Raymond Ave. is mixed bag

by Dave Healy

Contrary to what you may have heard in some quarters, not everybody loves Raymond.

The venerable avenue that joins south and north St. Anthony Park has taken its lumps over the years. Local residents have complained about speeding and truck traffic, many arguing that the road needs more restrictions.

Raymond is problematic because of its location and design. As the only direct route from University Avenue to Energy Park Drive and Como Avenue, Raymond is heavily traveled.

And because of light industry to the east of Raymond on both sides of the Burlington Northern railroad tracks, the avenue draws a fair number of trucks.

Raymond's status as a traffic artery is complicated by its design. The street curves twice—just before Hampden Avenue and just after Bayless Avenue for southbound traffic—limiting visibility at Hampden and making the crosswalk there a hazardous experience for pedestrians.

Department of Public Works employee Matt Stone removes loose paint from the railing of the Raymond Avenue bridge. The railing is being repainted, a project DPW hopes to finish before winter.

Although many south St. Anthony Park residents think there is too much traffic on Raymond, two years ago steps were taken to keep more cars on Raymond by making it more difficult for traffic to turn onto Bayless Place, just south of Hampden, as a shortcut to Territorial Road. Bayless Place was closed, forcing traffic to enter or exit Raymond at Bayless Avenue, just south of Bayless Place—presumably a less attractive option for motorists.

That change was one of several recommendations by the Cromwell/Bayless Task Force, a group of neighborhood residents, business owners and District 12 Community Council members that began meeting in 2000. In 2002, temporary asphalt curbs were installed that rendered Bayless Place inaccessible, and other traffic calming measures were instituted in the immediate area.

This fall, those temporary constructions have been made

I've got one word for you, citizen: plastics

by Dave Healy

Eureka Recycling has announced two changes in St. Paul's curbside recycling program.

Previously, recyclers sorted materials into five categories (cans, glass, newspaper, mixed paper and cardboard) for twice-monthly curbside pickup. Under the new system, pickup dates will remain the same, but now those materials need be sorted into only two categories: paper/cardboard, and bottles/cans.

In addition, a new material has been added to the list of what is picked up by Eureka's recycling trucks: plastic bottles. The changes are effective with the October 25 pickup in Como Park and the October 27 pickup in St. Anthony Park.

Dianna Kennedy of Eureka Recycling said that the changes grew out of a 14-month study in 2001-2002 in which St. Paul residents helped determine the best way to improve the recycling program. The results of that study led to several recommendations designed to increase participation and the amount of materials recycled while maintaining cost effectiveness and ease of use.

Eureka Recycling, an outgrowth of the St. Paul Neighborhood Energy Consortium, is a nonprofit corporation that manages St. Paul's recycling program. Eureka has its own fleet of biodiesel trucks and a processing center where recyclable materials are collected and processed.

St. Paul's recycling program is funded by a $24 annual fee for each household in the city.

Kennedy said that in order for plastics collection to be successful, cooperation from recyclers is important. "We're excited to be able to add plastics to our collection program," she said, "but in order for the process to work well, we really need people's help in making it run smoothly and efficiently."

Kennedy said that recyclers can help by following these directions:

1. Put out at the curb only bottles with necks that are marked on the bottom with a 1 or 2. These include most milk, water and detergent bottles. Tubs and trays, even if they're marked with a 1 or 2, are made with different additives that make them incompatible with bottle recycling. These should be put in the trash.

2. Flatten the bottles. A recycling bin holds twice as many flattened bottles as unflattened ones. Flattened bottles mean fewer truck trips to the recycling center, resulting in greater efficiency and lower costs.

3. Put flattened bottles in recycling bins, not in plastic bags. If you need additional bins, call the Community Council office: Como Park, 644-3889; St. Anthony Park, 649-5992.

4. Don't put out plastic bottles that have been used to dispose of needles.

For more information about recycling, visit Eureka's Web site (www.eurekarecycling.org) or call their recycling hotline (222-7678).

Local soloist to appear with Metropolitan Symphony

by Michelle Christianson

When Lisa Habeck was interviewed about her upcoming performance of Gorecki's Symphony No. 3 (Opus 36), she knew that she had another commitment that day but couldn't quite remember what it was.

Oh, yes—it was a seven-hour recording session. That's not the type of thing that usually slips one's mind, unless you have the kind of hectic schedule that is par for the course for Habeck.

Part of what makes life so busy for St. Anthony Park resident Habeck is that she is not only a high-demand singer, doing both solo and ensemble work, but she is also a wife and mother of two small girls, ages four and seven, plus two older stepsons.

The tension between her personal and professional lives requires careful scheduling, discipline and focus—as well as a good calendar and a supportive husband (Frank, who is also a singer) to keep everything on track.

And if she doesn't have an hour to practice, she'll sandwich in 45 minutes when she's able.

Habeck knows that many singers choose not to have families because of the time commitment, but though she wouldn't give up singing for anything, she also wouldn't give up her family for any venue—even the Metropolitan Opera.

She believes that her singing has "more soul, more heart" because she brings the experiences of her life into her music.

The Gorecki piece is especially meaningful for Habeck because it speaks of a mother's loss.

The first movement is a 15th-century lament of the Virgin Mary at the crucifixion, the second is a prayer of a young woman telling her death (discovered on the wall of a cell in the basement of a Gestapo prison) and the third is a folk song in which a mother grieves her son's death in an uprising.

The orchestra has long, sustained lines, as does the soloist in all three movements.

Because the words are in Polish, Habeck worked with Mietek Glowka, a Polish émigré who lives in the neighborhood. She says that the "poetry of the language flows off your tongue—it is a beautiful language."

The sustained line, the language and the intermittent nature of the vocal part are challenges that require great focus.

Habeck says it is a "sad but hopeful" work that has a hypnotic quality, the voice intertwining with the orchestra throughout.

The symphony, often called the "Symphony of Sorrows," is part of a Metropolitan Symphony Orchestra concert at St. Anthony Park Lutheran Church on November 14.

The orchestra, which has previously performed in this venue three times and to a

Music classes offered for children

by Anne Holtzman

She's been playing flute and piano since childhood, and caring for two sets of twins in recent years. Now musician and nanny Laura Dillon is combining her twin vocations and launching early childhood music classes in St. Anthony Park this winter.

The new passion began when she attended classes in the Musik Garten curriculum with her first pair of charges several years ago.

"I loved it, and they loved it, and we used the music at home," she said. "One day the light bulb came on and I said, 'I can do this.'"

Dillon studied the curriculum, attended training sessions with Roseville Musik Garten teacher Marlene Lee and began getting in touch with parents to organize her first term of "Hearplay" classes.

Dillon will offer free demonstration classes at St. Anthony Park Methodist Church at 10:30 a.m. Saturday, December 4, and at

Falcon Heights

The City Council is planning to arrange a special meeting in conjunction with Kids Voting, a community service project of Roseville Rotary Club. The meeting will be held at Falcon Heights Elementary School during the school day.

Some teachers have expressed an interest in having their classes participate. The council hopes to make the meeting interactive and have time for questions. This would not replace the regular City Council meeting.

As of September 22, over half of the units in the senior building at the southeast corner of Snelling and Larpenteur had been leased. The multi-family building is scheduled for completion in June, 2005.

Lauderdale

The city of Lauderdale has received a $20,000 grant through the Metropolitan Council Livable Communities program to study the feasibility of redevelopment south of Larpenteur Avenue, between Eustis and Carl Streets.

The goal of targeting this area for redevelopment dates back to the adoption of the Lauderdale Comprehensive Plan in 1997. As part of the project, the city will conduct market and financial feasibility studies for the area.

The city also plans to host neighborhood informational meetings and open houses to gain feedback from residents and stakeholders. Look for further information on the city Web site (www.ci.lauderdale.mn.us) and in upcoming newsletters.

St. Anthony Park

The Community Council coordinated with the Minnesota Council of Churches to donate all the reusable items brought to the neighborhood cleanup this year. The recipients were Hmong refugees.

Nina Axelson, St. Anthony Park's new community organizer, led a new voter registration effort at Hampden Square Apartments and Brewster Street Apartments.

Wellington Management is in the midst of a new housing development, Metro Lofts, on University Avenue adjacent to the Emerald Gardens housing project. The target population is young adults without children and empty nesters. For more information, visit www.themetrolofts.com.

standing-room only house last year, has a mission to "perform outstanding symphony concerts for diverse audiences throughout the Twin Cities" in convenient neighborhood locations.

The concerts are free of charge, with only a free-will offering taken at the door. These policies have allowed many people who wouldn't ordinarily attend such concerts to experience them in their own neighborhoods.

Conductor Bill Schrickel planned the beginning of the concert to contrast with the Gorecki piece.

There is a lively Bach double concerto for violin and oboe followed by Beethoven's Symphony No. 8, arguably his most humorous work. (It even includes a second movement tribute to the metronome, which had just been invented.) These two lighter works balance the somber mood of the Gorecki symphony.

Habeck, who grew up in southwestern Minnesota and attended Bemidji State University, has sung all her life.

She had her first professional job when she was 21 as a church soloist and section leader, plus she toured with Opera New England.

She has sung with many early music groups, including Ex Machina. She also performed with the St. Paul Chamber Orchestra (Baroque Series), as a member of the Plymouth Music Series ensemble group and as Amahl (for four years) in "Amahl and the Night Visitors."

She is currently co-director of and singer in Virgin Ground, a women's group that presents new and medieval music, and she also sings with the Ensemble of the North, a 12-voice choir that performs three or four times a year.

In addition, Habeck has private voice students and sings often at her church.

It's a testament to her organizational skills that she keeps everything straight.

"Desire & Politics in Our Life"

In Paul's Christian witness and letters there is a relationship between love and democracy. Paul's theology and ecclesiology reflects a convergence of ancient love poetry and ancient political theory. We'll explore the importance of desire and politics for our understanding of Paul, of his understanding of God and the church, or our own religious and political life.

All guests at the lecture will be invited to vote on which mission project we will disperse the remaining monies to from the Companions in the Spirit budget (from the years the three churches formally worshipped together).

Tipping towards foot power

The trouble with roads is that people drive on them.

And of course they drive too fast, they don't signal, they run red lights, they don't pay attention and in general they make life miserable for the rest of us.

So who are the rest of us? Well, it's the people who live here. We're sensible, law-abiding folks. The problem is outsiders. Why don't they use their own roads? Why do they have to drive through our neighborhood anyway?

The trouble with roads is that people use them to get from one place to another, and your place might be on the way. The trouble with roads is that what makes them convenient for you also makes them convenient for others.

Take Raymond Avenue, for example. If you want to move between University Avenue and Energy Park Drive or Como Avenue, and if you find yourself somewhere east of Highway 280 and west of Snelling Avenue, Raymond is your best bet. In fact, it's your only bet.

But Raymond is only one problem area among many. At certain times of day, Como is terrible, or Snelling, or Larpenteur, or . . . Popular routes become congested, putting locals in a Yogi Berra mood: That street is so crowded that nobody drives it.

What's the solution to congestion? One obvious improvement is to reduce the number of vehicles on the road. That can be accomplished in two ways: more people per motor vehicle (buses, car pools) or more people not in motor vehicles at all (bicyclists, pedestrians, telecommuters).

But bicyclists still have to use roads, and pedestrians still have to cross them. So as long as roads are perilous for would-be walkers or bike riders, people inclined to use their legs to get around face a huge disincentive to abandon their cars and trucks.

What nondrivers need is a critical mass. They achieve it occasionally—for example, after a sporting event at a place like the Metrodome, when people leaving the stadium can rely on their sheer numbers to walk in the street, ignore traffic signals and in general behave as if they owned the road. But that state of affairs is short-lived, because most of those people are walking to a parking lot to retrieve their cars.

In certain places, critical mass is more enduring. Around some urban college campuses—one thinks of UW-Madison, for example—bicyclists have won right of way on city streets. In some cities, motorists consistently yield to pedestrians.

What nondrivers need is what author Malcolm Gladwell calls a "tipping point." That's when the balance shifts and what was hitherto a minor phenomenon becomes a major force, or vice versa.

Things can tip in either direction, but once something has tipped, it's hard to tip back. Leave graffiti on a wall long enough and the wall will fill up. Then it's a lot harder to clean.

Once the earth belonged to walkers. At some point, things tipped in favor of vehicles. What would it take to tip things back?

Arts fundraiser a success

On Sunday, September 19, a group of St. Anthony Park Elementary School parents calling themselves the Arts Initiative hosted a fundraiser that netted almost $6,000 for the school's art residency program.

The Art Sale and Wine Gala was held at Café Biaggio on University Avenue and featured the works of local artists. About 115 people attended the event.

Our school's art enrichment program provides a week-long art or poetry residency to all students in grades 1-6. It also provides funds to bring performances into the school.

The art residency program began in 1999 and has expanded to include all grades. We've had poets, storytellers, In the Heart of the Beast Puppet and Mask Theater, Steppingstone Theater, and dancers visit the school and work with our students.

In past years we have received grants from the St. Anthony Park Community Foundation and the St. Anthony Park Association to fund the program. This year, several parents came up with the idea of a fundraiser that would be held outside the school.

We wanted to launch something that could make this program self-sustaining, and we wanted to tap the community at large.

We know that parents at the school are often overwhelmed by the number of fundraisers that happen throughout the year. For our first year, it was a great success. Many people attended who are not parents at the school, but simply art and community supporters.

We have a list of people we need to thank for making this a fun and successful event. First, special thanks to Michael Keyes, who serenaded the art buyers with his classical guitar. We also thank Carter Avenue Frame Shop for donating four $50 framing certificates toward the event, which we raffled off, and Bibelot for loaning us jewelry stands to display some of the art.

Many of the artists who participated donated their work toward this project. Thanks to the following artists: Connee Mayeron, Rick Pope, Fuller Cowles, Steve Hodder, Wiley Hoard, Curt Hoard, Karen Rue, Joynoele, Wendy Tully, Carmen Gutierrez-Bolger, Patricia Van Cleave, Suzanne Skon, Tomi McClellan, Ken Chin-Purcell, Adama Sow, Tara Christopher-son, Jenny Bell, Kathleen Crook, Courtney Oleen, Steven McCarthy, Jackson Buxton, Chris Causey and Riki Kolbl-Nelson.

Most of all, we thank all of the friends, neighbors and business owners who purchased tickets to the event.

The Arts Initiative is dedicated to bringing a vibrant arts experience to every child at St. Anthony Park school. We hope to hold a fundraiser each year to help continue to fund art residencies, performances and other art programs.

Willems for Soil/Water

I am writing to encourage voters to support Gwen Willems for Ramsey Soil and Water Conservation District Supervisor.

Gwen is a longtime resident of Falcon Heights and will ensure that our district will get the attention it deserves to manage its soil and water needs.

Having worked together professionally and on campaigns, I know Gwen is a strong communicator and an insightful and critical thinker.

She understands the process and is passionate about environmental issues. She has the courage to speak out when necessary and the strength of her convictions to follow through.

You can count on Gwen to ask the tough questions and get the job done. Please vote for Gwen Willems on November 2.

6:30 p.m. Tuesday, December 7, for children ages 0-5 and their parents or other caregivers. Weekly classes for toddlers and preschoolers will begin in January or February.

Dillon said if there's interest, she will also offer a class for babies. All classes will meet in the parlor of St. Anthony Park Methodist Church.

Growing up in Superior, Wisconsin, Dillon dreamed of having a piano. When she was 9, a neighbor moved and left one behind, opening up the musical world for her. In fifth grade she took up the flute, which is still her main instrument.

After a year in college, she "followed love" into the Navy, where she played weekly concerts and military ceremonies as a member of the Naval Academy Ensemble.

Deciding she needed an alternative career, Dillon enrolled at the St. Paul campus of the University of Minnesota for a bachelor's degree in horticulture.

Dillon bought a house in the Longfellow neighborhood of Minneapolis, where she still lives with her daughter, Anne, now 16—also a flautist. There's a Methodist hymnal on the piano in their living room, and a collection of Musik Garten instruments and play props close at hand.

Dillon said she likes having a busy musical life as an amateur. "The word amateur has the same root as the word for love," she pointed out.

She has played in the Seward neighborhood band for 17 years, has sung for five years in a chamber choir called Duodecimi and is a longtime member and music leader at Prospect Park Methodist Church.

Dillon's passion for Musik Garten started with her first job as a nanny—for toddler twins with whom she attended classes at Mt. Olivet Lutheran Church. Those twins outgrew her services, and now she nannies another pair of twins and has taken them to Musik Garten classes, as well.

She said she's "amazed" at the children's responses to particular songs. The curriculum includes a CD for caregivers to use at home, and when she plays the CD, even very young children seem to remember favorite tunes.

One child recently approached her while the CD was playing and stood by Dillon's knee, bouncing up and down. "Okay, we're gonna do a bouncing song," was the clear message, Dillon said.

The benefits of early music education have been widely touted. Dillon emphasizes listening skills, which Musik Garten approaches through a range of sounds both natural and human-made. "Listening is a skill that has almost become a lost art," she said.

Musical instruments are used—mostly shakers and bells—but the curriculum is "vocally based, lots of a capella," Dillon said. Most experts agree that there's little benefit to starting instruments before elementary school, she said, so the curriculum focuses on basic patterns of rhythm and melody. Storytelling, poetry, and dance are incorporated along with songs and recorded music.

Dillon hopes to help educate children, but even more, she hopes that families will come to the classes to share her passion for music.

"I see my job as facilitating, not entertaining or being the expert. Seeing how they respond to music is just such a joy."

For more information about Hearplay classes, contact Laura Dillon at 612-729-6504.

Halloween is only a few days away, and I can barely hold in my excitement. My costume is awesome, especially the mask with glowing red eyes.

Let me tell you about the radical Halloween excitement of our last meeting. We had a costume party and several Halloween-related activities:

- Apple bobbing. Some people were really good, and some were extremely bad. Me? I was one of the people who didn't try.

- Orange carving. Take all the squishy parts out of the orange until you're left with the peel. Then carve the peel like a jack-o-lantern. Pretty weird, huh?

- Decorate a cookie. You decorate a plain sugar cookie with whatever you want until there is simply no more room to decorate. Then, you eat it.

Of course, you must have other food as well. We had cheese puffs and apple juice. That combination was very weird—to me, at least.

We had a costume contest also. I got the scariest costume award but, sadly, no best overall award. Oh well.

All in all, everyone had a time of radicalness. I hope we can have this again next year.

See you on the streets this Halloween!

No bones about it

by Kristi Curry Rogers

Now that you "No bones" readers are up to speed on many of the North American dinosaurs, it's time to turn your attention farther east, to the close relatives of North American dinosaurs that inhabited China and Mongolia during the Age of Dinosaurs.

Dinosaurs from China are the topic of an exciting new exhibit opening at the Science Museum of Minnesota on November 10. "Chinasaurus: The Great Dinosaurs of China" is the largest exhibition of Chinese fossils ever to tour the United States, and features the dinosaurs that thrived millions of years ago in the Gobi Desert, as well as the insects, fish and reptiles that lived in their shadows.

This is a great opportunity to get up close and personal with some of the coolest dinosaurs ever, including the sauropod Mamenchisaurus, who boasts the longest neck ever and grew to be over 60 feet long. Or, if you're more into meat-eaters, you can get a look at the real Velociraptor, perhaps as fearsome as in Jurassic Park but significantly smaller.

From plated dinosaurs like Tuojiangosaurus, to strange horned dinosaurs like Tsintaosaurus, you'll get a first-hand look at some really amazing dinosaur fossils!

In Chinese tradition, dragons have long been regarded as sacred symbols of power, believed to ward off evil spirits and bring happiness, immortality and fertility.

According to legend, dragons lived under the surface of the Earth, and for thousands of years the fossilized bones of dinosaurs and other prehistoric animals were interpreted to be those of dragons. Dinosaur bones were collected and sold as potent ingredients for use in traditional Chinese medicines.

Some historians attribute the first discoveries of dinosaurs in Mongolia's Gobi Desert for the creation of mythic creatures like the griffin—a lion with an eagle's wings and beak, which looks surprisingly similar to the skeletons of small, frilled dinosaurs called Protoceratops.

Scientific study of dinosaurs in China began in the 1930s, and paleontologists continue to make exciting discoveries there. In fact, some of the best evidence linking dinosaurs and birds comes from amazing dinosaur-like birds found in China, as well as meat-eating dinosaurs (including cousins of Tyrannosaurus rex) found with downy feathers covering their bodies.

China is truly a hotbed of paleontological activity, and with the Science Museum's new "Chinasaurus" exhibit, you'll get a great chance to encounter some truly amazing, real dragon bones.

Stay tuned for next month's feature on the updated science behind the Chinese dinosaurs found in "Chinasaurus," and keep those questions coming (krogers@smm.org).

permanent. Concrete curbs and sidewalks have been installed along Raymond. These developments represent the final stage of phase 1 of what has come to be known as the Cromwell-Bayless project. Phase 2 of that project will involve landscaping the former stretch of Bayless Place that has recently been torn up.

But the Cromwell-Bayless project was conceived as a way to impede motorists looking for a shortcut from Raymond to Cromwell. It did nothing to address traffic problems on Raymond itself.

Recent concerns among south St. Anthony Park residents about traffic levels and speed on Raymond Avenue prompted the District 12 Community Council to organize a community meeting, which was held October 20 at the South St. Anthony Recreation Center.

The Birdman of Lauderdale by Clay Christensen

I retired from my day job on October 1. One of the most common questions I got was, "What are you going to do when you retire?" One of my favorite answers was that of my late Aunt Lois: "Nothing! Don't you understand? I'm retiring!"

But my plans have always included doing more bird-watching. So how does one decide where and when to go birdwatching?

A birder has several options, including Web sites, field trips, hotlines, newspaper features and quite possibly his or her own backyard.

The St. Paul Audubon Society (SPAS) Web site (www.saintpaulaudubon.net) includes their field trip calendar. A field trip is a good way to learn more about bird identification and places to go on your own or with a friend, and a good way to meet some really nice people. The leaders are usually volunteers who do this because they love it, and newcomers are always welcome. They are usually free or require a minimal fee.

The next SPAS field trip is the Swans and Eagles trip on Saturday, November 13. It's an all-day trip down the Mississippi River to the La Crescent area and back. There will be stops along the way to see migrating tundra swans and waterfowl, with eagles featured at the first stop, the National Eagle Center in Wabasha. It's being led by Chase Davies, who is a very knowledgeable and entertaining leader. Call her at 633-1663 to find out more and to sign up for the trip.

The Minnesota Ornithologists Union (MOU) Web site (www.mou.mn.org) has a recent sightings section that is updated weekly. It is divided into statewide, Duluth/North Shore and Detroit Lakes/Northwest regions.

There are rare bird hotline numbers for each of these areas. Birders call in their sightings, which are then posted to the Web site and updated on the hotline message. The Web site also lists MOU field trips. Their field trips are often more rigorous, further afield and involve a fee for the leader/guide.

Other resources for ideas of when and where to watch birds include a regular column in Wednesday's Home and Garden section of the Minneapolis Star Tribune. It includes a calendar of coming events related to birds and other aspects of nature.

The Pioneer Press runs its "Spot It" feature in the Sunday Great Outdoors section, which often has a calendar of upcoming events as well.

My favorite place to bird is right where I am, here at my home. My wife and I have a modest 40-foot lot in Lauderdale, but it offers lots of opportunity for birdwatching. I like to check the tree and shrub line along the back alley morning and evening to see what's moving through. It's especially good for warblers and white-throated sparrows.

We have feeders in the front yard, and although many of the migrants don't go to the feeders, they do go for the seed that's spilled on the ground. We have shrubs and other plants for cover that make them feel more comfortable stopping by for a snack.

Our more spectacular sightings include Lincoln's sparrow, white-crowned sparrow, Harris' sparrow and even white-winged crossbills during an invasion a few years ago.

It's fun to keep a list of birds seen in or from your yard and the date. It serves as a reminder in years to come to expect certain birds at a given time.

Home is the handiest place to do birdwatching. Get some feeders going, maybe a birdbath, begin to landscape for wildlife and start paying attention to what's happening in your own backyard.

Need someone to care for your pet while you're away?

Don't put your pet in a cold kennel! I will give them a warm, loving place to stay while you're away on business, on vacation, or just for the day. I have over 30 years experience loving and caring for pets, and a beautiful fenced-in yard for them to play. Must be a smaller animal and get along with other pets. All animals are considered! Inexpensive with great deals for long-term care. References available.

A Foundation of Neighbors

Investing in Our Future

By Julie Causey
Chair
St. Anthony Park Community Foundation

This past month I had the chance to accompany our St. Anthony Park Elementary 6th graders to their annual week-long stay at the Wolfridge Environmental Learning Center on the north shore of Lake Superior. This is my second trip up there with one more to go when my youngest reaches his last year at the elementary school. My husband Chris and I split the week because neither of us wants to miss the incredible richness of this celebration of community and nature.

Julie Causey

Block Nurse Program, Music in the Park Series, the Community Band, and the District 12 Community Council as it continues its progress towards a neighborhood plan. Add to this list some of our newer grantees such as the St. Anthony Park Supervised Study and Tutoring Program and the St. Paul Vocal Forum, and you can see the critical need for identifying, evaluating, and supporting essential neighborhood institutions and programming. Please give generously so we can continue to sustain and strengthen this community for the future.

You will soon receive a letter from us once again offering the chance to make a difference here in St. Anthony Park with a financial contribution. The St. Anthony Park Community Foundation, as a representative cross-section of this neighborhood, fills a critical need for identifying, evaluating, and supporting essential neighborhood institutions and programming. Please give generously so we can continue to sustain and strengthen this community for the future.

The Wolfridge program is an important one for both our elementary school and for Murray Junior High, which combines the environmental learning applications with cultural studies and leadership development. Through your past contributions, the foundation has been able to help our neighborhood schools retain these important enrichment opportunities during a time of seemingly endless budget-tightening. These programs teach values that are close to our hearts here in St. Anthony Park; their impact on all of the students at our neighborhood schools is immeasurable.

We also continue to provide support for our other cherished non-profit organizations such as the

LIVES LIVED

Jennings Mergenthal

Willard Jennings Larken Mergenthal, 72, died Oct. 1, 2004, after a long hospitalization for extreme breathing problems. He was a resident of St. Anthony Park and manager of Luther Seminary Bookstore for nearly 40 years. He retired from the bookstore in 2000 but continued to work part-time almost until his death.

Jennings grew up in Hillsboro, ND, where a farm accident at age 19 caused lifelong paraplegia. He went on to graduate from Concordia College in Moorhead and Luther Seminary.

Jennings was a member of St. Anthony Park Lutheran Church, most active as a faithful teacher of seventh graders, whom he taught around his kitchen table each Sunday since 1986. His teaching style reflected his personal approach to life: thoughtful questions, patient listening and continuous support.

He generously supported individuals and causes working to better the environment, support self-development and improve living and education opportunities for people in need, particularly Native Americans.

Jennings is survived by his wife, Mary, former Bugle editor; daughter Rebekah Mergenthal, now completing her Ph.D. in American history at the University of Chicago; Rebekah's husband, Paul LaKosky (also a Ph.D. candidate in medical anthropology); and their son, Jennings Mergenthal. In addition, two brothers and three sisters survive him. Mary and Jennings' other daughter, Naomi, was killed in a car crash in 1986.

A funeral was held October 4, 2004, at St. Anthony Park

Lutheran Church. He is buried at Roselawn Cemetery.

Elvera M. Skovholt

Elvera M. Skovholt, 95, died October 7, 2004, at Lyngblomsten Care Center. She was a longtime resident of St. Anthony Park.

Elvera was born in St. James, Minnesota, on January 7, 1909, the 4th of 11 surviving children of Friederich and Bertha Meyer.

She was baptized and confirmed at Immanuel Lutheran Church in St. James. She graduated from St. James High School in 1927, and in 1929 moved to Minneapolis with the encouragement of her older sister Hildegard.

In Minneapolis Elvera worked at Red Owl and lived at Mabeth Paige, a residence for single women. During this time mutual friends introduced her to Joe Skovolt, and they were married on September 11, 1937 in a garden at the family home in Mankato.

Elvera was a member of St. Anthony Park Lutheran Church for over 60 years. She was active in church circles, made baked beans for the church's State Fair booth, played in the bowling league and chaired the wedding committee for many years.

Mrs. Skovholt was preceded in death by her husband of 60 years, Joseph Skovholt. She is survived by sons Glen (Anna) and Tom; daughter Jane; grandchildren Sara Skovholt (Daniel Fisher), Karla and Jonathan Skovholt, Rachel Robertson (Travis) and David Skovholt (Iztchel); great grandchildren Hanna and Abigail Robertson, Daniel Banegas, Julius Skovholt and Henry Fisher; brothers Norman Meyer of Carlsbad, NM, Roland Meyer of Peoria, AZ, Paul Meyer of Mankato, MN and Calvin Meyer of Gainesville, FL; special friends of the family, Catherine Juve and Anne Beers; and close friends Stanley Denault and Eloise Salmonen.

A memorial service was held October 12 at St. Anthony Park Lutheran Church, with burial at Sunset Memorial Park.

Children's Home Society & Family Services. Through Befrienders, volunteers, who are older, experienced women, provide support for young, single mothers.

The Befriender program was created in 1989. Research shows that the program helps participants grow in self-confidence, become better parents and take greater control of their lives.

Volunteers commit to a year-long relationship and participate in a 17-hour training session, scheduled for Friday, November 12 from 12:30-9 p.m. and Saturday, November 13 from 8:30 a.m.-5 p.m. at CHFS, 2230 Como Avenue. For application information, contact CHFS Volunteer Services at 225-2323 or befriender@chsm.com.

Audubon Society

Craig Packer, head of the Serengeti Lion Project and distinguished McKnight University Professor at the University of Minnesota, will speak at the November 11 meeting of the St. Paul Audubon Society.

Packer's topic is "The Future of the Lion." The meeting will be held at 7 p.m. at Fairview Community Center, 1910 W. County Road B in Roseville. The event is free and open to the public.
