Care for caregivers

Local groups offer support to caregivers and those coping with the death of a loved one.

By Kristal Ledbrick

One man’s wife was diagnosed with Alzheimer’s six years ago and is now living at a nearby nursing home. He couldn’t be with her on Christmas Day in December because he was suffering from a bad cold, he says. “She didn’t remember, but it was a big deal for me.”

A woman’s husband suffered a stroke nine years ago and was diagnosed with cancer four years after that. “I’m just trying to cope,” she says.

Another man describes a foster child whose health is in serious decline and a family member dealing with cancer. He asks how he can be a good caretaker when he’s “overwhelmed emotionally.”

One by one, the circle of men and women who showed up to the monthly Caregiver Support Group at St. Anthony Park United Church of Christ (SAP UCC) on a bitterly cold morning in January, describe why they are there: Each is taking care of a loved one suffering from a debilitating illness. Each of these caregivers could use some care themselves.

Part of support is simply to be here together,” explains Ted Bowman, an educator, author and trainer, who has helped facilitate the group since it began 10 years ago. We share information of what has worked for us, resources we have found. We aren’t here to fix or advise or rescue. We are here to aid participants in gaining support and confidence for decisions they face.”

The group meets in tandem with the Bereavement Support Group the first Thursday of each month at 10 a.m. at the church, located at 2129 Commonwealth Ave. in St. Anthony Park.

The caregivers’ group began after Pastor Victoria Wilgocki came to the church in 2008. She saw a need for the group and asked Bowman to co-lead a group for members of the church. Word spread quickly to neighbors, and as members of the caregiver group experienced the loss of their loved ones, a new group was formed to support the bereaved. Wilgocki and SAP UCC member Marilyn Benson lead that group, while Bowman, Pam

Farewell to the ash trees

The Nordic ski trails in Como Regional Park are likely to be closed through mid-February as St. Paul Parks and Recreation removes nearly 165 trees on the golf course, including nearly 150 ash trees. St. Paul Forestry will cut down nearby 60 more boulevard ash trees this winter in the Como Park neighborhood. The trees, all of which are infested with emerald ash borer, will include those on Alameda Street from Wheelock Parkway south to Maryland Avenue and from Hoyt Avenue south to Arlington Avenue, Arlington from Victoria Street east to St. Albans Street, Maywood Street from Cottage Avenue south to Wheelock, and Nebraska Avenue near Alameda Street. The city is projected to remove 1,600 boulevard ash trees and 600 parkland ash trees in 2018.

Sow your poetry seeds here

April is National Poetry Month and that means it’s time for all you writers out there to think about entering the Park Bugle’s eighth annual poetry contest. The first-place winner will receive $50 and be published in the April issue of the Bugle. We will also publish the second- and third-place winning entries. All entries will be published online.

Here’s what you need to know:

• We want to read poems that address “cultivation.”
• Poems can take any form you choose.
• The words “cultivate” or “cultivation” do not have to appear in your poem. Use them as inspiration to go in any direction you take you.
• The contest is limited to one entry per person. Entries must be received by Tuesday, March 6.

The contest is open to all Bugle readers. Current Bugle employees, Park Press board members and their families are not eligible to enter. Send poems to Editor, P.O. Box 8126, St. Paul, MN 55108, or to editor@parkbugle.org. The poems will be judged anonymously by a local poet. Get out those pens (or pencils or laptops). On your mark, get set, compose!
The District 10 board approved six areas of action at its Jan. 16 meeting. The district’s Land Use Committee developed the proposals, which are intended to study and limit the impact that State Fair traffic and activities have on the neighborhood.

The changes would include public meetings and surveys. The review also will ask residents if they have experienced problems, and city staff members and elected officials, State Fair management, and a variety of businesses, schools, and other institutions the proposals would:

- Work with businesses and individuals in and near the neighborhood to make their unused parking lots available as shuttle lots or off-street parking, especially on weekdays during the fair. A survey taken during the 2017 fair indicates there could be more than 3,000 unused parking spaces available.
- Explore expanding the number of neighborhood streets in which parking is restricted to one side during the fair. Streets to be considered are those west of Victoria Street between Larpenteur and Nebraska avenues and those between Lexington Parkway and E. Como Boulevard, south of the lake and north of the railroad tracks. Currently parking is restricted to one side of streets during the fair in other parts of the neighborhood, primarily from Hoyt Avenue south and from Chelos Street west.
- Explore expanding the existing Parking Overlay District to add all blocks between Hamline, Larpenteur, Arlington and Larpenteur. This would allow homeowners to use their lawns for parking during the 12 days of the fair. The current Overlay District extends roughly from Hoyt on the north, Chelsea on the east, Wynne Avenue on the south and Winton Street on the west.
- Explore a range of traffic-calming tactics on residential streets during the fair, including temporary street closures and posts to slow down traffic.
- Learn more about the work of the city of St. Paul to implement universal and reliable enforcement of violations during the fair, including welding, poaching and parking.
- Clarify what types of signs and related equipment businesses and institutions can use to promote off-street parking during the fair. You can find more details at www.district10como.org.

Sunday series starts in February District 10 has scheduled its first three Sunday Series presentations for 2018 and they are listed below.

- State Fair History, Part 2 Minnesota State Fair Director Jerry Hammer picks up where he left off last year. He’ll share forgotten photos, facts and stories about the fair from 2010 to today. The free presentation will be held Sunday, Feb. 25, from 1 to 2:30 p.m. in the Newman-Beussen Chapel at Lyndale School, 1415 Almond Ave.
- The Next Step: Pedestrian Safety in St. Paul! Last year, drivers crashed into 192 pedestrians and 99 bicyclists in St. Paul. That’s 24 people a month. Who will it take to stop that? Pay Simet, the city’s new pedestrian safety advocate, and Sgt. Jeremy Ellison, who leads enforcement efforts in the city, will present the program. The free presentation will be held Sunday, March 18, from 1 to 2:30 p.m. Crime Prevention Through Landscape Design. Patty Lammons, the crime-prevention coordinator for the St. Paul Police Department’s Western District, gives hands-on advice about how and where you plant—or don’t—can make your yard an inviting target for burglars (or not). The free presentation will be held Sunday, April 15, from 1 to 2:30 p.m.

Neighborhood heroes Congratulations to the District 10 honorees named to the 2017 St. Paul Neighborhood Honor Roll. Honor roll members were honored at an awards dinner on Jan. 26 at the Minneapolis Club. Here are the honorees from District 10:

Mike Ireland is District 10 board member and chair of the District 10 Environment Committee. He has brought new and interesting projects to the community, and the community projects brought by others. Some of the projects include the Como Seed Library and an expanded Sunday Series, a series of lectures and events designed to bring a variety of topics to the neighborhood (see above). He has worked to improve the organic compost drop-off site located in the district by championing it to the district board and the neighborhood, as well as volunteering his time to maintain it. He helped the Environment Committee develop web-based mapping applications for a number of projects, including mapping of the distinctive trees and the parks within and around Como Park. Ireland is also on the board of the Como Active Citizen Network, a group of residents working to improve Lake Como and the neighborhoods around it. The network helped with the voluntary removal of leaves from the streets to prevent degradation of the lake’s water quality. He was also an active member of Storm Drain Mural Project at Lake Como, which was completed last fall.

Frank P. Liu has lived in St. Paul for four years and has jumped into the community with both feet. He serves the St. Paul community as a volunteer chaplain for St. Paul Police Department. He organized his congregation to serve to officers after they delivered free toys and books to the local children during the fair.

As a neighbor, he has volunteered his time serving at the citywide picnic in the summer, actively participated in Como Curb Cleanups each fall, continually shoveled his neighbor’s sidewalks during winter months and planted hundreds of flowers at the Churchhill Triangle Garden in the spring.

Quentin Nguyen began transforming his front yard shortly after he moved into his home at one of Como’s busiest corners. He has entertained neighbors with topiaries of magical shapes, a large whimsical giraffe named Gabriel, a fence-mounted hanging herb garden growing in recycled plastic 7-Up bottles, a replica of Como Zoo’s resident carpet pythons, Marco and Erwin, and a lawn planted with bright green mounds of Scotch moss.

The Falcon Heights City Council meets the second and fourth Wednesdays of each month at 7 p.m. in Falcon Heights City Hall, 2077 W. Larpenteur Ave. Contact information: 651-758-7200 or visit the website at falconheights.org.

Community visioning meeting set The city of Falcon Heights invites the community to a “community visioning” meeting Monday, Feb. 26, 6-8 p.m., at Falcon Heights City Hall, 2077 W. Larpenteur Ave.

This event will kick off the update to the Falcon Heights Comprehensive Plan, a document that shapes the city through the year 2040. The city is seeking input from residents to help guide the city’s direction for the next two decades. The meeting will be fun and informal. All attendees will have the opportunity to participate as much as they would like in a variety of interactive exercises designed to gather ideas about the future direction for the city. Falcon Heights residents, business owners and businesses are encouraged to attend.

C aregiver support is a big part of C om o Park block nurse program in R oseville— and St. Anthony Park senior service program. Area Seniors (SAPAS), a nonprofit, 87-year-old’s wife was diagnosed with Alzheimer’s four years ago. He’s looking to move them out of their family home and was curious about other’s experiences moving into an assisted-living situation.

“The support comes from the collective of being in a safe, nurturing space with other caregivers,” Bowman says. “It also comes from personal support for challenges or joys that members share. Members help each other by sharing things they are doing, perspectives they have and decisions they have made.” Resources are shared and sometimes guest speakers come to talk about specific matters such as dementia, Parkinson’s or how to ask for help.

As the January group comes to a close, Bowman asks the caregivers what they are doing to take care of themselves. “I go for a walk,” says a woman, who has kept quiet through most of the meeting. “It’s the best thing I can do.”

Daily journal writing, daily scripture reading, meditation, swimming, Samuel Barber’s Adagio for Strings. One man tries to see the sunrise several times a week and often drives to a park in Roseville to do that. Despite the fatigue and isolation that being a caregiver can bring, members do find some levity and positive moments to share: like a canceled trip to the East Coast that week due to a spouse’s health decline. Ends up, the caregiver had dodged the mammoth storm that hit the eastern seaboard that very day.

The Caregiver and Bereavement Support Groups meet the first Thursday of the month from 10 to 11:30 a.m. at St. Anthony Park United Church of Christ. To learn more, call 651-666-7173 or go to www.sapasc.org.

Caregiver support is a big part of Como Park block nurse program

By Jason DeMee

For 30 years, the Como Park Falcon Heights Living-at-Home Block Nurse Program has helped countless seniors stay in their own homes while giving their caregivers a helping hand.

“Block nurse programs speak to the idea that communities can organize to help older adults stay in their homes,” Living at Home Network executive director Mary Quirk said. “These programs stimulate caring for older adults. In all of the 32 neighborhoods that we work with, including Como Park and Falcon Heights, there are people who have banded together to solve the problem.”

Lisa Kane is the executive director of the Como Park Falcon Heights program.

“We offer many services at no cost such as transportation to medical appointments, respite care, companion care, help with chores and running outreach visits,” she said. “Also, we offer some services at an affordable cost, including non-diabetic foot care, housekeeping and home health care arrangement.”

Although seniors are the ones who benefit most from the block nurse program, caregivers are also able to take advantage of the extra assistance.

“Caregiver support is actually a big part of what we do,” Kane said. “Whether it is a spouse or an adult child or even a caring neighbor who is taking care of a senior, we offer a variety of services to give people a break.”

For services to be provided, however, a team of volunteers is needed. Maria Duenweghoer, a registered nurse with the block nurse program, said that with the baby-boomer generation coming into their 70s there is a big awareness of an incoming increase for need. Volunteers of all ages who are willing to commit to a wide variety of amounts of time are all needed, Kane said.

“There is no minimum number of volunteer hours that we require,” she said. “There are plenty of opportunities available. Some people are willing to provide rides to food shelves twice a month, others provide companionship over coffee once a month, and some provide help on a weekly basis. No matter how much time someone has, if they want to volunteer, we can find something for them.”

Kane also said that her volunteer coordinator does an excellent job of matching potential volunteers with seniors who share matching interests.

“We recently had a German-speaking senior and we found a volunteer who also spoke the language,” she said. “Things like that are what make our program so special to these people that we serve.”

Feeling stretched?

The following is a list of recommendations for caregivers or others who are feeling stretched, compiled by Ted Bowman from a variety of sources.

Practice self-care (respite, sleep, good food, body care, exercise).

Routinely engage in nurturing activities (music, nature, things of beauty).

Talk about it; be heard.

Seek recognition (spend time with friends and professionals who give you feedback).

Ask for help.

Multiply choices (be creative; seek creative options).

Make informed decisions with the best information that you have at that time, and then don’t second guess yourself.

Engage in spiritual practices.

Say no to some things so that you can say yes to others.

Maintain the value-based reasons for what you do.

Challenge your negative beliefs and assumptions.

Participate in community activities.

Plan ahead, including advanced directives of all kinds.

Tell us how you feel

What is the role of a community-supported, neighborhood paper in this era of Internet newsfeeds, social media and “fake news”? And how can the Park Bugle best serve the community and the businesses that support it?

We want to hear from our readers. This month, the Bugle’s board of directors has launched a survey to give you a chance to tell us what you think about this nonprofit community resource. The survey is short and you can take it online by going to http://parkbugle.org/survey, or you can turn to page 6 and take the survey on paper, cut it out and mail it to us at Editor, Park Bugle, P.O. Box 8126, St. Paul, MN 55108.

It’s an anonymous survey, but if you’d like to put your name into a drawing for a $50 gift card from Spudy Market please fill out the appropriate form either online or on the paper survey.

We hope the survey will provide us with a deeper understanding of community preferences and help the board determine priorities and develop short-term goals.

The Bugle exists because it is supported entirely by the community—readers and businesses. We are proud of your confidence in us and grateful for the support.

Now it’s your turn: Tell us how you feel.

Deadlines, publishing dates and where to find a Bugle

Want to submit something to the Bugle? Here are the deadlines and publication dates for the next three months:

March issue: The deadline is Wednesday, Feb. 14, and it will be published Tuesday, Feb. 27

April issue: The deadline is Wednesday, March 7, and it will hit the streets Tuesday, March 20.

May issue: The deadline is Wednesday, April 11, and it will be published Tuesday, April 24.

Got a story idea? Give us a holler: editor@parkbugle.org or 651-646-5369. We take traditional mail, too: Park Bugle, P.O. Box 8126, St. Paul, MN 55108.

Missing your Bugle? If your house was missed during our delivery week, we apologize. Here are some spots where you can pick up a Bugle:

A poetic touchdown

The Vikings’ nail-biting Jan. 14 win against the New Orleans Saints at the U.S. Bank Stadium was the muse for this poem, written by Don Stryker, of St. Anthony Park. The poem is based on the 1888 baseball poem “Casey at the Bat” by Ernest Lawrence Thayer.

Case-K at the Bank

By Don Stryker

The outlook wasn’t brilliant for the ‘Sota club that day
The Saints were up by one with less than 20 ticks to play
Then when J. Wright slipped and fell and Rankins got in Case’s face
A pall like silence fell upon the patrois of the place.

A struggling few got up to go in deep despair
The rest pounded on the pristine, people started dancing jigs.
For Case-K, mighty Case-K, had thrown the ball in Diggs’
There was ease in Case’s manner as he stepped into his throw;
There was pride in Case’s bearing as he absorbed a blow.
And when, responding to the cheers, Diggz nimby left his feet,
No Norenman in the crowd could doubt the Saints just might get beat.

The smile is gone from Diggz’ lip, he seeks a playoff win,
But safety Williams nears, and he is set to do him in;
And now Diggz surely sees the ball, it’s seventh-heaven lit,
And now the air is shattered by the force of Williams’ hit.

Somewhere Drew Pearson’s ghost is pushing off on Nathahn Wright,
And somewhere Anderson and Walsh miss every kick wide right,
And somewhere Saints and Giants think of cruel past pain and cackle,
But there is no curse in Mill-Town, Marcus Williams missed the tackle.
We’re so close

We are less than $2,000 away from meeting our $42,000 goal in the Bugle’s 2017-18 fund drive. Thanks to the following Park Bugle readers who have helped the Bugle raise $40,021. This list reflects those who gave through Jan. 19. We will publish more donors in the next issue.

The Bugle relies on tax-deductible donations to help defray the newspaper’s annual operating costs. You can donate online at www.parkbugle.org. Click the green DONATE NOW button on the right side of the page. Or send a check to: Park Bugle, P.O. Box 8126, St. Paul, MN 55108

MLK Day speaker: ‘We should never get comfortable with injustice.’

By Mary Mengenthal

Luther Northwestern Seminary in St. Anthony Park celebrated Martin Luther King Day, Jan. 15, by hearing from King scholar, the Rev. Ken Wheeler from St. Louis, Mo. A large crowd heard his keynote address that morning, word-locked together with Wheeler preaching and shared a community meal provided by the seminary.

Wheeler asked: “Is Martin Luther King safely dead?” and spoke of current threats not only to those in America with black skin, but to all who value freedom and justice. We make King into a mythical figure, taking the edge off his humanity, he said.

Wheeler, who grew up in Vickburg, Miss., told about the Southern apartheid he and King experienced growing up.

“That system was based on the un-making of those with black skin,” he said. “But dreamers and dreams are meant to agitate.”

“I grew up seeing three pictures hanging on the wall of our home: Jesus, John F. Kennedy and Martin Luther King,” he said.

J. Edgar Hoover, the first director of the FBI, considered King the “most dangerous man in America,” Wheeler said, “but Hoover said nothing about the Ku Klux Klan.”

Speaking of today’s social conditions, Wheeler stressed this: “Injustice is never OK. We should not get comfortable with injustice.”

“We have leaders who would drive a wedge between black and white,” Wheeler added. “But this is no time for silence, no time for equivocation. People of courage must be ready to act, to cry out against racism.”

Community Conversations will look at micro-aggressions in February

The Impact and Damage of Micro-Aggressions, the second in a four-part series of Community Conversations for Racial and Ethnic Reconciliation and Understanding, will be held Saturday, Feb. 24, from 2 to 5 p.m. at Hamline United Methodist Church, 1514 Englewood Ave., St. Paul.

Micro-aggressions are everyday slights, snubs or subtle insults that demean or send denigrating messages to groups that are marginalized in society. One of the most pervasive types of micro-aggression is the kind based in race and ethnicity.

Does this sound familiar to you? Have you experienced these kinds of micro-aggressions, against yourself or others? You may even be making these kinds of micro-aggressions toward others, without knowing it. Do you want to learn more about them, including how best to avoid them? You are invited to this discussion.

Space is limited and a free ticket is required. Get your at tinyurl.com/racialforum.

Community Conversations for Racial and Ethnic Reconciliation and Understanding are funded through a grant from the Episcopal Church in St. Anthony Park, Hamline-Midway business Mosaic on a Stick, Hamline University, Concordia Lutheran Seminary and Hamline United Methodist Church.

Conservative commentator Ben Shapiro to speak at St. Paul campus

Ben Shapiro, editor-in-chief of conservative news outlet the Daily Wire, will visit the University of Minnesota’s St. Paul Campus Monday, Feb. 26, as part of his 2018-19 campus tour.

The event, which will be held in the North Star Ballroom in the Student Center, 200 Buford Ave., is being sponsored by Students for a Conservative Voice, a student group that is independent of the university, said Steve Henneberry, communications director for the Office of Student Affairs.

Shapiro’s presentations at other schools have attracted protesters, including one at the University of California, Berkeley last September, where hundreds of protesters gathered and nine arrests were made. Henneberry said the student group organizing Shapiro’s visit to the St. Paul campus is working with the Student Activities Office and the University of Minnesota Police Department “per protocol.”

“We expect more information to be available closer to the event,” he said.

Nearly 200 demonstrators gathered outside Anderson Hall on the east bank of the U of M campus in October, where right-wing commentator Lauren Southern was giving a talk sponsored by Colleagues for a Constructive Tomorrow and Students for a Conservative Voice.

Nearly 80 people attended the talk. Several scuffles broke out outside the hall and police sprayed a chemical irritant into the crowd. One person was arrested for disorderly conduct.—Kristal Loebrick

‘Race, Policing and More’ with Duchess Harris

Professor Duchess Harris of Macalester College will present a new series, “Race, Policing and More,” on Tuesdays in February at Roseville Library, 2180 N. Hamline Ave.

On Feb. 6, she will talk about her recently published book “Race and Policing” and other related topics. On Feb. 13, she’ll present “Serum and Politics,” and on Feb. 20, she’ll present “Freedom of the Press.” Each presentation begins at 1 p.m.

The series is free, and no registration is required.
City Files from 2

community members are all encouraged to attend this hands-on event.

The meeting will have an open house format, meaning you may arrive at any time and stay for as long as you are able. For more information, contact Paul Montero, community development coordinator, 651-792-7613.

Lions Club is offering scholarships
The Falcon Heights/Lauderdale Lions Club is sponsoring two $1,000 college scholarships for 2018 Roseville Area High School graduates. Applicants must be residents of either Lauderdale or Falcon Heights. The scholarship application can be found in Naviance and in the high school career center. Applications are due Tuesday, Feb. 27.

Lauderdale
The Lauderdale City Council meets at the Lauderdale City Hall, 1891 Walnut St. Contact information: 651-792-7650 or visit the website at lauderdale.umn.edu.

Help plan Lauderdale’s future
If you haven’t already, check out the information on Lauderdale’s 2040 Comprehensive Plan at www.lauderdaleplan2040.com, and complete the survey on that site. Then come to the Comprehensive Plan open house Wednesday, March 14, at City Hall, from 6 to 8 p.m. All residents are encouraged to attend.

St. Anthony Park
The District 12 Community Council (SAPCC) meets on the second Thursday of each month at 7 p.m. at Jennings Community Learning Center, 2455 University Ave. The council office is located at 2395 University Ave., Suite 300.

St. Anthony Park Library branch manager Mary Knox shows off the library’s new mosaic, a project that commemorates the library’s 100th anniversary. Community members helped create the piece with the guidance of mosaic artist Lisa Arnold. The mosaic contains 100 flower designs to mark the 100 years. Knox, who joined the staff at the library last summer, hosted a party Jan. 20 to unveil the art and celebrate the library’s centennial one more time. — Kristal Lebrwick

Two goodbyes and one hello
The St. Anthony Park Community Council (SAPCC) said goodbye to executive director Susaya Miranda and operations and outreach coordinator Sarah Goodspeed in January. Miranda, who worked with the board for nearly four years, has accepted a position with the American Heart Association. Goodspeed, who joined the SAPCC staff last July, has accepted a position as youth and policy manager at Climate Generation: A Youth Legacy.

Kathryn Murray
Kathryn Murray has been hired as the new outreach and operations coordinator. A former resident of St. Anthony Park and board member of SAPCC, Murray was one of the founding members of the council’s Equity Committee. She is an art, professional photographer and nonprofit administrator. She enjoys spending time with her husband and daughter, experimenting with alternative photography and natural dyes, gardening and going up north.

2017 Neighborhood Honor Roll
Congratulations to the St. Anthony Park honorees named to the 2017 St. Paul Neighborhood Honor Roll. Honor roll members were celebrated at an awards dinner Jan. 26 at the University of St. Thomas. Here are the honorees from District 12:

Janet Law son has brought art and culture to the neighborhood by developing the Shakespeare in the Park summer theater program for youth. The program started as a simple summer activity for a few teens and has grown into a neighborhood cultural program for dozens of young people, many of whom have not tried theater before. The program includes four outdoor performances.

Shadaria Brown has provided help plan Lauderdale’s future work experience and stability for youth experiencing homelessness. As the woodworking coordinator at Elpis Enterprises, based in St. Anthony Park, she works with dozens of youth to turn reclaimed wood into new products, including bird feeders and nesting boxes. She leads her team members to host workshops for youth to build their own birdhouses through park programs, schools and other outreach events. Elpis prepares youth interns to host workshops in the future.

Anton Jerve has gone above and beyond in modeling best practices for city of St. Paul staff members to support the work of the city’s districts councils. He has been a supportive partner through his role as a senior planner with the Department of Planning and Economic Development, where he intersects with the St. Anthony Park Community Council on a wide range of projects.

He provided valuable feedback as the St. Anthony Park Community Council worked to create its Developer Guidelines and played a key role in helping secure a new 2.6-acre public green space as part of the redevelopment of the Weyerhaeuser lumberyard near Highway 280.

Four Como-Dale-Front Projects get thumbs up from District 10
The District 10 Como Community Council voted Jan. 16 to support four of five infrastructure projects that the city of St. Paul is proposing for the intersection of Como Avenue, Front Avenue and Dale Street.

The projects are part of a $550,000 Commercial Vitality Zone initiative that the St. Paul City Council authorized in 2015.

The District 10 board voted to support:

• Painting green lane extensions in all current locations and painting stop bars ahead of the crosswalk, in hopes of discouraging drivers from encroaching on the crosswalks.

• Painting green lane extensions across the intersection for the Como bike lanes.

• Installing landscaping.

• Moving the bus stop on northbound Dale from in front of the strip mall to the south side of the intersection (in front of John’s Pizza Cafe).

The board did not support a proposal to eliminate the dedicated right-turn lane from southbound Como to westbound Front. That proposal would replace the lane by extending the existing pedestrian island and shortening the crosswalk on Como.

The city’s proposed projects in District 10 include higher visibility striping for crosswalks, painted extensions of the Como Avenue bike lanes through the intersection (green) and eliminating the dedicated right-turn lane from Como onto westbound Front Avenue (blue).

The board’s actions came after it conducted an online survey that received more than 525 responses. Details of the survey results and of proposed infrastructure projects can be found on the District 10 website, district10como.org.

Lauderdale, Falcon Heights administrators part of affordable housing panel discussion
The League of Women Voters of Roseville Area will host a panel of city officials—including the city administrators from Falcon Heights and Lauderdale; Tuesday, Feb. 20, at 6:30 p.m. at Autumn Grove Park Building, 1365 W. Lydia Ave., Roseville.

Speakers will explain the status of their city’s affordable housing goals that are being proposed as they update their comprehensive plans.

Panelists are Heather Buiko, city administrator, Lauderdale; Kari Collins, community development director, Roseville; Joel Hanson, city administrator, Little Canada; DuWayne Konewka, environmental and economic development director, Maplewood; and Sack Thongvanh, city administrator, Falcon Heights.

There will also be a recorded viewing of the program at 9:30 a.m. Wednesday, Feb. 21, at Lutheran Church of the Resurrection, 3115 N. Victoria St., Roseville.

Both events are free and open to the public.
In a cartoon in the Star Tribune in early January, a guy says he’d planted some birdseed a while back and was still waiting for the birds to come up. I thought that was rather clever. Why had I never thought of that? Truth to tell, I’ve had pretty good luck attracting a variety of birds over the years, so I thought I’d share some things I’ve learned.

The one seed that every bird seems to love is black oil sunflower seed. It has a high nut-to-shell ratio. (Did you know there was such a ratio? A small nut-to-shell ratio means there is not as much nutrient as the seed shell suggests?) There’s also a high-oil, high-calorie content that birds value, especially in winter.

Goldfinches really love sunflower seed. I buy a ready-made mix of sunflower/safflower seed. I make a barrier out of cardboard that fits down the middle of the trash can. I put the barrier in and then pour sunflower seed on one side of the barrier, safflower seed on the other. Then I pull out the barrier. Now whenever I need to bring out some more seed mix, I dig a scoop right up the middle where the two seeds meet, getting half of each into the scoop. I then mix the mix into a heavy-duty plastic bag, hold the top closed, and then shake and tumble the bag until I’ve got a fairly even mix.

I run out of my usual peanut mix a few weeks ago and picked up a bag of red-skinned peanuts at a hardware store to tide me over. They haven’t been disappearing very fast. When I got back to Kelsey’s to get some other seed, I confessed to Kraig that I’d timedly switched from his peanuts to the red-skinned ones. “Yah, birds don’t like ‘em,” he said.

I also have a suet feeder, a kind of cage arrangement that holds square suet cakes. Woodpeckers, blue jays, starlings, nuthatches and chickadees like to work on these.

To feed juncos, mourning doves, rabbits, and squirrels, I toss seed on the flat limestone pieces bordering our back garden. This seed comes ready-mixed with cracked corn, white and red millet. It’s a favorite of white-throated sparrows, as well as other sparrows, during their migration.

If you haven’t tried black oil sunflower seeds, get 5 pounds and give them a try. And maybe mix them with 5 pounds of safflower seed. Better seed and better seed choices should mean better birds.

Auto show gained traction in Midway years

In late winter for much of the 1920s, people knew to head to a huge building halfway between St. Paul and Minneapolis, not just to see the latest Pierce-Arrows or Hotchkiss on display, but for style shows, vaudeville acts and to dance to the music of live orchestras.

Yes, the auto show was the place to go and up to 20,000 people a day paid 50 cents to enter the Overland, not just to see the Overland's accessory—or, as one newspaper declared, "the greatest of in kind ever held in the world."

There's no doubt that the Overland was big enough. With nearly a half-million square feet of floor space spread over four floors, it was said to take 27 tons of coal a day to heat the place.

World War I was raging in Europe and, defining the times, the show had a serious emphasis, particularly on the use of motor vehicles to support the war effort. On display, for example, were "many attachments for converting ordinary passenger cars into light farm tractors."

The Overland was unavailable in 1920, and again from 1922 through 1927.

In a given year, there might be 40 brands of cars on display, along with trucks and tractors, and dozens and dozens of exhibitors from the ever-expanding ranks of parts and accessory suppliers. In 1920, Bill Kidder, manager of Curtiss Northwest Airport at Stelling and Larpenteur avenues, displayed an Army surplus Curtiss Jenny trainer, as well as the new Curtiss Oriole five-seater. He boasted at having sold seven planes on the first day of the show.

Franchised dealers from across the region attended and placed orders for cars. It was not uncommon for an automaker to have several hundred dealers in attendance, hosting them at luncheons and dinner banquets during show week.

Members of the public could also buy cars, which started at $300. In 1922, a Rolls-Royce five-passenger touring model sold for $15,000 to a customer who demanded anonymity. Several years later, Minnesota Gov. Theodore Christianson bought a modest sedan for his personal use.

And beyond the show floor, there was a lot more going on in any given year. In 1923, a relatively new communication medium staged live broadcasts (Headline: "Mysteries of Radio Revealed"), including a performance by Tom Brose and His Purple Dervishes Orchestra.

In 1925, there was a "Boulevards of Paris" theme for a fashion show, which claimed to feature $100,000 worth of imported gowns. Newspapers in the region sponsored contestants in a Miss Minnesota Beauty contest. And Eddie Rickenbacker, World War I flying ace-turned-racecar-driver, made several appearances at the Overland. In 1923, he wanted to set the record straight: "Don't let anyone tell you that the automobile business is going to smash because of a shortage of petroleum. There's a lot of talk about the end of the gasoline supply being in sight, but that's a long way off."

In 1927, the second floor of the Overland was decorated in a springtime theme, with singing caged canaries artfully hidden among the cherry blossoms.

But that was the finale at the Overland. Behind the scenes, there was likely discontent on the part of Minneapolis interests right along. You could say what you wanted about this "midway" location, but, let's face it, the show was in St. Paul.
Ku Klux Klan promoted auto show

The 1917 Twin City Auto Show had what in retrospect appears to have been a bizarre sponsor: the Ku Klux Klan.

In that year, prior to its first staging at the Overland Building, the show was held in the Mazda Lamp Building, a light bulb factory on Broadway Street in northeast Minneapolis.

Participants were invited to don Klan robes with “Auto Show” on the back and ride in a parade from the show headquarters to downtown St. Paul where the Winter Carnival was wrapping up.

“Night Riders to Ride in Broad Daylight,” was one headline. “Auto ‘Clansmen’ Ready for Raid” was another.

The Minneapolis police chief not only OK’d the parade but also said he might participate himself.

A post-Civil War alliance of white supremacists in the South, the Klan was experiencing a widespread resurgence at the time, partly inspired by the 1915 film “Birth of a Nation,” originally titled “The Clansman.”

Although there were relatively few African-Americans in Minnesota in that era, Catholics, Jews and “foreigners” were tempting targets for those uneasy about the nation’s impending involvement in World War I, urbanization/industrialization and a perceived assault on “Americanism.”

Members often went about unmasked, and the new Klan tended to portray itself as a fraternal organization, which can clearly be seen in the case of the auto show. Its influence in Minnesota, where there reportedly were more than 50 Klan chapters, peaked in the mid-1920s.

In its second incarnation, the Ku Klux Klan clearly was attempting to broaden its appeal.

As far back as 1923, E.B. Sinnors, executive secretary of the Minneapolis Citizens Municipal Auditorium Committee, said the Overland was ill-suited to the event and his city needed a facility of its own.

Anyway, the Overland no longer was available. Once the No. 2 auto manufacturer to Ford, Willys-Overland was selling off assets and, in 1928, International Harvester purchased the building.

The St. Paul Association, predecessor to the Chamber of Commerce, sponsored its own auto show in 1928 and briefly tried to block Minneapolis from using the Twin City Auto Show name for a competing event in its new auditorium.

So much for intercity cooperation.

Learn to grow winter greens

Learn how to grow fresh salad greens this winter at an indoor gardening workshop Friday, Feb. 23, at 7 p.m. at St. Anthony Park United Church of Christ, 2129 Commonwealth Ave. Lea Olson of Macalester College will lead a hands-on indoor gardening workshop on growing seasoned seeds without expensive pots. You can enjoy delicious salads in 10 days.

First-time and experienced gardeners may discover a new way to grow winter at home. All are welcome to join in the fun. Seeds and supplies will be provided.

Transfiguration Town – ASA: The sponsor of the workshop is asking for a $5 donation to help defray expenses, but no one will be turned away. To participate, rsvp to sustainablefood@transfigurationap.org.

Music in the Park to present Parker Quartet, Family Concerts Series

A February concert by the Parker Quartet and the Music in the Park Series Family Concerts are coming up in St. Anthony Park.

The Grammy Award-winning Parker Quartet will perform with the Music in the Park Series Sunday, Feb. 11, at 4 p.m., at St. Anthony Park United Church of Christ, 2129 Commonwealth Ave.

The quartet made its debut at the Music in the Park Series in 2007. The Parker’s Music in the Park series concert will feature works by Mozart, Ligeti and Bartok.

The Music in the Park Series Family Concerts will open its 28th year Friday, March 16, with a performance by the Minnesota Percussion Trio.

The Lark Quartet will perform Friday, April 13. The performance will include current Lark Quartet members, as well as the original members. Laura Sewell, of St. Anthony Park, founded the quartet and was a member for its first five years. The original members will join the current members to perform a movement from the Mendelssohn Octet, written when the composer was 16 years old.

Copper Street Brass will close the 2018 series on Friday, May 11, performance of “Tools of the Trade: Building Music With Brass.”

Each concert will have two performances, one at 6 p.m. and one at 7:15 p.m. All performances will be held at St. Matthew’s Episcopal Church, 2136 Carter Ave. (entrance on Chelmsford Street), St. Paul.

Participants may choose their own price, suggested at $5-$5. Advance reservations are strongly encouraged and are available for all audience members ages 1 and older. Go to schubert.org/family or call 651-292-3268 for tickets.

ʻJackie Robinson Storyʼ opens Just in time for Black History Month comes the story of an athlete who changed sports—and changed opinions about race—through his strength, courage and tenacity.

“MVP, the Jackie Robinson Story” will be performed by the Youth Performance Co., Feb. 2-18, at the Howard Hunt Performing Arts Center, 1900 Nicollet Ave., Minneapolis. For show times and tickets, call 612-625-9008 or go to youthperformanceco.org. The Youth Performance Co.’s office and rehearsal space is located at 5338 S.E. University Ave., Minneapolis.

A Whale of a Tale Gala The Friends of the Ramsey County Libraries’ fifth annual gala, “A Whale of a Tale,” will be held Saturday, Feb. 24, at Roseville Library, 2180 N. Hamline Ave., 6:30-9:30 p.m. and will feature live music; a silent auction; a live auction; hors d’oeuvres, wine and craft beer; prizes; a costume contest; a photo booth; and more.

All proceeds will benefit the seven branch locations of the Ramsey County Library. This event is open to the public. You can learn more and buy tickets at www.cfifriends.org/gala2018.

A history of the relationship between Russia and the U.S. Historian and public television commentator Nick Hayes will present “Russia and the United States: History of a Relationship” Tuesday, Feb. 27, at 1 p.m. at Roseville Library, 2180 N. Hamline Ave. Hayes will give an overview of the contentious and important links between the two countries.

‘Terrific Toddlers’ looks at life from the perspective of a toddler

By Ned Leebrick-Stryker

It may be called the “terrible twos,” but to author Judy Schumacher, the stage between 12 and 36 months for a child can be “terrific.”

“That is a critical time,” said Schumacher, a resident of St. Anthony Park. “The first three years of life are the most important developmentally because 80 percent of the brain is developed by age 3.”

Schumacher’s new book, “Terrific Toddlers! Simple Solutions, Practical Parenting” explores “positive parenting” techniques and approaches to new and different behaviors in one’s child.

Schumacher, who holds a master’s degree in family education from the University of Minnesota, explained that the inspiration for her book and her career stemmed from a personal place.

“I was raised by two loving, wonderful, positive parents, who encouraged all of their children to be whatever we were,” Schumacher said. “I thought everyone was raised like that.”

But as Schumacher grew, she became more aware of how rare her familial situation was.

“The older I got, the more I read these child-abuse stories,” Schumacher said. “I reached the point where I could not read another abuse story without doing something about it.”

So she began learning about child development and acquired more than 25 years of experience in early childhood and parent education, including being a family education specialist with St. Paul Public Schools. With the release of “Terrific Toddlers!” in 2017, Schumacher hoped that she could encourage parents to be more aware of their tot’s experiences.

“The point of this book was to look at life from the child’s perspective,” Schumacher said. “I wanted to promote empathy and understanding about what it’s really like to be 24 inches tall with everybody telling you exactly what to do, when to do it and why you’re doing it.”

Schumacher hopes that this book can have a positive effect on parents and children alike.

“Everything we put into these children is important in terms of how they feel about themselves,” Schumacher said. “Whether they feel loved and nurtured in the world around them is so critical at this time.”

“Terrific Toddlers!” is available at Micawber’s, in the lower level of Milton Square at Carter and Como avenues in St. Anthony Park, and at LuLa.com, Amazon, and Barnes and Noble.

St. Paul business award nominations open

Nominations are open for the second annual St. Paul Business Awards. Recipients of the awards are named in seven categories and winners will be based on nominations from the community. Last year’s winners were drawn from more than 500 nominations.

The program is part of the Open for Business initiative that began in 2015. A committee of fellow business owners will select six of the winners and the community at large will select the People’s Choice Award. The deadline for nominations is February 24. Anyone can nominate a business, including a customer, employee, or owner. Awards will be presented March 22 at the St. Paul City Council meeting with a reception to follow.

Here are the award categories. All nominees must be located in the city of St. Paul.

• Traditions Award honors a business that has been active in St. Paul for at least 20 years.
• New Kid on the Block Award honors a business that has opened in St. Paul within the last five years.
• Large Business Excellence Award honors a business with at least 50 employees.
• Small Business Excellence Award honors a business with fewer than 50 employees.
• Alice O’Brien Award honors a woman-owned business.
• Reflecting St. Paul Award honors a business owned by a person of color.
• People’s Choice Award honors a business that is recognized for its excellence by St. Paul residents.

For more information and to nominate a business, visit www.stpaul.gov/bizawards.

If you wish to remain in the home and community they love.

To donate to the program go to www.comobnp.org or mail a check to Como Park Falcon Heights Living at Home Block Nurse Program, 1376 Hoyt Ave., St. Paul, MN 55108.

Interested volunteers can contact volunteer coordinator Jennifer Grifull at 651-642-1127.

The block nurse program is funded by county, state and federal dollars, as well as a grant from the Stevens Square Foundation.

“One other important funding source for us is community donations,” Kane said. “We feel really lucky that people feel moved to contribute to the work we do. People give in all dollar amounts, large and small, and it really is amazing how much community support we are blessed with.”

To donate to the program go to www.comobhp.org or mail a check to Como Park Falcon Heights Living at Home Block Nurse Program.

Como debaters return to state

By Eric Erickson

Stephen Boler sat at the podium and rapidly rattled off reasons to support his argument. Jackson Kerr responded with evidence and questions to大力支持 his argument. Jackson Kerr was prepared for cross-examination.

Their opponents in the state debate were claiming and supporting increased federal funding and the United States' claim and support on a frigid Friday evening in January. Boler and Kerr were in their fourth 90-minute debate of the day. They were tired but in their element.

The two Como seniors had been here before. The debating duo qualified for state together as juniors last year as sophomores and qualified for state. Their goal will be to get back there next year as seniors.

Como junior varsity participants included Roselyn Yeboah, Chimamaka Chijioke, Kennedy Hughes-Bester and Vincent Portuese. Novices this year were Roselyn Yeboah, Chimamaka Chijioke, Kennedy Hughes-Bester and Vincent Portuese. The coaches were proud of the risks team members took and the growth the debaters experienced.

“I am most impressed by their enthusiasm for the debates, and their interest in learning about the topics, and especially how they are able to take both sides of an issue and use their evidence to back that side up,” Hansmeier said.

“In the debate rounds they don’t know until right before they start if they are speaking for the affirmative or the negative, and they have to be ready to find evidence for the negative side of whatever argument they are given. This takes a lot of hard work and they have to really be able to take notes and follow what is going on in the debates. I have been lucky to be able to listen to them all debate and it is truly fascinating.”

Coaches at their best are educators who view their sport or activity as an extension of the classroom. Helping students explore an interest, collaborate, develop skills and reach for personal growth are some of the rewarding reasons for the work. And, as Hansmeier alluded, coaches often learn a lot from and are inspired by the kids they coach. That certainly has been the case with Como debate.

As for the state tournament, Boler and Kerr battled against the state’s best in the preliminary rounds. While they enjoyed the challenge of tough competition, their one win in the prelims was not enough to advance.

Neither expected to win a state debate championship, but as freshmen, neither expected to make it to multiple state tournaments either. The improvement that occurred with time on task was an enjoyable journey. What’s done to enhance their educational experience at Como and supplement their learning is best described by the experts.

“I’ve learned so much about public policy and philosophy that most people don’t comprehend or glean from seeing debate on the surface,” Kerr said.

“Debate has been a great way to force us to critically and look at issues from multiple angles,” Boler said.

Longtime Murray teacher retires

By Ned Ledwick-Stryper

After 32 years of teaching and 39 years in one building, Murray Middle School math teacher Mike Laska has retired.

“I have been teaching since 1985,” Laska said. “Between my wife and I and our financial planners, I realized I could [retire] now.”

After receiving a degree in math education from the University of Wisconsin, River Falls, Laska began teaching at Henry Sibley High School in Mendota Heights. Two years later, he moved to St. Paul Public Schools, taking a job at Murray in 1987. But, according to Laska, education was not the career path that he had originally planned on.

“My wife steered me into teaching,” Laska said. “Prior to that, I was looking at an engineering degree.”

But it was an encounter with a young student that convinced him to become a teacher, he said.

“My wife was an elementary education major and student teaching at the time. She needed help teaching a kid in her math class,” Laska said. “After a couple of times and seeing that the kid was actually making some progress and was happy about having me there, I thought, ‘Oh, this is kind of neat.’ ”

His long tenure at Murray allowed him to get to know many families there. “Because of the length of time in one building, you’re working not just with one kid, but you’re working with the brothers and sisters of that kid,” Laska said. “I’m at a point where I was actually teaching children of students, which is a second generation of kids, so that’s kind of bizarre and kind of neat.”

Now that he’s retired, Laska plans to spend a lot of time bicycling and teaching cycling classes.

Ned Ledwick-Stryper is a student in the University of Minnesota School of Journalism and Mass Communication.

Cities 400 Tavern, a new bar and restaurant attached to the Ramada Plaza, 1330 Industrial Boulevard in Minneapolis. Some may recall the run business at 1237 W. Larpenteur Ave., is all about bringing you real, authentic Mexican street food.

A 1930s express train that ran between the Twin Cities and Chicago. While it’s not a “train-themed” restaurant, there are subtle design elements that point to the rails: the bar has a trestle top and the foot rails are made from actual train tracks. The 60-seat private dining room at the back of the restaurant, the Pullman Room, has a sliding bistro door. Shea Design of Minneapolis designed the restaurant.

Brothers Paul and Patrick Durand, owners of Scalzo, are Minnesotans, and they wanted to incorporate a local feel into the venue. Holder said. Hence the focus on partnerships with local breweries and distilleries. On Jan. 30, the tavern hosted an Insight Brewing (2823 E. Hennepin Ave., Minneapolis) paired dinner. Turellus (1620 N.E. Central Ave., Minneapolis) is the featured distiller.

Twin Cities Tavern is open for breakfast at 6:30 a.m. Monday–Thursday, and 7 a.m. on weekends. The restaurant stops serving at 11 p.m. each night. Find out more at TC400tavern.com.

La Familia Tapatia offers authentic Mexican street food

By Rachael Carlson

La Familia Tapatia means “the family from Guadalajara,” and this family-run business at 1217 W. Larpenteur Ave., is all about bringing you real, authentic Mexican street food.

In Mexico, if you are from Guadalajara, you refer to yourself as a “Tapatia,” explained Abe Ponce, co-owner of the new restaurant, which that owns the TC 400 and the hotel late October, serves breakfast, lunch and dinner, and boasts a lively happy hour from 3 to 6 p.m. It has been a big hit, Holder said. She also suggests trying her chocolate-dipped caramels topped with sea salt and chili. Trust me.

Meet the new brews in town

Cousins Tim Kessler and Max Filter opened the taproom at Dual Citizen Brewing Co. (DCBC) Jan. 27. In time to offer Super Bowl celebrants and local beer lovers a new spot to gather.

Housed in the former Loon’s Auto Service at 275 Raymond Ave., DCBC offers 16 taps, an assortment of non-alcoholic beverages, including root beer, Kombucha and cold press coffee, and beef jerky and other snack items from Welcome Meats, a small butcher shop in Welcome, Minn. Naughty Greek, just around the corner on University Avenue, is offering table service. Customers can use their cell phones to order food from the Naughty Greek’s website, and the food will be delivered tableside in the taproom. The brewery will also have food trucks visiting the site.

Kessler and Filter both grew up in St. Paul. They began working on plans to open a brewery a decade ago. Both attended Siebel Institute in Chicago and Doemens Academy in Munich, Germany. Filter spent time in Colorado getting his brewing chops. He was head brewer at Renegade Brewing Co. in Denver.

Hours at DCBC are Tuesday–Thursday, 3–10 p.m.; Friday, 3 p.m.–midnight; Saturday, noon–midnight; and Sunday, noon-8 p.m. Find out more at dualcitizenbrewing.com.—Kristal Leebrick

It’s a short drive to rotisserie meats and wood-fired pizza

By Kristal Leebrick

If you’re hungry for rotisserie-roasted meats, brick-oven pizza and locally brewed craft beers or even a easy Sunday brunch, check out Twin Cities 400 Tavern, a new bar and restaurant attached to the Ramada Plaza, 1330 Industrial Boulevard in Minneapolis. Some may recall the Anchorage, a seafood restaurant that sat in that space for years.

Scalzo Hospitality, the company that owns the TC 400 and the hotel, decided to consult on sales and catering. Restaurant Holdings to consult on sales and catering.

La Familia Tapatia is an ideal place to pick up dinner, talk with the friendly owners and delight in the fact that you didn’t have to travel miles and miles to accidentally stumble upon these delicious tacos. They’re pretty much right in your backyard.

Pro tip: Try one of the slow-cooked pork tacos with chips and guacamole (amazing guacamole). You’ll also want to try their chocolate-dipped caramels topped with sea salt and chili. Trust me.

La Familia Tapatia is open Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday 10 a.m.–4 p.m., Friday and Saturday 10 a.m.–9 p.m., and Sunday, 10 a.m.–5 p.m. It is closed Monday. You can find out more at www.facebook.com/LaFamiliaTapatiaMN, or call 651-253-6175.
Solar rebate program could help save on energy costs

By Jason DeMoe

Just a few short years ago, people wondered whether solar power actually worked. Now, they wonder just how much they can save by using it.

“Solar is actually cheaper than the power you buy from the utility,” said Michael Allen, president of All Energy Solar. “On a per kilowatt hour basis, solar is beating both nuclear power and fossil fuels.”

Allen, a solar customer himself, started All Energy Solar with his brother Brian more than a decade ago and they have been building the St. Paul company ever since. The brothers and their team currently boast industry-leading certifications and full electrical and building licenses. The company is headquartered in the Merriam Park neighborhood.

Allen makes a case for solar energy that few can argue. Potential clients may be able to eliminate their electric bills and find some extra money in their pockets. “In many instances, solar power can save you as much or more than what you are already paying for electricity,” he said. “And with Xcel Energy, we are allowed to install 20 percent more than what your home needs and so you could, essentially, get a rebate check every month.”

One of the main concerns that people have is the upfront cost of installing solar panels on a property. All Energy Solar has recently begun working with finance companies to fund new systems.

“The thing that hinders people hard sometimes is the fact that you are literally buying 25 to 25 years of electricity upfront,” Allen said. “With the finance option, however, the payment can be less than what you would be paying for traditional electric. Also, once you pay it off, you are done and you can start putting some money into your own pocket as opposed to basically renting electricity from Xcel.”

Another concern is whether a home is a good candidate for solar. “More often than not we can find a way to make solar work on almost any property,” he said. “My advice would be to give us a call or go to our website. We can do a quick online assessment of your property and ask a few questions about trees or other obstructions and get a pretty clear picture of what options are available.”

Now may be a good time to look at solar, as Xcel Energy launched its Solar Rewards program Jan. 1, which could save customers 15 to 30 percent off the total cost of their project. The program is first-come, first-served with a limited number of discounts available, so consumers should take advantage of the program, Allen said. The program is available to anyone in the Xcel Energy coverage area. Interested parties can learn more about the rebate program and All Energy Solar at goo.gl/mlTZ7Z.

“Paying a monthly electric bill is something we have gotten used to over the last 20 to 30 years,” Allen said. “I can tell you from experience though that there is no better feeling than having that bill and seeing that you have a credit or that they are cutting you a check. We have customers call all the time wondering about the rebate they are receiving. They can't believe it is real.”

All Energy Solar is located at 1642 Carroll Ave. and can be reached at 1-800-620-3370 or on Facebook at www.facebook.com/AllEnergySolar.

“Energy costs are rising on average 3 to 8 percent a year, but wages are not rising to compensate,” Allen said. “Going solar is betting on costs continuing to rise, and that is a pretty safe bet.”
