Heeding the voices of childhood

Round the time Susanne Nevin turned 50, her life changed in the space of a dream. Nevin found herself, as one does in dreams, transported backwards to a specific time and place of childhood. In her case that meant the branches of a large tree that grew near the village in the German Black Forest where her family spent all their summer vacations until she moved to the United States at age 21.

Here the way Nevin remembers her dream.

"Someone was leading me up a mountain path to that tree where we always sat and read or sang when we were kids. She said, 'Something's buried here, and you can't go until we've dug it up again.' Nevin took the dream part as prophecy and part as an admonition to get down to work.

What Nevin succeeded in "unearthing" over the course of the next few months were the voices of the German village women who had populated her childhood summers. Her first book, "Frauenlandschaften" (Dry-Verlag, 2000), is the result. She says the title is essentially untranslatable but allows that "Women's Landscape" comes closest, although it misses the pun on the word "landfund," the German word for "farm woman."

The book is a collection of fictionalized portraits of strong country women and their hard lives in the immediate post-war era. In

St. Anthony Park residents discuss street options

Summer Residential Street Vitality Program will result in several new street configurations

By Judy Weese

St. Paul's Residential Street Vitality Program (RSVP) returns to north St. Anthony Park this summer for another round of street construction. Beginning in May, crews will tear up existing sidewalks and install asphalt. Carbohydrates will also be added to streets currently without them.

To help prepare people in the affected neighborhood (an area south of Como Avenue between Marulich and Rice) St. Paul's Department of Public Works held two meetings in March that gave area residents a chance to respond to the city's plans.

On March 8 about 60 people came and went over the course of a 4-hour meeting held at St. Anthony Park Elementary School. The evening was divided into three 90-minute sessions.

Residents had been informed via letter of how the time would be apportioned, so most people came prepared to part of the meeting when their street was scheduled to be discussed.

Representing the city were Bill Haggland of the Traffic Engineering Division, city forester Greg Reese and Knopp-Hillside RSVP project engineer Lisa Falk. Also present were Donna Bataglia from the St. Paul Fire Department and Sandy McClure, representing a neighborhood task force that has been formed to aid in the work of the RSVP project.

"The transformation of sidewalks, curving streets, medians, trees and unusual elevations make this a valuable opportunity," Falk said.

The combination of narrow, curving streets, medians, trees and unusual elevations make this a valuable opportunity,

"The transformation of sidewalks, curving streets, medians, trees and unusual elevations make this a valuable opportunity," Falk said.

That complexity quickly became evident at the public meeting. The first street to be discussed was Commonwealth between Como and Gordon. For discussion purposes, the street divides around a fairly wide median.

Keeping this area would be controversial. Falk had allotted an hour to discuss Commonwealth—30 minutes each for the upper and lower sections of the street.

Residents on the lower section, which is currently 24 feet wide with two-way traffic and parking on one side, were given three options. Two would narrow the street to 20 feet and make it one-way, adding land to either the median or the boulevard. The other option would keep 28 feet and maintain two-way traffic, with parking on one side only.

Residents questioned why the street couldn't stay the same—24 feet wide with two-way traffic, a configuration some people maintained had worked well for many years. Falk replied that maintaining the status quo is not an option.

"The standard width for a two-way residential street with parking on one side is 28 feet," she said. "We need to maintain adequate access for emergency vehicles."

Eventually, lower Commonwealth residents reluctantly agreed to the 20-foot, one-way option on a wider boulevard. But then they had to decide which direction the one-way should run. As Falk pointed out, that decision could have implications for other streets in the area.

Residents on upper Commonwealth were presented with similar options. They, too, Street design to page 6

St. Anthony Park Bank opens Midway branch on University Ave.

By Sean Conner

On March 15, St. Anthony Park Bank opened for business in its new 4800 sq. ft. branch location, located on the corner of 36th Street and Vandalia Street.

The new branch will serve all Park Bank customers, but its location is especially visible and convenient to those in the Midway. The facility includes a drive-thru and walk-up ATM on Vandalia Street.

The main bank, with a staff of 25, will remain at 2265 Como Ave. The branch office will have a staff of four, with support from the Como office, and will have similar hours of operation.

St. Anthony Park Bank is known as a "community bank," one that "focuses on helping a community grow and solve its problems," according to Rick Reiman, Park Bank president.

"If we focus on doing the right thing, then the money takes care of itself. Growth happens, not acquisition," Reiman said.

St. Anthony Park Bank was established in 1916 by several leaders in the community who saw the need for a bank to serve local residents and businesses. The original building, at 2265 Como Avenue, was designed to match the library across the street. The building together "created a stunning effect in the community," says David Lanegran in his book, "St. Anthony Park, Portrait of a Community."

In the 1950s and '60s the original building was expanded and remodeled to serve more customers. The 1970s saw the addition of the drive-in walk-up bank, designed by Joe Michels, an architect from the neighborhood. In 1985, the current main bank was built on Como Avenue. Again, a decision was selected that, in Lanegran's words, "would maintain and enhance the feeling of the Park's commercial area."

Over the years, St. Anthony Park Bank has come to serve many customers in the surrounding neighborhoods, especially the Midway area. As bank leaders looked to the future needs of this part of the

The St. Paul Parks and Recreation Department has notified the Community Council that their attempt to save the old swing set amid the oak trees in College Park has been unsuccessful. It was originally hoped that installing an edging to hold the sand cushion, which was required by Consumer Products Safety Commission guidelines, could be done without damaging tree roots. This work was done in the fall of 2000.

Unfortunately, the finished product has been judged unacceptable. According to Parks and Recreation’s John Wickers, “The edging is more extensive than anticipated and clearly does not blend well into the park. The amount of sand required to level the area is more than anticipated and has increased the likelihood of damage to the trees through compaction.” Both the edging and the swing set will be removed in the spring.

The College Park One Project Task Force will hold a public meeting on April 26th from 7-9:30 p.m. at St. Matthew’s Episcopal Church, 2156 Carter Ave. Discussion will be about plans for the College Park tennis and basketball courts. All interested residents are invited.

The St. Anthony Park Community Council will hold its annual election on Wednesday, April 11.

POOLS ARE OPEN FROM 4-8 P.M.

South St. Anthony Park residents vote at the Seal Hi-Rise, 825 Seal Ave. North St. Anthony Park residents vote at the library, 2245 Como Ave.

(For additional election details, see the Community Council ad on p. 5.)

Community councils represent neighborhoods to various institutions of city government. They serve as the organized voice of a neighborhood by providing a forum for dispensing information and exchanging ideas. In the past several years, the St. Anthony Park Community Council has represented neighborhood concerns on a variety of issues, including the location of the women's soccer stadium on the University of Minnesota St. Paul campus, a proposed Amoco station on Energy Park Dr. and I-94, and the future of the community garden and the number of billboards in the area.

South St. Anthony Park

Sherman Eagles

Over the past several years, the city of St. Paul has been looking more and more to the community councils for guidance regarding the wishes of residents in their neighborhoods. I have been fortunate to be a member of the St. Anthony Park Community Council for the last two years as we have addressed some difficult issues. I think we have done a good job, but I also think we can improve communication so that neighbors know about issues sooner and have a greater opportunity to provide input for decisions. I also think the Community Council should continue to look for areas where it can take positive action before problems develop.

Jay Johnson

I joined the St. Anthony Park Community Council as an alternate the past year and have been serving as a member of the Environment Committee. I have been a homeowner and resident of south St. Anthony Park for the last 20 years. As a professional musician, I work with the Children's Theatre, St. Paul Chamber Orchestra and many other organizations. I volunteer at the Minnesota Crisis Nursery and am the defending champion of the Greater Wylieau Mud Golf Invitational. If elected, I pledge to continue to work to keep St. Anthony Park vibrant and healthy as a community in which to work and raise a family.

Tracy L. Reid-Selth

I recently moved into the community to attend Hamline Law School. My family has occupied the same St. Anthony Park home for over 100 years, and I have made St. Anthony Park my home as well. I studied special education during the undergraduate portion of my education and have a very strong commitment to the children of the community. It is my goal to maintain the quality of the community culture, especially in continuing the celebration of the arts that has made St. Anthony Park such a wonderful place to live.

Jan Sedgewick

I'm thankful for my neighbors; they're wonderful. My husband and I and our two children have lived here for 11 years and don't ever want to move. I've been an organizer for National Night Out block parties, and I participated in the effort to have the sound wall built. I care about keeping our neighborhood the friendly, safe community I know it to be. Some qualities I would bring to the Community Council are loyalty, dedication and sincere interest in the welfare of my neighbors.

North St. Anthony Park

Terence Gockman

The St. Anthony Park Community Council, like the district it represents, is peopled by dedicated, civic-minded neighbors. It has been my honor to work with them these last four years, and I hope to continue to serve.

Rose Greigore

I have learned a lot being an alternate on the Council this past year working on the Planning Committee and the Executive Committee. There are many projects being planned that will impact St. Anthony Park.

Rich C. Nelson

For the past 13 years I have been a member of the District 12 Housing and Human Services Committee, working on various issues and projects—community clean-up, community garage sale, hazardous waste disposal, helping organize the HMARc Home and Garden Show at Bandana Square. I am a centrist politically and philosophically. For every decision made, there is a good reason to do something, and as good a reason not to do something. Every decision by the Council should be for the good of the community as a whole, not just for a few in the community who have singular interests.

Don Stryker

I am a relative newcomer to St. Anthony Park, having moved here five years ago. When my wife and I explored the neighborhood, I found it reminiscent of the tightly knit St. Louis Park neighborhood I was raised in, right down to the groups of kids walking to school together. We decided that this was the place to raise our two children. A challenge of urban life is the need to co-exist in an environment that serves a diverse set of needs. Residents, environment and businesses all combine to make our neighborhood what it is. I'm hopeful that by serving on the Community Council I'll be able to make some small contribution to helping our neighborhood continue to meet the needs of all its residents.

"Let's get that location right"

Thanks for the front-page story in your March issue about the Children's Home Society's new building. I hope the architect's drawings show that the new children will find the facility safe and secure. I think it's important to point out that their new building, planned for Eastside, hasn't actually been built in the city of Lauderdale, not St. Anthony Park. We're the city responsible for reviewing and approving their plans, issuing permits, conducting inspections and coordinating infrastructure improvements. They've been a welcome addition to Lauderdale since 1987, and we hope they'll be here for many more years to come.

Their new building won't be in St. Anthony Park, but you'll be able to see it from here.

Clay Christiansen

Lauderdale City Council Member

Will real estate speculation ruin St. Anthony Park?

Based on the lack of letters in the March Bugle, there seems to be little or no concern regarding the "broken windows" theory. If a window is broken and left unattended, people walking by will conclude that no one cares and no one is in charge. Soon, more windows will be broken, and the sense of anarchy will spread from the building to the street on which it faces, sending a signal that anything goes.

How does a community signal that not everything goes? One way is by picking up the trash. ■

New courts move closer to completion

Things have progressed well on the College Park tennis and basketball courts project. With funds raised from local residents, former residents, area businesses, a matching STAR grant, and in-kind gifts and foundations grants, we have begun working with John Wirfs of Parks and Recreation and the Community Council's Planning Committee to get the renovation underway. We have talked with landscape architect Jim Brewer about the design and construction of the courts. We hope the project can be completed by early summer. In order to keep the

EDITORIAL

Spring cleaning

Spring cleaning. Those words doubtless resonate differently in Minnesota than they do in some other parts of the country. The more winter one has to deal with, the more accumulated grime there is to contend with when it finally melts. Spring cleaning has many potential outlets for their purifying energies, several of which are described in this issue.

Cleancups are scheduled this month for University Avenue, Kaat Park and several other areas. These events depend on volunteers who, to put it bluntly, are willing to pick up after others. We note it for the ongoing human carelessness, mass-cleanup of streets, highways, parks and other public spaces—would not be necessary.

Who should people who pick up after themselves have to spend a morning or an afternoon picking up after those who don't? Are the people who volunteer at cleanups helping enable irresponsible behavior? Sending a signal that public spaces have no life with the consequences of their actions?

The problem, of course, is that polluted public spaces, precisely because they are public, offend everyone—including those who contributed nothing to their deterioration. And it may well be that those who blithely leave a trail of trash in their wake leave somewhere else and won't be confronted with the results of their ill manners.

So those of us who regularly drive along University Avenue or by Kaat Pond may feel a greater responsibility to keep those areas clean than do those who are just passing through. Those of us who regularly eat lunch at Hampten Park may be more likely to use the trash cans than someone who makes a one-time visit. But we should be expected to pick up after those visitors who leave their trash on the ground.

It's impossible to answer that question without considering the matter of community standards. By keeping our own neighborhood clean, we are communicating a shared value. We can hope that such a communication will have an effect on others' behaviors. Will it?

Malcolm Gladwell thinks it can. In his book, "The Tipping Point," Gladwell suggests that behavioral ideas and messages spread just like viruses do," he says. Moreover, positive behaviors can be just as contagious as negative ones.

Gladwell stresses the importance of context, what other have called the "broken windows" theory. If a window is broken and left unattended, people walking by will conclude that no one cares and no one is in charge. Soon, more windows will be broken, and the sense of anarchy will spread from the building to the street on which it faces, sending a signal that anything goes.

How does a community signal that not everything goes? One way is by picking up the trash. ■
Fear, anger and grief are becoming common emotions in our schools. These feelings grow each time there is news about violence that takes lives, injures, and terrifies children, their families and communities around the nation. Whether the news that inspires these feelings is distant or close to home, the bad news hits hard and hits deeply.

As parents we try hard to create safe and happy families, send our children to safe and happy schools and create a community that is safe and happy. A community newspaper is a place where we like to write about the good news in our neighborhoods. When we feature students and schools, we focus on performers, winners and high achievers. That is an important and supportive role. But it is also important to concern ourselves as a community with those students who, whatever their achievements, struggle to feel loved and to enjoy life.

In educational jargon these children are called "at risk." What are the risks? Suicide, early sexual behavior, teenage pregnancy, drug and alcohol abuse, bullying and harassment, and violence involving guns. It is both humane and wise to attend to the needs of all children in an effort to minimize these risks.

Parents at a recent PTA meeting at Parkview Center School in Roselle asked the question, "What can we do?" Judith Voight, a student assistance coordinator for the school district, had been part of a team of grief counselors present at the school where 11 of the 13 students who died in the wake of an eighth grader's suicide. Voight tried to provide some answers.

Referring to a recent study of adolescent behavior, Voight said that one of the most important ways to protect our children is simple: Limit their access to guns, alcohol, tobacco and other drugs. The study argued that easy access to guns increases the risk of violence against others as well as increasing suicide attempts among young people. It advised parents, teachers, and all of us who are responsible for children to educate them about the dangers of firearms. Young people are also more likely to use and abuse alcohol, tobacco and drugs when they have easy access to those substances. "Make it clear," the study admonished, "what the physical, mental, spiritual and emotional consequences of drug use are." The evidence shows that young people who witness or experience violence are at greater risk for committing violence against others. Our children need safe environments where they are not exposed to violence, and the first safe place for young people to be the home. But schools are also important environments for preventing violence.

Research has found fewer reports of risky behavior when schools promote "civility." Civility occurs when students perceive that others are friendly, behave well in hallways and lunchrooms, and do not threaten or insult other students. Students who are bullied are more likely to turn to alcohol and drugs, engage in delinquent behavior, or report suicidal thinking and attempts.

Parents can increase their children's sense of belonging in a school community by themselves being involved. Parents play an important role by attending conferences and PTA meetings or by participating in school activities with their children. There are many excellent after-school and parent-support programs, such as those offered through community education programs.

The larger community can help by promoting tolerance, respect and inclusivity.

questioned why the current configuration could not be maintained. Falk reiterated DPW's position: "We have a mandate to make new construction conform to city standards."

Falk pressed residents to state a preference, but they refused. "Neither option is acceptable," said Richard Hahnen, of 2290 Commonwealth. Falk replied that she needed a decision that night and, in the absence of one by residents, would proceed based on her sense of the majority opinion. "You are always free to take this up with your City Council Member," she said.

A fundamental disagreement between the city and residents also emerged when the next step was discussed: Scudder between Blake and Como. Lamberti Kinkin, of 2257 Scudder, presented Falk with a written summary of reasons his neighbors were unanimously in favor of maintaining their street as is: 27 feet wide with two-way traffic and parking on both sides.

Bataglis responded that such a configuration would restrict access for emergency vehicles. "The Fire Department wants to increase street widths whenever possible," he said. "Reduced access means longer response times."

Some Scudder residents spoke of their fears that a wider traffic lane would increase speeds on their street. Several asserted that other cities have used narrower streets as a traffic-calming device.

"The combination of narrow, curving streets, medians, trees and unusual elevations make this a particularly challenging project."

— Lisa Falk

Other streets in the project area also generated lively discussion. Several people on Euclid between Carter and Hillside complained about truck traffic on their street and asked if

Join the 2001 Kasota Pond spring cleanup

St. Anthony Park residents Otto Gudekunst and Joe Christoperson have encountered all kinds of weather in the years they’ve helped with the Kasota Pond cleanup. Last year they created a bit of drama by finding a safe containing money that had been stolen from a Minneapolis business.

by Karly Edman

This year’s Kasota Pond cleanup is set for Saturday, April 28 from 9 a.m.-2 p.m. This date will be after the winter’s snowmelt (hopefully) and before migrating birds begin building their nests. Volunteers are always welcome, even if you can stay only for an hour or two. All cleanup supplies will be furnished, and hot and cold drinks and other refreshments will also be provided to volunteers.

Previous cleanups have resulted in many tons of trash being removed from the area. About four years ago a large sofa, easy chair, a dining room table, tents and large hags of garbage were removed from two hobo camps at the south end of the pond. Two years ago several tons of construction debris were removed from the west pond, placed there by an unknown builder. Last year, a safe containing several hundred soggy dollar bills and several crayfish was pulled out of the west pond.

wildlife (aquatic and terrestrial), soils and other habitat data. Sampling will take place on public lands around Kasota and Serria ponds, along Highway 280, the U of M transitway, neighborhood parks and other neighborhood green spaces. Supplies will be provided through the DNR Metro Greenways Grant and local donations. A team of natural resources professionals who live in St. Anthony Park are guiding neighborhood volunteers.

SAPCC is currently organizing volunteers to assist with spring sampling activities. It is not necessary to have a background in science to participate in this project—volunteers of all ages and backgrounds are welcome.

SAPCC is also hoping to collaborate with local schools in this effort.

Be on the lookout for flyers and notices in the Bugle about other upcoming educational events sponsored by the SAPCC Metro Greenways project. Contact Heather Mager-Hill at SAPCC (649-5992) for details or to participate in any of these events. All events are free to St. Anthony Park residents.

Old water tower comes down

St. Anthony Park will soon have a new water tower at Cleveland and Dudley. Demolition of the old tower began in mid-February, with completion of the new one due in April. In the meantime, water will be pumped from the Fairgrounds tower to the pumping station on Raymond near Como so that the area will maintain a constant supply of water. The new tank will be the same height as the old one but will be located about 13 feet closer to Cleveland Ave. Landscaping will include white spruce trees, flowering crab, and rose bushes. Construction of the tower is under the auspices of the St. Paul Regional Water Services. Project Engineer Isaac Averbich met three times with neighbors living adjacent to the tower to agree on design, siting, and landscaping details.

Lincolnshire Larks reinvents itself again
March 31 celebration is send-off for proprietors Susan and Colin McAllister

by Dave Hedly

Susan McAllister is the first to admit it. Although she has an MBA in finance and banking, once wedded in market research and strategic planning, has taught courses in entrepreneurship, and formerly served as the Bugle's business manager, Lincolnshire Larks, Ltd., the St. Anthony Park enterprise the co-owners with her husband, Colin, has never had much of a business plan. What began as a one-time local festival of things English, augmented by McAllister-led tours of the English countryside, has evolved into an agglomeration that in every respect but size could be the envy of any multinational conglomerate. But the journey was anything but well-planned.

Lincolnshire Larks began as an outgrowth of the McAllisters' 1997/98 stay in England, where Colin grew up. When they returned to St. Anthony Park, they brought along some English handicrafts and antiques they had purchased during their year in Lincolnshire. The couple planned to sell these at a festival that would help publicize a touring company they wanted to start.

The two-day December 1998 event drew 500 people, which led the McAllisters to believe that there might be enough local interest to support a permanent shop. Once ensconced in their basement Milton Square quarters at 2262 Como Avenue, Susan and Colin began hosting a variety of English-themed events: teas, lectures and celebrations of English holidays. Meanwhile, they also began leading tours to England. The first trips, which the McAllisters call "larks," focused on English history and geography, but other interesting themes began to emerge. Soon there was an antiques shoppers' lark and a ramblers' lark and a truffle tea ladies' lark. Today the McAllisters also sponsor week-long larks for gardeners, knitters, soccer enthusiasts and ghost hunters—and the list keeps growing.

"When people heard we were leaving, we had all kinds of offers to keep the shop and the tours going."

— Colin McAllister

But just when it seemed Lincolnshire Larks had settled on an identity, the McAllisters pulled the tablecloth out from under their china, tea, scones, trifle cakes and shortbread. On March 31, Lincolnshire Larks hosts a festival that will serve as a send-off for Susan, Colin and their two children, Maddy (12) and Cameron (9). In April the family boards a plane for England, where they will become residents rather than visitors.

The McAllisters will live in the village of Domington on Bain, located in the rolling hills (Wolds) of northern Lincolnshire, which Colin describes as England's "forgotten country." Maddie and Cameron will start school, and Susan and Colin will continue to organize larks.

Meanwhile, the Milton Square shop will remain, though next door to their previous location. Lincolnshire Larks will occupy the space that formerly housed Ross Mundel, the flower and gift shop that recently moved to another part of Milton Square. The new store will feature English handicrafts oriented to the various larks, as well as a few antiques, and will serve as a tour office. It will be jointly managed by several English enthusiasts the McAllisters have gotten to know by operating Lincolnshire Larks.

"When people heard we were leaving, we had all kinds of volunteers to keep the shop and the tours going," says Colin. Characteristically, the decision to maintain a Milton Square presence emerged from the clutter, just as the original idea had two and a half years earlier. The March 31 event, then, marks the end of one era and the beginning of another. Festivities run from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and will include tea and scones, musicians, trivia and tea-tasting contests, and talks on Lincolnshire history, the RAF and ghost hunting. The event is free and open to all. This last festival is an opportunity for us to show our appreciation to our friends and customers," says Susan. "The support from this neighborhood has meant so much to us, and we hope the March 31 celebration will help express that."

When you're looking for your new home, you only need to make one call.

Music in the Park Series ends 2001 season

Three concerts in April will conclude the 22nd season of Music in the Park Series.

On Sunday, April 8 at 4 p.m., cellist David Finkel and pianist Wu Han will present a program featuring works by Beethoven, Rachmaninov and Schumann. They will also perform Bruce Adolphe’s “Coprade,” which was composed for their anniversary.

The concert will be held at St. Anthony Park United Church of Christ, 2129 Commonwealth Ave. The audience is invited to a pre-concert conversation with the performers at 3:30 p.m.

Finkel, cellist with the Emerson Quartet, and Wu Han, an active soloist, are partners in marriage and music. They have appeared in a variety of music festivals and have performed with orchestras in Canada, the United States and Europe.

Their musical activities include the recent launch of ArseneLed, the first musician-directed and Internet-based recording company.

On April 20, the last of three Family Concerts will take place at 6:15 and 7:30 p.m. at St. Matthew’s Episcopal Church, 2136 Carter Ave. Gaet Hong, pipa (Chinese lute) and dancer Ranee Ramayawan will present a program of music and dance for all ages.

Sharing their Chinese and Indian cultures, these artists celebrate the union of spring through the rhythms of dance, the expressive music of the Chinese lute and the beauty of poetry.

Family concerts in 2001 were funded by grants from Target, the St. Anthony Park Community Foundation, and the Lilian Wright and C. Emil Berglund Foundation.

On Sunday, April 29 at 7 p.m., the St. Petersburg String Quartet will perform an all-Russian program at St. Anthony Park United Church of Christ.

Tickets for all Music in the Park concerts may be reserved by calling 645-5699.

A memorial service was held on February 20 at Lyngblomsten Chapel.

E. W. Ziebarth

E. W. Ziebarth, former Dean of Liberal Arts and Interim President of the University of Minnesota, died at age 90 on February 27, 2001. He lived for many years on Fullam Street and later at 1666 Coffman in University Grove.

Dr. Ziebarth was on the University faculty for more than 40 years. He was Dean of Liberal Arts from 1953 to 1962 and was Interim President in 1974. He was also a veteran broadcaster and won two Peabody Awards for broadcasting, one in 1960 for analysis of international affairs, the other in 1972 for a series of his own open-heart surgery.

He grew up in Madison, Wisconsin, earned his B.A. and M.A. at the University of Wisconsin there, and obtained his Ph.D. at the University of Minnesota.

In the broadcasting field, Dr. Ziebarth worked as a news analyst, foreign correspondent and production manager for WCCO. His territory included the Middle East, Japan, China and the Soviet Union. He also helped set up KCTCA Educational Television at the University. He was a foreign correspondent for CBS News, where he worked with Edward R. Murrow on several assignments. He was the only correspondent to interview the prime minister of Iran during the Russo-Iranian crisis, just before the prime minister's assassination. His radio program "This I Believe" was broadcast overseas in six languages by the Voice of America.

His career at the University of Minnesota began in 1936 in the Department of Speech, where he was a Speech-Communication professor. He was in Who's Who in America for his work both in broadcasting and academics. He was chair of the National Commission on Arts and Sciences and served on the Board of Trustees of Macalester College and the Board of the Midwest Education Network.

Preceded in death by his wife, Betty; his parents; and a brother, he is survived by his son, John (Linda) Ziebarth of Eden Prairie, and four grandchildren. A service was held on March 2 at St. Matthew's Episcopal Church.
