St. Anthony Park traffic issues discussed

By Winton Pitcoff

On Sept. 9 the St. Anthony Park Community Council held a town meeting on traffic issues in North St. Anthony Park. St. Paul City traffic engineer Don Sobania presented four proposals to the community council members and other residents. The proposals, from the ad hoc traffic planning committee, were later voted on by the council.

The committee had focused its attention in the last few months on the area south and west of Como Avenue, bordered on the west by Eustis St., and on the south by Energy Park Drive. Michael Russelle, chairperson of the committee, said that work on the proposals actually began about a year and a half ago. Russelle said the city's input into the task force's work was "very helpful."

Sobania explained that when residents requested a stop sign at the corner of Valentine Ave. and Brompton St., the traffic department looked at the whole area and developed a "basket-weave" pattern of stop signs for virtually every corner. The proposal presented at the meeting included the installation of 13 new stop signs.

"This type of sign pattern has reduced accidents in the past," said Sobania. He added that the new signs will slow traffic down and make it less inviting to non-residents who use the neighborhood streets to cut through to Raymond

Ave. Sobania said one drawback to adding stop signs is that snow gets packed down at intersections more quickly, creating slick spots.

At the council meeting following the town meeting the proposal was passed. Sobania said the signs will most likely be installed by the end of September.

The council also approved a plan for a "traffic circle" to be installed at the intersection of Commonwealth Ave., Gordon Pl., and Gordon Ave. Sobania said the a temporary circle would be installed first, and residents will be asked after a few months if they want it removed or want a permanent one installed.

The temporary circle will be about 40 feet in diameter and will be made of asphalt. It will be as high as a regular curb, and residents will be able to decide what types of plants they want to grow in it, as long as they still maintain good sight lines for drivers.

Sobania said the traffic circle will be the first of its kind in St. Paul, and added that he is "very excited about trying it." He said that the circles are widely used in Seattle, and have been very effective in reducing accidents. He said the temporary circle will most likely be installed in the spring of 1993, and if residents like it a permanent one could be built as early as the spring of 1994.

Two other proposals from the committee were tabled by

Midtown Arts Open, September 27

The second annual Midtown Arts Open, a free open house and open studio event celebrating the abundance of arts and culture in the Midtown area of St. Paul near the intersection of Raymond and University Aves., is happening Sun., Sept. 27, from noon-4 p.m. Maps with a list of participants will be available at Susan's Coffeehouse and Deli, a new neighborhood business at 2399 University Ave., which is serving as starting point for the event. Visitors will roam at their own pace through artists' studios and stop in at arts and culture organizations, many holding special programs for the day. For more information call the Northern Clay Center, 642-1735.

Individual artists participating include those working in photography, painting, weaving, pottery, jewelry, print-making, sculpture and other media. Music has been added to this year's event.

Among the variety of arts and culture-related organizations expected to participate are Alliance Française, Artpaper, Bookslinger, the Center for Arts Criticism, the Center for Creative Process, Cloth & Clay, Film in the Cities, Graywolf Press, Minnesota Women's Press, Northern Clay Center, Raymond Avenue Gallery, the Women's Art Registry of Minnesota (WARM), Weavers Guild and—new this year—FORECAST Public Artworks, as well as others.

The Midtown Arts Open is organized by the Midtown Planning Group, made up of neighborhood representatives.

Christening a new stoplight at Como and Eustis

A strong cold wind and a sprinkle of raindrops didn't ruin the dedication of the stoplight at Como and Eustis in St. Anthony Park on Sept. 10. About 50 neighborhood residents, businesspeople and officials watched as Bobbi Megard, St. Anthony Park community organizer; Paula Maccabee, city council member; Linda Ragland, Group Health clinic manager; and Len Levine, MN DOT commissioner, broke the confetti-filled "bottle" to herald the long-awaited semaphore. Ragland said Group Health employees had requested a traffic light at the intersection since 1977—"at least." Megard indicated the project had been on the community council's Capital Improvement Budget wish-list for six years. Levine congratulated residents, businesspeople and the city of St. Paul for their cooperative efforts in obtaining the stoplight, while Rep. Alice Hausman said the celebration that day was "not so much for the light as for the tenacity of people to solve a problem."

Ramsey County Board candidates speak on Lauderdale issues

By Corinna Nelson

On November 3, Lauderdale residents will have their chance to vote for one of two candidates for Ramsey County Commissioner. The county commissioners, seven total, set policies and budget for Ramsey County in such areas as libraries, hospitals, roads, police, courts and regional transportation. They are guided by federal and state mandates concerning funding allocation for some programs, and by their own discretion in other areas.

Salary for each commissioner is $40,996; the board chairperson receives $42,196. Each commissioner receives a per diem payment of $50 per meeting for time spent representing the board at meetings of other organizations. Under the Ramsey County charter, to go into effect Nov. 6, 1992, per diem payments will be paid to the county directly; the county will then pass them on in regular paychecks to the commissioners, allowing for clearer accounting.

The commissioner position is technically classed as part-time. Commissioners receive agenda packages on Fridays, and serve on committees pertaining to board business. They are not prohibited from having employment outside the board during their term.

In fiscal year 1992, the commissioners passed a final budget of $333 million, 44% coming from property taxes, 32% from intergovernmental revenue and the remainder from fees, fines, charges for services, sales taxes, interest income, child support payments and other recovery of human service income, solid waste handling fees and the balance of income left over from prior fiscal years.

Public hearings are held concerning the budget. The county board meets each Tuesday at 2 p.m. Meetings are open to the public unless otherwise stated.

On the November ballot for Ramsey County Commissioner:

Don Salverda

Salverda, the incumbent, is chairman of the Policy and Planning Innovations Committee and serves on the Human Services Committee. He believes the issues facing Lauderdale include a need to examine whether it wants to merge and/or cooperate with other cities in providing services and maintenance, or be independent. He discussed Lauderdale's small size in relation to consolidating city services.

His goals for board action include improvement of management and efficiency of county affairs—he states that Ramsey County's recent adoption of a charter will make the county more accountable; prevention of problems through programs such as the violence prevention initiative; keeping taxes reasonable, especially for senior citizens; making the county responsive to changing times and needs; and participative government—he cited his Friday morning town meetings at Professor's restaurant as an example.

Brenda Thomas

Thomas believes issues facing Lauderdale include decisions about funding—whether to increase the tax base, contract out government functions as it did with police service, or to merge with a larger city. She states that suburban communities must participate in solving problems facing inner city areas, but should not have courses of Candidates were asked to respond to questions posed by the Bugle editorial staff. Their responses are printed here.

Senate District 54

(includes Falcon Heights and Lauderdale)

Pat Igo

How can neighborhoods balance business and residential needs/interests?

Return small businesses to our neighborhoods (butcher, baker, candlestick maker). Small business needs tax breaks and less regulations. Commercial/industrial real estate taxes are too high.

What do you see as environmental issues affecting our district and what would you do to resolve them?

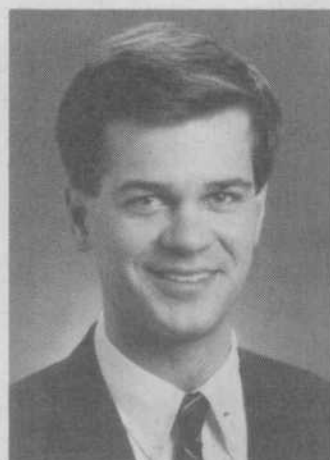

Transportation, electric transits, buses, etc.

What are your top three priorities for legislative action?

1. Promote a healthy job growth for metro area/small business.
2. Limited terms. Return to "citizen legislature."
3. Stop spending money the state doesn't have. Balance the budget.

Pat Igo was educated in St. Paul Schools and at the University of Minnesota. He has sold real estate in St. Paul and the northern suburbs for the past 18 years. Before that he operated a small business in Roseville and served six years in the U.S.A.R. at Fort Snelling. He is an IR candidate and lives in Roseville.

John Marty

How can neighborhoods balance business and residential needs/interests?

When there are conflicts between business and residential interests in a community, they are best resolved on a case-by-case basis, with an open discussion of the concerns between all of the parties. Neighborhood or community groups are best able to bring the parties together and mediate an acceptable response. It is difficult for government to resolve such conflicts, though such involvement may be needed if one of the parties refuses to cooperate.

What do you see as environmental issues affecting our district and what would you do to resolve them?

Among the most serious local environmental problems are noise pollution and traffic congestion. I have worked with local community groups on a number of noise pollution problems and have been working to get the Pollution Control Agency to adopt better noise standards to address noise pollution problems. Bigger expressways will never adequately address growing traffic congestion and the resulting environmental problems. We must aggressively work to get more people out of their cars. Greater reliance on mass transit, car pooling and biking will improve our environment and reduce congestion. I am working on a proposal for the state to greatly step up efforts to improve our transit system so that we attract several times the current ridership.

What are your top three priorities for legislative action?

It is difficult to limit top priorities to three, when there are so many pressing problems facing our state. Education, from early childhood to grade school, is certainly a priority. Minnesota has done comparatively well in education, and our economy has outperformed the rest of the region as a result. Nevertheless, we must continue to improve in order to keep Minnesota competitive in our world economy. Creation and retention of good, well-paying jobs is another priority. I am pushing legislation to help small businesses create jobs for people on welfare and the unemployed. Jobs reduce poverty and the problems that result from it, as well as reducing government welfare and unemployment costs. Environmental protection is another priority. I have been working for a state energy policy, stronger recycling and waste reduction initiatives and on air and water quality legislation.

John Marty was elected to the Minnesota Senate in Nov., 1986. He is chairman of the Criminal Law Division of the Judiciary Committee and also serves on the Environment, Energy, Elections and Ethics, and Tax Committees. Senator Marty has DFL endorsement. His background includes experience as a foundation grant administrator and as a research analyst. He lives in Roseville.

Sheldon Christenson

How can neighborhoods balance business and residential needs/interests?

Neighborhoods can balance business and residential needs/interests by using the community resources available in the Chamber of Commerce, community organizations and city council. Communication of needs and interests is the first step towards finding a balance that benefits both residents and business. Problems occur when conflicts come to the front and communication lines fail.

What do you see as environmental issues affecting our district and what would you do to resolve them?

Environmental issues affecting our district include drinking water quality, garbage and refuse control and recreational use of our local lakes. As a professional in the environmental health field, I have had the opportunity to look at these and other issues and feel the greatest public good would come from a more intensified public awareness program of the existing laws regulating these areas. Drinking water quality has become a high visibility issue and is being effectively addressed by those government agencies involved with our municipal systems. Proper garbage handling and recycling around the home is the best available method to deal with the immediate problems garbage creates in the metro area. There are enough regulations governing boat usage and water safety. Lake users need to be made aware that they are going to be held responsible for following these laws.

What are your top three priorities for legislative action?

My top three priorities for legislative action are responsible management of the state budget, maintaining a hold on rising taxes and government fees, and providing for government programs that actually work for Minnesotans. A step in that direction was made with the Healthright bill last session, but there are a lot of bugs to be worked out. We do not want to drive out small practice health care professionals. Minnesota takes on nearly every federal program that is offered because we get "free money" along with them. That makes us a part of the federal budget problem. Just because a program is right and necessary in Mississippi does not mean it is right and necessary in Minnesota.

Sheldon O. Christenson lives in St. Anthony Village and has worked in public health sanitation for the Environmental Health Division of the Minnesota Department of Health. He is a graduate of Mankato State University. He has IR endorsement.

Mary Jo McGuire

How can neighborhoods balance business and residential needs/interests?

Neighborhoods can balance business and residential needs and interests by bringing neighborhood business leaders and citizens together in focus groups to discuss areas of interest and conflict. Allowing people to be involved in the process and come up with the solutions jointly will make the results more long-lasting, and both business and residents will benefit.

What do you see as environmental issues affecting our district and what would you do to resolve them.

The environmental issues affecting our district include the management of solid and toxic waste and the preservation and protection of our land, air and water resources. We must encourage the use of reusable items and discourage the use of "throwaways." We must provide increased incentives for research into and development of markets for the use of recyclable items. Alternatives to toxic chemical use must be found and appropriate penalties should be enforced to discourage their use. Pesticides and lawn care chemicals must be regulated to preserve our ground water. Developing alternative energy sources must be a priority and alternatives to single-occupant vehicles should be supported to ease congestion and air pollution.

What are your top three priorities for legislative action?

In addition to my continued emphasis on environmental issues, my priorities for legislative action include balancing the budget, education and crime prevention. We must develop a progressive and fair tax structure that is based on one's ability to pay. We should look at how government operates and be willing to change the system so that efficiency and independence are encouraged. Government cannot be all things to all people—it must provide the means to help people provide for themselves. Providing child care, health care, education, job training and jobs must be at the cornerstone of our efforts.

A strong educational system that provides opportunities for learning and growth at all age and ability levels is crucial to our nations' survival in a global economy. We must instill in our young children the self-esteem, desire and ability to learn—so that they feel that their lives have a purpose and believe that their goals can be achieved. Developing and maintaining healthy, safe and chemical-free neighborhoods will be crucial in our efforts to prevent crime and will help break the cycle of violence.

Rep. McGuire is a graduate of Alexander Ramsey High School in Roseville, the College of St. Catherine and Hamline University School of Law. She was elected to the House in 1988. She is a member of the Judiciary Committee, Criminal Justice Division and co-chairs the sub-committee on family violence. She is also a member of the Appropriations Committee, Environmental Division.

Editorial

Thank you, Mary; welcome, Winton

For eight years, the Bugle has been fortunate to have Mary Mergenthal as editor, writer and leader. She is that rare combination of talent: an "idea" person as well as someone who pays attention to detail and gets things done.

She believes it is important for community members to participate in the production of their community newspaper, and one of her most significant accomplishments in her efforts with the Bugle has been her ability to get people of all ages involved.

For example, it was Mary who initiated the "School News" section of the paper. She wanted young people to have the chance to learn organizational skills necessary for newspaper work—including contacting sources (their teachers and other students), writing reports and meeting deadlines.

It was because of her encouragement that community members, myself included, realized they could submit news or write stories for the Bugle.

Last year, it was Mary who wanted to start the "Bugle Neighborhoods" section of the paper. She believed that by more clearly defining our circulation areas, readers would more quickly find the news they wanted to read. She was right. We have received many positive comments about "Bugle Neighborhoods."

As new editor Winton Pitcoff takes over, we will welcome his ideas for continuing the Bugle's commitment to serve our communities. Winton is only the seventh editor the Bugle has hired in its nineteen years. We wish him well, and hope residents of St. Anthony Park, Falcon Heights, Lauderdale and Como Park will turn out to meet him and greet Mary at St. Anthony Park Library on Sun., Oct. 4, 3-5 p.m.

Thank you, Mary

Dear editor,

As the "passing of the pen" is about to occur, the Bugle bids farewell to a loyal and dedicated community newspaper editor. Mary Mergenthal has served our communities in immeasurable ways during her tenure as Bugle editor. Her abilities to network with a full spectrum of community members for all of the neighborhood news are truly unique. Her efforts were often innovative—like the School News section where kids report on school issues from their perspective.

I personally gained a broader base of writing skills and a heightened awareness of community issues from my experiences working as assistant editor under Mary. She served as a role model by being bold enough to take risks in covering stories and expounding on neighborhood issues in editorials. At the same time she provided the necessary balance to these issues. Rarely was only one voice heard.

The Bugle won many Neighborhood Press Association awards and expanded its outreach to a broader community during Mary's watch. Mary, your presence and leadership will be missed. Thank you.

Believe in the Job Corps

Dear editor,

Your newspaper has printed an article recently on the Job Corps that did not give a fair picture of the Center. It was obvious by the slant of the article that it was written to encourage opposition to the Center.

The Job Corps Center trains youth for whom the Twin Cities community has failed to provide. The Center makes a way for youth who might not have any other way to make something out of their lives. The staff are capable people who do much with fewer resources than public schools. They should be commended. The staff care a great deal for students who the community might not even acknowledge as persons.

So much energy has been spent on preventing the Center and then watching the Center in hopes that it would fail. If the people who put so much negative energy toward the Center actively supported the Center, it would do great things for the community for which Job Corps is a part.

Become a friend to the students and staff at the Job Corps Center. Please, take the step to make a positive change for all of us.

Tribute to Marian DeWitt, neighborhood activist

By Roberta Megard
St. Anthony Park
Community Organizer

It was with a great sense of loss that I learned on returning from vacation of the death of Marian DeWitt, long-time Prospect Park resident. Many in St. Anthony Park were unaware of her efforts to protect her neighborhoods, neighbors and people in need through her "mission to serve." Those of us who live and work in South St. Anthony Park and members of St. Cecilia's parish are very aware of her involvement.

I first learned that Marian was a force to be reckoned with when the community council took its stand on the adult entertainment ordinance four years ago. She helped gather the signatures for petitions taken to city hall opposing the initial draft of the ordinance, which in the end helped forge a compromise that resulted in the ordinance we have today.

When she learned that the rock-crushing plant was ready to relocate in her neighborhood from Energy Park Drive, she worked to gather Minneapolis city council support for an environmental impact statement, which has recently been undertaken after a lengthy court battle.

The last time I saw her was at a St. Paul Planning Commission meeting in July to support our neighborhood effort supporting adoption of the recommendations of a 40-acre study limiting the impact of the proposed Burlington Northern hub facility west of Highway 280. She brought her friends and was busily gathering signatures on petitions to be used if needed—her goal was 5,000. I'm sure that, if she had lived, she would have walked into my office with every one of them!

Like our own late Elizabeth Clark, Marian DeWitt identified a problem and "organized" to solve it. She knew how to act and that is the most important lesson we as citizens have to learn. There is a way to solve problems—with involvement, tenacity, perseverance, and a deep belief that one person can make a difference. Marian DeWitt knew instinctively that a caring community is built by involved, caring people.

We owe her much and we will miss her.

New Korean church serves wide community

By Kristin Copa

The transition of Corpus Christi Catholic Church to the Korean Catholic Church of St. Andrew Kim is now complete and the Korean Catholic community is able to stretch its arms a little.

Before Corpus Christi parish's move to Roseville, the Korean parishioners were limited in the number of programs they could offer and when they could schedule Mass.

"We're very proud to have bought the church," Sara Graff, a church member, said.

The church's namesake, St. Andrew Kim, was the first Catholic priest in Korea. Father Kim, this church's pastor, came from Korea two years ago and has lived in the St. Anthony Park community since his arrival.

The parish community has blossomed with a variety of activities and programs. Masses offered several times a week in Korean and English and a parish of 300 members, Graff said.

The church is one of about eight Korean churches in the Twin Cities, she said, but the only Catholic church. St. Anthony Park is the ideal location for the parish, because half of its members are area students.

Other members come from throughout the Twin Cities and some from out-of-town—on occasion from as far away as Brainerd. Most of the members are first- and second-generation Koreans, and it is for this reason and for the members' children and American spouses that Masses are said in both Korean and English.

"There are lots of Americans there," Graff said, "and our door is open."

the council. Plans to square off the intersection at Knapp St. and Langford Parkway, and to make the stretch of the parkway on the southwest side of the park a one-way will be discussed by the St. Anthony Park School parking lot task force. Both proposals deal with traffic in the area of the school, and the council agreed that making traffic changes in the area where the task force is still planning changes would be counter-productive.

Sobania said he is pleased with the decisions made by the council. He said that his department is making an effort to work with communities on traffic issues as much as possible. "District 12 is a good council to work with. I enjoy it," said Sobania.

Ellen Anderson

How can neighborhoods balance business and residential needs/interests?

For our city neighborhoods to thrive, small local businesses need to flourish. Instead of the Northwest Airlines deal, we should invest in locally-owned, small businesses which create more jobs, have a stake in the community and agree to repay the investment to the neighborhoods in jobs and economic benefits. With businesses that pose environmental hazards, we should assist communities so they can discover sources of toxins, monitor local industries, and work with them to minimize pollution.

What do you see as environmental issues affecting our district and what would you do to resolve them?

First, community right-to-know legislation, to prevent the dumping of toxins, as in Westgate, and tough enforcement and clean-up standards that hold industry accountable. Second, improved mass transit to alleviate traffic, congestion and air pollution. Third, solid waste reduction with incentives for conservation, expanded recycling options and markets, and elimination of wasteful packaging. Finally, energy efficiency improvements to cut energy costs.

What are your top three priorities for legislative action?

First, a children's agenda: strong public schools with smaller class sizes, health care, nutrition, full funding of Head Start, early childhood/family education, community service and job opportunities for youth, and violence prevention programs.

Second, an economic agenda: fairer taxes based less on property taxes and more on ability to pay and a plan for economic growth.

Third, a sustainable energy policy: invest in technologies of the future such as renewable energy, energy efficiency, environmental protection and mass transit to eliminate our dependence on imported fossil fuels, create jobs and boost Minnesota's competitiveness.

Gary Carlson

How can neighborhoods balance business and residential needs/interests?

There will always be some friction between businesses and their neighbors. Businesses bring goods, services and jobs into neighborhoods but they often bring noise and congestion. Ordinarily the people closest to a problem are the best people to resolve it. Our local district and city councils are close and they are well-equipped to resolve most problems through reasonable zoning, traffic and land use ordinances. The state should assist cities when they lack the power to resolve a problem or when problems, such as the BN RR hub and air flight paths, are simply shuffled between neighborhoods.

What do you see as environmental issues affecting our district and what would you do to resolve them?

Our district is littered with polluted sites and the MnPCA is finding more. The air isn't much better—University and Snelling has been one of the most polluted intersections in the region. And, most of our homes contain toxins, radon, asbestos, lead paint and lead water pipes.

The solutions include:

- 1) consumer education;
- 2) clear regulatory standards;
- 3) anti-pollution laws with real teeth—aggressive prosecution with harsh criminal sanctions;
- 4) oxygenated fuels;
- 5) a basic transit system that works; and
- 6) revised Minnesota superfund laws to direct money into cleanup and away from litigation (up to 85% of insurance money is now being spend on litigation).

What are your top three priorities for legislative action?

My top three priorities are children, education and health care, but for the next two years, our top priority must be the state budget. Last year, the legislature made the easy spending cuts and exhausted most of the budget reserve. This year—with a $1 billion deficit—we'll be forced to make the difficult decisions. If we take the chill out of Minnesota's business climate, we may be able to attract new jobs and broaden our tax base without raising tax rates or making cuts into the programs we cherish.

Gary E. Carlson, 37, a 30-year Midway/Como resident, is an independent candidate. He has more than 13 years' experience working as a carpenter, mechanic and small business owner. Carlson is a graduate of Hamline University and Denver Law School. He currently operates a small solo law practice, specializing in real estate work. He has volunteered for Hamline/Midway Coalition/District 11 Community Council, Midway Concerned Citizens, Boy Scouts, St. Paul Winter Carnival and neighborhood cleanups.

Alice Hausman

How can neighborhoods balance business and residential needs/interests?

Business and residential needs/interests are not antithetical. On the one hand, a stable residential community with affordable housing is good for business. On the other, a healthy job climate and economic growth benefit not only business, but also residential areas. We need to focus on what benefits both.

What do you see as environmental issues affecting our district and what would you do to resolve them?

1. Our state accepted the premise that nuclear energy was a safe, cheap energy source. We accepted the federal government's promise that by 1983 an underground waste storage facility would be available to accept the waste we were generating. That date was changed to 1998. Now, their best guess is 2010. We continue to generate nuclear waste with no guarantee of long-term safe storage available. In the face of such a dilemma, an aggressive program of energy efficiency and wind and wood-powered electric plants could allow us to phase out nuclear reactors. We should be moving much more quickly to renewable forms of energy and away from nuclear energy with its hidden costs of long-term storage.

2. Minnesotans have willingly recycled, but recycling has given us the faulty impression that we are solving the waste disposal problem. Unfortunately, research and development of products with recycled content has not kept up with the volume of recycled waste. Therefore, at least for now, we have to remember that our first obligation is to reduce waste, and only secondarily to resort to recycling.

What are your top three priorities for legislative action?

From a practical standpoint, my legislative priorities tend to be influenced by the committees on which I serve. Those appointments are made after the election, so not all of my priorities are yet clear. Perhaps reflecting on past and present activity will best indicate my priorities.

Assuming I am reappointed to the Education Finance Division, I will again present St. Paul's education financing needs to the committee. In a year in which significant budget cuts are expected, our challenge will be to protect funding for education.

I also have a number of environmental issues I have been working on in the interim. There may well be legislative activity as a result of some of this work. One of those areas is NSP's proposed dry cask storage of nuclear waste at Prairie Island. I have been vigorously opposing this proposal.

Finally, I am currently a part of a jobs development task force which seeks to have an agenda ready for the legislative session which deals realistically with the pressing need for increased employment opportunities.

Alice Hausman was elected to the House of Representatives in 1989. During the past term she has served on House committees on education, environment and natural resource, energy, economic development (she's vice-chairperson,) and financial institutions and insurance. In addition, Hausman is on the Commission on the Economic Status of Women. She has been a teacher and has worked in management in a healthcare institution. She has DFL endorsement.

John Krenik

How can neighborhoods balance business and residential needs/interests?

The bond between the business community and the residential community is a very special one. Both communities are dependent on each other for different needs. That is why it is so important that they work together as a team to reach their goals.

To meet the needs of business and community there needs to be better communication between both parties. There should be give and take on both sides. Because the business community is the financial backbone of our community, everything must be done to ensure its success. A strong business community means a strong community.

What do you see as environmental issues affecting our district and what would you do to resolve them?

Our environment is very important to all of us. Many steps have been taken to clean up our environment. Clean drinking water is a must for our community. Ground water has become polluted both by man and nature. We must work together as a team to clean up our water supply. This will only be done with the commitment of our business and residential communities. Our community can be very proud of its recycling efforts, but we must continue in this area.

What are your top three priorities for legislative action?

1. Education—Our education system in Minnesota is good, but it needs to become excellent. I will work hard as a State Representative to ensure that every child is provided with an excellent education.

2. Economy—State spending needs to be brought under control. A cap on state spending is needed to reduce the liberal spending practices of the past. As a Conservative, I will work day and night to reduce the tax burden placed upon Minnesotans.

3. Public safety—Minnesota is a nice place to live and I will do everything in my power to keep it that way. Far too often criminals get off with a light sentence and victims are overlooked. I will work hard for the victims of crime and be their voice. It is sad to see our justice system has turned into a legal system giving criminals more rights than the victims. I will work hard to change this mode of thinking.

John Krenik has lived in the Midway area for 29 years. He is a graduate of Cretin High School, the College of St. Thomas and Hennepin Technical College. He is currently a special education teacher at Murray Junior High School. He has IR endorsement.

REALTOR

DON'T JUST LIST YOUR HOME — SELL IT!!

What makes one home sell quickly and six months later a similar home sits on the market? No matter where or when you are selling, the following combination of factors must be considered:

PRICE — This is always the most important factor. Your home should be priced in line with recent sales of like homes in a like location. Pricing it higher and hoping for offers can make buyers shy away—especially in an insecure economic atmosphere.

TERMS — Seller financing and/or a good assumable mortgage can open the door to more buyers.

LOCATION — Extremely important and the list price must carefully reflect both pluses and minuses.

CONDITION — Another vital ingredient. Many buyers today will pay top dollar to be able to move right in. Time and energy are a premium to many potential buyers. Repainting, recarpeting or doing minor repairs will generate a higher selling price. Colors and style chosen should be current and/or neutral.

AMENITIES — Decks, attached garages, fireplaces, master baths can all be deciding factors.

COMPETITION — What other homes are on the market and how does your home compare?

FINANCIAL MARKET FLUCTUATIONS — Your home, an investment like stocks and bonds, can sell for top dollar one year and because of interest rates, supply and demand, and economy, can sell for much less a year later.

MARKETING APPROACH — What is being done by your agent to create interest and excitement to a wide range of buyers, i.e. picture ads, relocation services, open houses, creative and energetic advertising? Remember, while ALL of these must be considered, the seller can only control price, terms, condition, and the quality of a marketing approach.

When choosing an agent it is important to find one who will honestly help you assess your property considering all of these factors, and who will market your property with creativity and energy...my specialty. Give me a call regarding selling, buying or relocating. Peggy Sparr 639-6383

School News

Central High

"Out with the old, in with the new." Last spring we said good-bye to seniors and this fall we welcome incoming freshmen. A new language at our school this year is Swahili. New staff members include Mr. Nelson, Mr. Oland, Mr. King and Mr. Johnson.

Last year we had four semi-finalists for National Merit Scholarships. They were Mark Stenglein, Susannah Crowder, Michael Fair and Jeffrey Rhodes. This is the most semi-finalists for any St. Paul public school and for most private schools as well.

For those seniors interested, St. John's College from Santa Fe, Lawrence University and Northland all visited recently. On Sept. 24, Edgewood and Knox Colleges are visiting. Then on Sept. 30 Oberlin and Earlham will be coming.

For those interested sophomores-seniors, the SRA and PSAT tests are coming up. SRA tests will be on Oct. 5; PSAT prep tests are on Oct. 26.

The parents' advisory council will meet on Oct. 8.

For students with spirit and commitment there are some upcoming dates you should know. On Oct. 5, Spirit Week begins. On Oct. 6 the student council meets in the library.

Brenna Barrett

Murray Junior High

On the morning of Sept. 8, 660 student were welcomed to Murray by Mrs. Nancy Nielsen, Murray's principal, and Mr. Greg Schones, the assistant principal, who is new to this school. Along with Mr. Schones, a few new teachers joined the staff including Mr. Gary Mansergh (math and science), Mr. Charles Nittie (Math), and Mr. John Krenik (special education).

Boys and girls soccer started on Sept. 14. The Murray girls' soccer team has been the city champion for the last three years and hopes to make it four. Other extra curricular activities include peer mediation, which is students helping students resolve conflicts, and a theater club put on by Steppingstone Theater which is performing a fall and a spring play.

Murray will hold a garage sale on Oct. 10. If you have anything you'd like to donate, please bring the items to school between 7:30 and 8:00 a.m. on Monday through Friday. If you have questions, call 293-8740.

Como Park High

On Tues., Sept. 8, Como Park students and teachers once again filled the hallways. The general opinion of the first week was that Como got off to an excellent start. Of course, there were a few schedules to be rearranged and a few lost students the first few days, but all in all, Como got off to a smooth start.

Now that the start of school is over, the students and staff at Como are even busier. The week of Oct. 5-9 will be SRA testing for 10th graders as well as Homecoming week. The homecoming bonfire will be Thurs., Oct. 8; the football game against Highland will be held at Griffin Field (Central stadium) on Fri., Oct. 9. The dance will be at Como gym on Sat., Oct. 10.

Oct. 15 and 16 are state teachers' meetings and there will be no school for students. On Oct. 27 the advisory council will meet at 7 p.m. in the library and on Oct. 30 the Halloween dance will be held.

One major new addition to Como Park this year is a new principal. Patricia McHugh began teaching English at Como when it was still a Junior High. She then went to Open School and to Central where she was a teacher and then an assistant principal. She also comes to Como by way of Highland and most recently Johnson. Welcome to Como, Dr. McHugh.

Congratulations to Como's State Fair winners. From last year's 9th grade, Brian Engman placed first in furniture mixed wood, Tom Billing placed first and José Megia placed second in woodturning. Nathan Smock placed third in sports equipment and Jason Bolle placed second in small furniture.

From the 10th and 11th grades, Dan Koosmann placed first and Jason Toth placed fourth in woodturning. Dan Probst placed first and Justin Gagnelius placed third in sports equipment.

Last year's seniors who placed were Shane McLaughlin (third) and Valerie Andersson (fourth) in woodworking. Dave Bies placed second and Sean Glaus third in woodturning. Mary Nelson placed first in small furniture and Robert Amy received first in unique scrap-wood. Davie Bies also placed fourth in sports equipment.

St. Anthony Park

There's a lot of activity at St. Anthony Park Elementary School. The St. Paul school superintendent, Dr. Curman Gaines, is coming to read to the kindergartners on Sept. 25.

The 1st graders are excited at the prospect of learning to read, write and do arithmetic and 2nd graders are beginning their geography unit, "Around the World in Second Grade."

Third grade classes are getting to know each other, studying law education and working on mobiles.

The 4th, 5th and 6th graders' theme this year is "Unity Begins With You." All students set goals for the school year. The 4th grade classes are starting their social studies unit on American history and they're looking forward to the art awareness unit which includes a field trip and special activities. The 5th graders are beginning their unit in science on the moon, while the 6th graders' science unit is on insects. The 6th grade is also preparing for its annual trip the Environmental Learning Center in October.

The all-school open house was on Sept. 22. This was an opportunity for children to show their parents their classrooms and to introduce them to their teachers.

Berit Griffin

Chelsea Heights

Chelsea Heights Elementary School began classes for grades 1-6 on Sept. 8 and for kindergarten on Sept. 10. Seven hundred students are at Chelsea heights this year. The Chelsea Cheetah is our school mascot. We have 25 classroom teachers and four specialists who teach gym, science, music and computer. Mr. John Ashmead is our principal.

The 5th and 6th graders are going to the Ordway Theatre in October. Funding for the trip will come from the Grand Metropolitan Food Sector Foundation, on behalf of the Pillsbury Company and the St. Paul Companies, Inc.

In September the 5th graders had a fund raiser selling the World's Finest Chocolate Bars to earn money for field trips. On Sept. 22 an open house was held for parents to see their children's classrooms and meet their teachers. There will be more open houses and special events throughout the year. We invite you to come.

Hans Grinager

Holy Childhood

Holy Childhood opened its doors on Sept. 8 to welcome 172 students in grades 1-8. Both students and staff are looking forward to a great school year.

Roseville has hazardous waste drop off site

Until Oct. 31, hazardous waste materials may be dropped off in Roseville at a site north of Larpentour on Kent St., on property owned by the Ramsey County Public Works Department. Hours are noon-7 p.m. Fridays and 10 a.m.-5 p.m. on Saturdays. Accepted will be aerosol cans, insecticides, wood preservatives, gasoline, rat poison, liquid paints and finishes. Unacceptable materials include motor oil, lead-acid batteries, appliances, oil filters, household batteries, tires and antifreeze.

Proof of Ramsey County residence, such as a driver's license, is required to use the site.

For more information call Zack Hansen, 292-7904.

Police precinct offices will open

By Nov. 1, residents in St. Paul will be able to walk into a neighborhood "team" house to make a complaint or report a crime.

Starting with the Northwest Team House at Dale and University (the precinct office serving the Bugle area in St. Paul), Chief Bill Finney has assigned a desk officer to be on duty seven days a week, 9 a.m.-8 p.m., to meet with community residents and answer their concerns.

Formerly, local team offices were frequently locked because all officers were on the street answering calls. Chief Finney hopes the open doors will encourage communication and cooperation between residents and police officers.

Corpus Christi fall festival

Corpus Christi parish's fall festival will be on Sun., Oct. 4, noon-5 p.m., at the new church, County Road B and Fairview. Lido's Cafe Italia will sponsor a spaghetti dinner. Plans include games for children of all ages, prizes, craft sale, plant sale, bake sale and a silent auction.

Good news for international students

The Minnesota International Center (MIC) introduces international students, scholars and spouses to Minnesotans for activities stressing friendship and mutual learning. These include a friendship program, dinner discussion groups, visits to communities beyond the metro area, opportunities for speaking, interpreting and translating.

Spouses are especially invited to participate in English conversation classes (see ad in this issue), women's groups and community encounters to learn more about the Twin Cities. Americans volunteer as friends, discussion group leaders, teachers and mentors.

This fall the MIC will offer an opportunity to learn about the American political process and to observe how voting takes place.

MIC activities are open to international students, scholars and spouses from any Twin Cities campus. Call 625-4421 for more information.

action forced on them as the legislative consolidation committee attempted to do, in Lauderdale's case, with road maintenance. The suburbs were not well represented on the committee, she says.

Her interests in the county include increasing visibility of county government through "redeployment" of county personnel to school buildings to provide health care such as immunizations and nutrition, adding on to school buildings for this, with county aid if necessary; providing human services where population density is greatest, rather than primarily in downtown St. Paul; disbursing throughout the county persons who require human services assistance, while providing services such as clinics, food shelves and transportation to jobs; and increased sharing of services between the county, cities and schools. She co-owns a business and has served on the Roseville City Council.

Happy birthday, Frank

Frank Phillips of St. Anthony Park will be celebrating his 99th birthday on September 28. Most likely he'll ask for pie rather than cake since he drives to Burger King every noon, claiming they have the best apple pie around!

He lived in Crown Point, Ind., until a year ago when he moved here to live with his son Dick and family.

Frank used to be a die man for the railroad. "When you see bent metal on the railroad track, I probably helped make it," he says. "Got to travel to lots of places in that job."

His hobby was photography, especially wildflowers and nighttime views of Chicago.

Local students visit Russia

By Vickie Gilmer

A camping trip in Southern Siberia without a compass, trail to follow or the ability to speak Russian may not seem like the ideal vacation. But Wendy Peterson and Katie Swadburg, high school seniors from St. Anthony Park, said that the experience will last them a lifetime.

"When we were backpacking, we had no compass, and no trail to follow. At that point it made me kind of nervous," Swadburg, a senior at Breck, said. "Besides the very few "mountain men" there's really no one out there. It's untouched, it's gorgeous."

"We were more in the mountains, so I guess it would be more comparable to Montana, but it was really thick vegetation and the fields were sort of swampy and boggy," Peterson, a senior at St. Paul Central, said. So what drove these two to seek out such an adventure in Russia?

Both Peterson and Swadburg are active in the YMCA's Camp Widjiwagan program, and were offered the opportunity to travel to Russia with a group of five other Americans and to meet up with a Russian group of students.

Swadburg said a variety of reasons provoked her to take the trip: she loves to travel, her grandfather immigrated from a part of Poland that later came under Soviet control, she loves reading Anton Chekhov and was intrigued by the opportunity to see the newly-freed Soviet republics.

"The reason that I applied is just because I thought it was a big opportunity, something I would never get to do again," Peterson said. "What I was really interested in was comparing the upkeep of the forest and the way their park system works to ours. As far as the way they're kept, it's pretty much the same. There are some areas that are really well kept and some that are sort of trashy."

While neither of them spoke Russian (their Russian was "awful" Swadburg said), the group of Russian students they met spoke English very well. They were able to facilitate communication with their own improvised sign language. And, of course, the universal language of rock 'n' roll helped. "Actually, we had a lot of music in common, but it was the music that we listened to five years ago, like Depeche Mode or the Grateful Dead," Swadburg said.

"They were really interested in our camera, they like to play with our camera a lot. Mostly, people [living near the camping areas] just wanted to look at us," Peterson added. Swadburg said she would like to go back to Russia someday but that "I would make sure that I know more Russian, or know the alphabet better. It was hard to read signs, or to find a bathroom. But if you don't know the customs, they will tell you—they're polite about it, they're really helpful too—they'll find someone to help you so they can translate."

Wendy Peterson

Both Peterson and Swadburg said they were stunned by the beauty of Southern Siberia, but found themselves dismayed over the differences in the upkeep of the wilderness and the city of Moscow itself.

"It was hard to see the environment being trashed in such a way—it was really hard for us to just walk by someone's cabin and see piles of cans there, and just have to leave them to rot," Swadburg said.

"The only place that was really clean was the Kremlin, and Red Square. It was very clean and had nice well-kept lawns and everything. But then, when you got back around where all the apartments were, where I [the friend they stayed with] lived, it was all, it was really dirty. There weren't any lawns, it was all weeds if anything was growing," Peterson said.

In the smaller villages, Peterson said that "there was a lot of traces of Communism everywhere. In general, all the villages were brown wood buildings with blue shutters, just like government-issue paint, I would guess, and then in the big farms there was always a watchtower—which wasn't manned anymore."

"Actually, I really liked Moscow," Swadburg said. "It was really strange—there are no houses. The city was a lot cleaner than I thought it would be, but Moscow seemed really unclean. It seemed that people were just realizing modern-day conveniences." Peterson agreed, adding, "I thought it was really interesting that everybody in Moscow, unless you're like Boris Yeltsin, if you're really rich, lives in apartments. There are no houses at all, and so when you look out the window of the apartment, there's just millions of apartment buildings everywhere." Swadburg also said that she found it interesting that the people in Moscow seemed "very optimistic" about their future, and not at all regretful.

And while Peterson said that Gorky Park is somewhat similar to our own Como Park, Swadburg found Moscow attractive because of the friendliness of the people and the feeling of safety she had in such a large city. "I felt much safer in Moscow than any other metropolitan city. Moscow felt like walking in downtown St. Paul, but I actually felt safer than walking in downtown St. Paul."

Now that high school graduation is nearing, Swadburg finds herself contemplating studying

Russian history and economics in college or pursuing med school. Peterson is still interested in forestry, particularly "research and land use—but that could change" and is looking at a variety of colleges in the Upper Midwest. But neither of them intends to hang up their hiking boots—Swadburg is planning a canoeing trip in the Arctic next summer and hopes to travel soon to Australia and Africa, while Peterson is hoping to make a trek up to Alaska.

Local burglary still mystery

By Amy Causton

On the evening of August 28, a 42-year-old St. Anthony Park resident was attacked in his home in the 2000 block of Scudder St. Ernest Trower was upstairs alone when he heard noises at around 10:30 p.m. He went downstairs and confronted three men in his living room. The men began to flee, but Trower caught one of them and closed the door on the other two.

According to a report in the St. Paul Pioneer Press, the intruder caught by Trower picked up a broom and a board that were lying in the room and hit Trower several times with them. Trower then pushed him out the front door, at which time the other two men came in and all three intruders attacked Trower, kicking and punching him. Trower sustained a collapsed lung, a broken facial bone, and a sprained thumb. He was treated at Hennepin County Medical Center and has been released.

According to Lt. Lisa Millar of the St. Paul Police Department's Burglary Unit, no suspects are in custody yet, and the case is still under investigation. Trower is cooperating fully with the police. Although the case was assigned to the burglary unit, according to Lt. Millar the intruders' intent is not clear. "We can't speculate on what they were going to do," she says.

There was another attempted break-in about 15 minutes later on the same block, and another one the evening of September 10. Lt. Millar says there has been an increase in "occupied burglaries" (in which the intruders do not know whether anyone is home or not) throughout the city in recent years. She recommends that all residents take precautions to prevent these break-ins.

Primarily, she suggests that people secure all doors and windows, and that they secure patio doors not only with locks but also with pieces of wood or pins. She also recommends that if residents notice anything suspicious, they should call the police. "If it doesn't look good and it doesn't feel good," she says, "they should call." And while she doesn't criticize Trower's actions, she points out, "we don't recommend confronting" intruders.

If anyone has any information on Trower's assailants, they are asked to call the Burglary Unit at 292-3688. Callers can remain anonymous if they wish.

Community news from your neighborhood Norwest bank

Paint-A-Thon brings out the best

Clear and sunny skies greeted more than 1,800 Norwest employees who spent a late-summer Saturday brightening several Twin Cities neighborhoods during the Ninth Annual Metro Paint-A-Thon.

Teams of volunteers with brushes in hand — 12,000 in all — swarmed throughout the seven-county metro area, applying a fresh coat of paint to 388 homes of low-income senior citizens and disabled adults.

This year, Norwest partnered with a number of Twin Cities sponsors in support of event organizer, the Greater Minneapolis Council of Churches.

"Paint-A-Thon is especially meaningful to us because it allows Norwest to contribute some of our best resources to the community for a project that really makes a difference," says Ruth Grussing, consumer banking manager, University-Midway Office.

Commitment to community

Matching last year's achievement, Norwest provided the largest contingent of volunteers among the corporate partners. "We're proud to be able to show how much Norwest people do care and want to be active in the communities where they live and work," says Grussing.

More than 1,000 employees from the University-Midway Office and other Norwest departments painted 25 homes in St. Paul and Minneapolis neighborhoods. In total, Norwest volunteers throughout the Twin Cities and suburbs scraped, primed and painted 44 homes.

Annual participation in the Metro Paint-A-

Employee volunteers from Norwest Corporation, including its president and chief operating officer Dick Kovacevich (center), pitched in to help paint a home on Portland Ave. S. in Minneapolis during this year's Metro Paint-A-Thon.

Thon is just one of many community activities that Norwest and its employees support throughout the year.

"Being part of the community means more to us than just doing business — our goal is to be the kind of friend and partner people want to have in their neighborhoods," says Grussing.

Beef dinner

Saturday, Oct. 24, is the date for the annual beef dinner at Peace Lutheran Church, Walnut at Lone. Family-style serving and a bake sale will occur from 5-7 p.m.

The Ladies' Aid Society began providing the dinner in 1933 at the then-named First Evangelical Lutheran Church of Rose Hill to help raise funds for other parish activities, including at times paying the pastor's salary. The entire congregation now works together to put on the event. Profits from this year's dinner will be used to repair and enhance the church pipe organ.

Music in Park features Norwegian music

By Laura Sewell

Chamber music lovers are once again in for a treat when the Music in the Park Series' 14th season gets under way at 4 p.m. on Sun., Oct. 18, at St. Anthony Park United Church of Christ, 2129 Commonwealth Ave. The opening concert will feature performers well-known to Twin Cities audiences: Richard Killmer who was principal oboist of the St. Paul Chamber Orchestra from 1971-1982, and prominent local pianist Thelma Hunter. Also appearing on the program will be the American Reed Trio, comprised of Killmer, Frank Ell, professor of clarinet at Michigan State University, and John Miller, principal bassoonist of the Minnesota Orchestra.

In anticipation of the 150th anniversary of the birth of Norwegian composer Edward Grieg in 1993, the concert will feature music of Grieg, along with works by Trygve Madsen, J.S. Bach and Haydn.

Killmer says the three wind players first got the idea to form a group when they were all living in Minnesota 15 years ago. At that time clarinetist Frank Ell was teaching at the College of St. Benedict in St. Joseph, Minn. Killmer says, "We first got together just to read some chamber music and have fun, and ended up being asked to do a small live radio broadcast. That got the whole thing going. Since then, we've tried to do a concert tour every year. This year, in addition to this performance in Minnesota, we're playing concerts in New York and Pennsylvania." He says that the fact that all three musicians live in different states these days has not deterred them in any way. When they have performances coming up, they manage to schedule periods of intensive rehearsal time together.

Since 1982 Richard Killmer has been on the faculty of the Eastman School of Music in Rochester, N.Y. While here he will be offering a free master class on Oct. 13 at Sateren Recital Hall at Augsburg College in Minneapolis. Call 330-1265 for information.

Killmer's appearance on the Music in the Park Series is something of a homecoming for him. Not only were the Killmers formerly residents of

American Reed Trio

St. Anthony Park but this concert marks his fourth appearance on the series. He recalls a concert in the series' first season when he played along with his wife, violist Sydney Killmer, Julie Himmelstrup, pianist, and Anders Himmelstrup on the cello.

Thelma Hunter will play a set of solo pieces including such favorites as "Norwegian Bridal Procession," "Anitra's Dance," "Nocturne," and "March of the Dwarfs." Hunter's parents were both Norwegian and she grew up in Brooklyn, N.Y., where she attended the Norwegian Church. She remembers playing pieces by Grieg at New York University when she was only seven. She still has the very worn book of pieces with fingerings marked in by her mother.

For an afternoon of wonderful music for wind instruments and piano with a Norwegian flair come to St. Anthony Park United Church of Christ on Oct. 18. Tickets for this concert and the entire six-concert series may be purchased at the Bibelot Shop and Micawber's Bookstore in St. Anthony Park. Single tickets are $10 at the door, $9 in advance and $5 for student rush. For more information about this concert or others in the series, call 644-4234.

Post-concert reception

A special post-concert reception for October 18 concertgoers will be held at the Muffuletta Restaurant. All are welcome to join Music in the Park Series board members, performers and friends for this annual event. The cost is $10 per person. Mail check, payable to Music in the Park Series, to 1333 Chelmsford St., St. Paul, MN 55108. Please respond by Oct. 13. For more information, call 644-0745.

Lauderdale's Koford retires

By Corinna Nelson

He's moving on from Lauderdale's placid streets to the wide open spaces up north. On Sept. 13, his 62nd birthday, Wayne Koford retired from his position maintaining Lauderdale's City Hall and sewer lift stations. He'll move to 40 acres near Pine City to hunt and fish and live the country life.

It's a second retirement for Koford, who worked 30 years for Hamm's brewery in its various incarnations as Pabst, Olympia and Stroh's.

He has been involved with Lauderdale since 1972 when Koford began to manage the teen program, book bands for dances and later coached Little League. He was hired by Lauderdale part-time in November 1973, going full-time in July 1984. He supervised one other maintenance person.

Wayne Koford

Lauderdale won't replace him; David Hinrich will remain as the full-time maintenance person, contracting out work as needed.

Koford, an avid bow and gun hunter, had a maintenance challenge of a different sort when working on his Pokegama township spread. "It was nothing but woods," he said. "I had to clear about 60 trees... to get the house trailer in."

He is a Lions member and is confident the Lauderdale council will put to good use the Lions' donation for an improvement project. "They seem to be good thinkers for the future," Koford said.

- Voted to participate in the 1992 Holiday Adopt-a-Family program sponsored by the Merriam Park Community Center.

commercial rehab and streetscape improvements including facade grants, pedestrian street improvements and commercial management activities. Cynthia Stickles hired as block club coordinator

Cynthia (Ceese) Stickles, a 14-year resident of St. Anthony Park, has joined the SAPCC staff as block club coordinator. She has a B.A. from the University of Minnesota and is currently working on an M.A. at Hamline University. She is also employed as a substitute teacher for the St. Paul Public Schools and has served as the volunteer coordinator for community education. Her knowledge of the neighborhood and her network of community groups makes her an especially valuable addition.

"My desire is to work in St. Paul—it is here I pay my taxes, here my voice counts in local politics, here my family lives and learns. We have experienced crime and vandalism first-hand and have responded to it in various ways, including direct confrontation, calling the police, participating in block and neighborhood forums," she stated.

The community council and the St. Anthony Park Association are pleased that the skills and talents of this neighbor will be directed to community building in the future!
