summarized the study that was conducted. However, you did not give any credit to the co-author, Jared R. Creason. As the paper was co-authored and the authors of the paper share in the ownership and responsibility of what has been printed (positive and/or negative) I believe that his name should have been mentioned even though he doesn't live in St. Anthony Park (you could have put it in parenthesis).

Sue Fortner says: "I'm known as the cat lady..."

By Amy Causton

Many people are familiar with the pitter-patter of little feet, but at Sue Fortner's home, the sound you hear is the pitter-patter of many little paws. For nearly a year and a half, she has used her home as a volunteer foster home for the Humane Society of Ramsey County. In that time, she has fostered over 50 cats and 12 dogs.

Fortner first got involved in the foster program in the wake of the Persian Gulf War. She volunteered to house a called-up servicemember's pet, but, she says, "the war was over before I could start." The Humane Society then asked her to foster female cats and their kittens since they did not have adequate facilities for them, and Fortner eagerly accepted.

When she takes in an animal, she has it spayed or neutered, feeds it, grooms it if necessary, and gives it a loving environment in anticipation of its adoption into a permanent home. Says Fortner, "Our mission is to save and place all animals."

Some animals are afraid of people, so she tries to prepare them to live with a family. Neighborhood children are frequent visitors to her home—"I'm known as the cat lady," she says—and she feels that the animals' exposure to children helps them get placed. Also, if she has an animal that she feels would be a good candidate for adoption, she mentions it to as many people as possible—"but I don't pressure them," she adds.

Like foster parents of children, Fortner gets attached to her charges and is sad to see them go. "Every foster [provider] cries when they have to give [the animals] up," she says. For animal fosterers it can be even more painful in that they must often return animals to the Humane Society to face uncertain futures.

Last year the Humane Society took in over 9,000 animals, and a little more than half of them never left—some because of illness and death, but most because they had to be put to sleep. Like many people who work with animals, Fortner is distressed by this needless tragedy: "If people would spay or neuter their pets, this wouldn't be a problem."

Still, she does her best to help the animals for the time she has them. "I give them the best possible life they can have while they're here," she says, "but I can't control what happens to them when they're no longer here." She says that this philosophy helps her deal with the pain of giving the animals up—that, and the fact that she usually has a new animal before long.

Fortner first came to St. Anthony Park 18 years ago when her grandmother, Park resident Eva Stowell, passed away. She bought her grandmother's house and has lived there ever since. She shares the house (and the animals) with her daughter Carey, a student at the University of Minnesota who hopes to enter Veterinary Medicine school next year.

The Fortners have four permanent pets, a dog and three cats, who don't seem to mind all the other animals traipsing in and out of their home. In fact, their dog

Bleepers has been known to allow visiting kittens to nestle in her fur.

About 40 people provide similar animal foster care, with 15-20 actively serving. This program has been in existence for about two and a half years.

When she's not busy overseeing this menagerie of animals, Fortner works in the Mechanical Engineering Department at the University. In addition to fostering, she helps out at the Humane Society by answering phones, cleaning cages, walking dogs and other odd jobs; her daughter also volunteers.

Fortner points out that contrary to popular belief, the Humane Society is not publicly funded—rather, it is almost completely funded by charitable contributions, fundraisers and the like. Therefore, volunteers are always welcome. Anyone wishing to volunteer can call the Humane Society, which is located in Como Park, at 645-7387.

In the meantime there are animals to be fostered, and Sue Fortner is happy to help. "It keeps me really busy," she says, "but you just love 'em all."

ST. ANTHONY PARK HOME

We were fortunate this year to have had an absolutely perfect 4th of July Parade day and to have the help of many volunteers. The residents had a wonderful day and would like to give a special thanks to those volunteers who so generously helped them at the parade.

Falcon Hts from 1

In June the Falcon Heights city council adopted a proposal recommending that the joint Roseville/Falcon Heights steering committee explore "alternate forms of 'single-city' government that would enhance the cities' tradition of strong neighborhoods, provide residents with more efficient use of their tax dollars and ensure the future quality of life now experienced by residents of the area."

The council recommended that the goal of the task force should be to "present several alternative forms of government that can be discussed, debated and reworked by the joint councils."

As of July 20, no date had been set for the steering committee to proceed with the proposal. Roseville is currently embarking on VISTA 2000—a "visioning process" that will lead to planning for the city's future. While merger discussions between the two cities are technically separate from VISTA 2000, it could "very well be part of what's discussed," said Roseville's assistant city manager Steve North.

There are few examples to turn to when it comes to merging two cities. "We're kind of pioneering here," said Falcon Heights councilmember Paul Ciernia. "Not a lot of other cities have done this before."

With the study of the financial impact of increased cooperation and merger complete, the two cities can now turn their attention to studying possible government forms and structures, according to Falcon Heights councilmember Susan Gehrz. "At this point, I still see us on the information gathering stage, not a decision making stage," Gehrz concluded.

JOIN YOUR NEIGHBORS NOW

Dear Neighbors and Friends,

On July 4th, we again celebrated the sense of community that makes St. Anthony Park such a special place to live. You can further that sense of community by being a member of the St. Anthony Park Association. It's as easy as completing the form below and sending your check today.

In the last twelve months, your 45-year-old St. Anthony Park Association has grown to over 300 members. We've shared nine excellent dinner programs, sponsored a memorable fundraising appearance by author Robert Bly, jointly sponsored the home tour and helped to fund thousands of dollars worth of community projects. As we enjoy Music in the Park, attend neighborhood safety meetings, receive Networker newsletters, participate in children's sports, celebrate our library or listen to the bands on the 4th of July, we are reminded of what helped to build our community.

With your membership in the St. Anthony Park Association, you help expand these community activities. As a member you also receive the community directory and notice of upcoming meetings.

Thank you for joining for the 1992-93 year.

Sincerely yours,
Mel Boynton, membership chairman

"CONVENTIONAL MORTGAGE INSURANCE: WHAT IS IT? WHAT ARE MY OPTIONS?"

Mortgage Insurance in simple terms is insurance coverage to protect a lender in the event of a foreclosure.

Conventional loans require insurance when the down payment is less than 20% of the purchase price or the appraised value, whichever is lower. This is unlike FHA loans which always require Mortgage Insurance, regardless of down payment.

Mortgage Insurance is often confused with credit life or credit disability insurance which protects you in the event of death or disability.

WHAT ARE MY OPTIONS?

- A. ANNUAL PREMIUM WITH MONTHLY ESCROW PAYMENT: The entire first year premium expense is collected at the closing. An escrow account is then set up to pay future years' premiums and a fee is collected as part of the borrowers' monthly payment.
- B. FINANCING THE FIRST YEAR PREMIUM: If your down payment is at least 10%* you now have the option to finance your first year premium by adding it to your mortgage amount. An escrow account is then set up to pay future years' premiums.

C. FINANCING THE ENTIRE PREMIUM: If your down payment is at least 10%* you also have the option to finance all of your Mortgage Insurance. This one-time premium is then added to your mortgage amount and your monthly costs are now in the form of principal and interest payments vs. an escrow account. This not only will provide lower cash requirements at closing but will also provide maximum tax benefits due to increased monthly interest payments. Also, this option is less expensive on a monthly basis. If the mortgage is paid off early a prorated portion of the premium will be refunded to the homeowner.

Investment news from your neighborhood

Plan today for a financially sound future

Having a personal investment plan with the flexibility to adapt to your life changes is one key to long-term financial security. There are low risk to aggressive investment options suitable for nearly everyone, regardless of age or income, according to Dave Kasper, sales manager of Norwest Investment Services.*

"Bank savings accounts or CDs are basic ways for you to begin setting aside dollars for the future," says Kasper. "There is no risk, and your money is accessible. As a result, the return is not as great as with other investments."

As your financial strength grows, the range of investment options also expands. Norwest Investment Services offers a variety of cost-effective investments. "Many clients tell us they appreciate our low pressure environment," says Kasper. "And it saves time and money when all of their financial needs can be managed under one roof."

The right fit

Take a look at your personal financial picture before consulting the experts. What is your profile?

• Young professional. "Fight the temptation to spend everything you earn," says Kasper. "Consider a growth-oriented mutual fund. By arranging to have a few dollars automatically deducted from your savings or checking account each month, you can painlessly force yourself into an investment savings plan for a home, family or retirement."

• Family-oriented. "If you want to set up educational accounts for your children, consider U.S. government treasury zero coupon bonds," advises Kasper. "They're safe, backed by the government, and have some tax benefits."

Dave Kasper, sales manager,
Norwest Investment Services, Inc.

• Empty nester. "Most want to accumulate money for retirement through conservative investments that offer tax benefits," says Kasper. "Look at individual tax-free bonds, or stock and bond mutual funds."

• Retiree. Need a regular monthly payment? "Government bond funds like Fannie Mae, Ginnie Mae or high-quality individual bonds backed by corporations are smart choices," Kasper says.

While some generalizations can be made, it's always best to know specifics. "Once we know about you, we can personalize a financial plan to meet your individual needs," says Kasper. "You must also keep in mind that investment products other than CDs and bank savings accounts are not FDIC-insured."

To start planning for a financially secure future, call your neighborhood Norwest Investment Services representative today.

ST. ANTHONY PARK COMMUNITY COUNCIL

On skateboards, missiles, roots & wings

My friend Greg and his wife had a baby a couple of years ago who has, according to his parents, "grown into a monster." He's so much of a problem, according to Greg, that his evidently-permanent nickname is Scud: he's randomly destructive. He periodically escapes being kicked out of day care because his "parents are so nice, and who else will have him?" The problem: his parents don't see this as a problem; they think it's kind of cute.

Unfortunately this is not an uncommon theme. Other friends and relatives report similar phenomena: they "childproof" their houses, remove all temptations, and then wonder why the kids scream at the supermarket when they can't have everything in sight.

My favorite congratulatory card for new parents over the years has been one from The Bibelot which wisely says something like "The only lasting legacy we can give our children is roots and wings." The roots are the deep values which guide future behavioral decisions, and the wings are the self-confidence to try new things. Unfortunately contemporary child-rearing methods seem to have lost the balance: too many—admittedly not all—of our youth today appear all wings and no, or very shallow, roots. This means no self-discipline, in fact little discipline of any kind, and certainly neither a sense of duty nor responsibility to a greater community. We seem to have moved from a "me, too," generation, through the "me" generation to a "gimme" and "me only" generation.

What does this look like in the Park? It's the little kids pulling flowers out of boulevard gardens (looking for roots??). It means being narrowly missed by irresponsible skateboarders when coming out of ParkBank. It's all the rear windows broken out of cars parked on Doswell on weekend nights. It's the kids who broke the window at Omega Travel and set fire to the trash barrels on Como Avenue. It's the increasing vandalism at Park Crossing. It's those people who use Langford Park as a public toilet. The list goes on.

Are they our kids? Yes, they are!

Joe Soucheray in his St. Paul Pioneer Press column recently criticized the City Council's "Kids, Guns, and Drugs Don't Mix" program. He rightfully said that it shouldn't take the City Council to point out something so obvious: it's what any responsible parent knows and should communicate to their kids.

It is tied to the culture of victimization we are becoming: everyone is demanding rights but de-linking those rights from responsibility. And what does that look like in the Park? It's the demand to keep kids off the gas regulators in Langford by making NSP put up barricades: it's their job. It's the demand that "someone" build fences to keep kids off the railroad tracks.

It seems more and more of our community's programs and resources are directed towards providing limitations to keep people from doing what any responsible parent should have taught their kids not to do, or to do, without argument. It raises the question: what is the trend towards responsible parenting in the Park? How does this affect community safety, security, services and the quality of life? It's an issue that needs discussion, and hopefully a trend that can be reversed.

Council-sponsored meetings are listed each month in the Bugle Community Calendar on page 13. Everyone is welcome!

Neighborhood garage sale coming

A neighborhood garage sale is being planned for Sat., Sept. 12. The sale was suggested by Nancy Longley at a block club meeting. The community council will provide publicity in the Bugle and Pioneer Press, sign up participants, provide a yard sign and compile a list of addresses to be distributed in the neighborhood and at the starting site. An "after the sale" picnic will be hosted by the council for neighbors who join in this fun and worthwhile event.

Participants will host their own sale, register with the council as a participant, be open from 9 a.m.-5 p.m., and donate 10% of their earnings (tax deductible) to the council.

Sept. 5 is the last day to put your address on the list. Please join us in this organized community effort to "clean out those garages" and then recycle in our "swap" area at the Neighborhood Clean Up on Sat., Sept. 19. For further information, call the council office at 292-7884.
